It's strikingly beautiful, was the opinion of all members of St. Joseph's Church as they viewed for the first time the newly-decorated church last Sunday morning. Without a doubt, this religious temple doesn't have to take a back seat to any similar edifices in the land, large or small.

I have seen a lot of churches in my time, and I can positively say that Emmitsburg can well be proud of what they have and I extend hearty congratulations to Father Sullivan and his associates and parishioners for a job well done.

Really, it would well be worth your while to visit the church and inspect it—it's positively beautiful!

I get a big kick out of city dwellers who sarcastically remark, "What do you do back there in the sticks?" Well I'm laughing up my sleeve at most of them. For one thing, you can take a drive of any length you desire around here and you'll not be bothered too much with traffic, stoplights, fire engines, ambulances, traffic cops, etc. Another delightful aspect is the peace and serenity we enjoy by living here, in addition to the good clean fresh air. The sincerity of most of our merchants is commendable and all you have to do to enjoy a ball game, races, stage show, football game or what have you, is to jump into the old chariot and in an hour or less you can see the best in the country.

I really feel sorry for our city cousins who remind me of a swarm of bees around a hive. Everybody is in a hurry to get to work, or to any place for that matter. They beat their brains out bucking traffic inch by inch until they are a nervous wreck when they do arrive at their destination, whether it is going to a ball game, ice show, theater or to church—it's always the same! Someone's always after your job and unless you are a top-notch producer you're a "goner." Pressure is the byword in the city and many unscrupulous merchants will take off the hide of many. As far as fresh air is concerned, it's just about out of the question. I could go on and on, but by now I imagine you've got the general idea.

I know you are getting tired of hearing this but I simply must give my usual bit of advice as to holiday driving. Better minds than mine have tried vainly to impress the seriousness of the rising death toll on the highways. As an Emmitsburgian we like you, and we want to see you around enjoying the pleasant surroundings and environment here, so won't you kinda take it easy if you're planning a trip? We all are about the same as far as thinking is concerned. We believe that accidents are only for the other fellow... until we become just a statistic ourselves. If you are going away, how about starting just a few minutes earlier and driving a few miles an hour slower? Take a lady's advice, your family will appreciate it, even if you don't!

The Emmitsburg Municipal Band will be the featured entertainment Wednesday night at the Fairfield Firemen's Carnival. You know the band has come a long way in the few short years it has been in operation and a little moral support by attending the functions for which it has been engaged will go a long way in retaining interest in the organization. See you at Fairfield Wednesday night?

I know of one speeder who won't try that trick again for a spell. As it was told to me, by a friend, a young gent from near Hanover, decided to make a case of it recently in Taneytown when Chief Bob Koontz had stopped him. As the Chief turned his back to pull his summons book out of his cruiser the youth, 20 years old, decided to make his getaway and poured on the gas. A case ensued for about five miles when Chief Bob finally caught him. Here's what the judge laid on him: exceeding 70 miles an hour, $200 and 30 days in jail; reckless driving, $100 and 30 days in jail; failing to stop for a stop sign, $25; failing

Little League Activity Continues

Manager Dick Harner's Giants broke open a tie ball game in the fifth inning by scoring three runs and dropped the Yankees into the cellar of the Emmitsburg Little League Tuesday, with a record of two defeats and no wins. The Giants are third, with a 1-1 log.

Big man for the Giants was T. Fleagle with three for three, including a triple. D. Staley sparked the Giants with brilliant play as the mighty "mite" started one double play after grabbing an outfield fly, and checked another runner on third with an accurate heave to the catcher. The little outfielder, the smallest player in the league, has come up with sensational catches in both Giant games.

Last evening the league's two top teams, the Cards and the Redsox, met for undisputed possession of first place.

THE GLORIOUS FOURTH OF JULY

BLUE RIDGE LEADS IN PEN-MAR CHASE

Blue Ridge Summit maintained its three-game lead in the Pen-Mar Baseball League by pounding out an 11-2 victory at New Windsor last Sunday.

Cashtown and Fairfield moved into a tie for second place by recording victories.

Cashtown triumphed 8-2 at Emmitsburg, breaking a 2-2 deadlock with a pair of runs in the fifth, adding another run in the sixth and putting on the clincher with three tallies in the seventh.

After Cashtown took a 1-0 lead in the top of the third, Emmitsburg came back with a pair in its half and were throttled by Jim Spence who relieved Don Bucher with two runs across, one out and two runners aboard. Spence walked the first batter to load the bases. Newcomer, a pinchhitter, fanned and George forced M. Joy at second to retire the side.

Homemakers Hear Report Of Delegate

"Living in a Changing World" was the theme of the annual Short Course at the University of Maryland, reported Mrs. Kenneth Wagaman to the Emmitsburg Homemakers Club.

Mrs. Wagaman, a "freshman" at College Park this year, told club members how particularly impressed she had been by the spirit of goodwill among some 1,000 Homemakers attending the Short Course. She described briefly the courses she personally elected to take in Crafts, Human Development in Family Living, and Personality Development. In the fall, Mrs. Wagaman will pass on to interested club members her newly-acquired skill at press printing.

HOSPITAL DRIVE STILL SHORT

The building fund of the Annie M. Warner Hospital mounted to $210,934.78 with the announcement of $4,926.93 additional contributions this week.

This week's contributions breaks the $40,000 barrier needed to reach the building fund goal of $250,000 which, hospital directors say they must have before contracts for the first of the proposed two new wings can be let.

The hospital architect is preparing the specifications for contractors' bids, and they are expected to be released July 1. They will provide four weeks in which to present bids.

In the interim, efforts are being redoubled to complete the building fund. There are a number of sources, individuals, businesses, industries and professionals, that have not yet been solicited or heard from voluntarily.

Hospital directors express confidence that the goal will be reached and the required $250,000 will be received by the time the contractors' bids are received and studied.

It is hoped to get the first wing under way early in August.

Acrobatic Sailing

OFTEN carrying 1,000 square feet of sail, as much as a large ocean yacht, Bermuda-fitted dinghies like this one sailing in the Great Sound are only 14 feet one inch long, and have no decking. Keeping these craft afloat requires the skill of an acrobat. The dinghies carry a crew of seven, most of them acting as bailers. If there is a lack of wind, the bailers jump overboard to lighten the load, being sure to dive from the stern thus giving the dinghy added momentum. Bermuda-fitted dinghy races are held in this mid-Atlantic resort during the summer.

THESE NEEDLESS DEATHS MUST STOP!

One of the most depressing of news items is one recording the death of a child found trapped in a discarded icebox or refrigerator! Yet one of the tragedies of modern-day living is a growing death toll from this cause. During the six-year period, 1948-1953, according to the National Safety Council, there have been nearly 50 cases in which one to five children have crawled into a discarded icebox or refrigerator, closed the door and been unable to get out. Seventy-nine children have died in this manner. Fifty-nine boys and 20 girls, ranging in age from two to 12 years, the average age being five years.

Although this toll is not statistically high, its potential seems to be increasing percentage-wise annually. For example, there were twice as many reported deaths from suffocation in discarded refrigerators during 1953 as there were during 1952. Moreover, the number of deaths per incident is increasing. In 1953 just four cases involved 12 children. In one of these cases five children from a single family were the victims.

There are more than 50,000,000 iceboxes, refrigerators, freezers and other such airtight cabinets in use today that are being discarded at the rate of approximately two to three million a year! Once discarded, these refrigerators and other airtight containers make inviting places for games for small children. May through September are the critical months because during this period children have vacation time for outdoor play and discarded boxes provide enticing hiding places.

To avoid the possibility of this type of accident in our community, the Maryland State Dept. of Health urges people who have unused or discarded refrigerators or iceboxes on their premises to take the following steps to render them harmless:

1—Remove the door. A chest which opens from the top or a large refrigerator lying on its back often has a lid or door so heavy that a child trapped inside would not be able to push it open.

2—Remove the latch stop so that the door cannot lock. This is particularly effective for making harmless those boxes with a door which opens on the front side.

3—Drill holes in the cabinet and remove the gasket. This will allow air into the box.

If the cabinet is only temporarily out of use it can still be rendered harmless for the period in which it must stand idle by taking the following steps:

1—Remove the latch stop. Put the stop and the screws into a bag which can be attached to the refrigerator for safe-keeping until needed.

2—Place the refrigerator so that the door is against the wall. Most boxes are too heavy for small children to push around.

3—Tie a wire or stout rope around the box. If handles are so constructed, padlock the cabinet or refrigerator.

ALONG THE POTOMAC

By Cong. DeWitt S. Hyde

WASHINGTON—Most safety experts agree that a major factor in our high automobile accident rate is the outmoded and, in many cases, outright dangerous conditions of our highways. There is no question as to the necessity of modernizing our highway and road systems. The debate in Congress rages over how to finance needed improvements.

Historically, the location, construction and financing of roads and highways has been a state and local responsibility. To a very large extent, it still is. Our national interest in roads dates as far back as 1806. In that year Congress, acting under the clause of the Constitution giving it power to establish post offices and post roads, undertook to improve the road from Cumberland to Wheeling, W. Va. It was not until 1916, though, that Congress first adopted a policy of providing Federal money to states for road construction.

Now pending before Congress are several bills which would expand the Federal government's share in the construction of modern highways and secondary roads. There is no real difference in the size of the proposed highway improvement programs. But there is a difference in the method of financing these programs.

The Republicans favor a provision which would pay for the needed construction through bonds to be issued by a specially-created Federal highway corporation. These bonds would ultimately be retired through existing taxes collected on motor fuels. The Democrats so far have been unable to agree on whether to pay for improvements through increased taxes on gasoline, diesel oil and tires or to delay the vexing problem by paying the sums necessary out of the Treasury's general fund.

Politically many Democrats favor a payment system that would fully reflect the cost of highway improvement in the Federal government's budget. The Republicans proposal's cost would only appear in the budget as appropriations are made to cover service charges on the bonds. It is still impossible to predict just how Congress will solve the problem of financing highway construction.

Safety Appeal Is Made To Holiday Drivers

An urgent appeal to the motoring public to cooperate to prevent the mounting toll of deaths and injuries on Maryland roadways this Fourth of July was made this week by Gov. Theodore R. McKeldin, while reminding them that throughout the nation, 9511 persons were killed in motor vehicle accidents between Memorial Day and Labor Day last year.

Gov. McKeldin said, "With the prediction that 50 million Americans will travel to vacation destinations by motor vehicles this year, we have a tremendous challenge to reduce the death and injury toll during the holiday period.

The chief executive emphasized that as part of the "Slow Down and Live" campaign being conducted throughout the nation, enforcement officers will concentrate efforts on those violation associated with speed—such as excessive speed, speed too fast for conditions, improper passing, following too closely and failing to yield the right of way.

Paul E. Burke, executive director of the Maryland Traffic Safety Commission, joined with Gov. McKeldin in requesting the cooperation of the motoring public. "Every effort will be made by the Maryland Traffic Safety Commission to encourage safe driving and walking during the coming Fourth of July weekend. Cooperatively, I am confident that we can hold down traffic accidents this Fourth of July and conserve lives, health and property to a greater degree than ever before," Mr. Burke said.

Urging every motorist to "Slow Down and Live" over the long holiday weekend ahead, Mr. Burke further stated, "we cannot substantially improve our traffic record until drivers make up their minds to stay within speed limits. Careful engineering, tight traffic laws and firm police work are necessary. But the burden belongs to the driver. It is he who has deliberately driven too fast. It is he who must as deliberately slow down and live."

WASHINGTON AND "SMALL BUSINESS"

By C. WILSON HARDER

As tax collections show, burden of any U. S. foreign policy undertaking falls heavy on American independent business.

In addition, there is a purely American psychological outlook on U. S. foreign policy among independent businessmen, which world meddling politicians apparently recognize and capitalize upon.

The average American independent businessman holds to two basic premises. One is that promises made by agents of the American people, and thus under old legal maxim principal is responsible for acts of his agents.

Thus, Americans by and large have been quite chagrined, even mortified by the disclosures of Yalta and other conferences whereby lands and people have been bartered away to communistic nations in exchange for something else, with the U. S. committed to back up the secretly arrived at deals. And even though these agreements have been made without knowledge of the people, or even without Congressional permission, they were made by agents of the American people, and thus under old legal maxim of a principal's responsibility for acts of an agent, a strong sense of responsibility is felt on Main Street.

Therefore, many students of government feel it is of paramount importance that Sen. William E. Jenner has introduced a simple resolution known as Senate Res. No. 95 to stop this.

This resolution states "No official or employee of the Government of the United States, or members of its armed services, shall be marshalled against passage of this forthright, plainly stated resolution. However, citizen's letters to their Senators could insure passage of this piece of national protection.

may take part in any conference, or in steps leading to any conference, or in any commitment, open or secret, which has for its purpose or effect the transfer of any territory to the control of a Communist Police State or any part of the population of any nation to Communist enslavement. No such agreement or commitment shall be binding upon the United States."

This is simple language, but is certain bureaucrats will try mightily to get this resolution by Sen. Jenner killed, as they do not want their wings clipped.

Yet continuation of the policy of past twenty years with no brakes put upon bureaucratic impulses in foreign field can, and undoubtedly will, lead nation into heavier and heavier burdens.

It is also noticed this resolution would put the world on notice that in certain matters the people of the United States are not responsible for acts of their agents.

This is standard business practice by firms who wish to avoid being held to the common law maxim of responsibility for an agent's acts.

The average American believes that much of England's trouble has been caused by earning the name of "perfidious Albion." It is strongly against American moral grain to waltz.

Thus, it is felt, the American people deserve protection from moral responsibilities for agreements made in secret which the Jenner resolution would afford. It will be interesting to note the many high flown arguments that will be marshalled against passage of this forthright, plainly stated resolution. However, citizen's letters to their Senators could insure passage of this piece of national protection.

BABSON

Writes . . .

By ROGER W. BABSON

For the past 100 years English and American promoters have sought "concessions" to invest money and do business in foreign countries. These concessions consisted of railroad and trolley lines, electric power plants, manufacturing or merchandising operations, and later mining and timber rights. Some were unprincipled exploitations, but most have been honestly operated. All, however, have given little attention to the local people of these foreign countries, almost none of whom have had a stock interest.

These "one-sided" agreements have caused many diplomatic misunderstandings and even revolutions "against the white man." Where the "white man" has insisted on his "pound of flesh" and has refused to voluntarily give up anything, he has ultimately lost; but in Burma this has not been the case. I have in mind Burma Mines Limited, Burma Oil Co., and other foreign developments. Burma has a wonderful climate and faces on the Bay of Bengal midway between Indo-China and India. During World War II Burma was sacked by the Japanese, and Burmese companies were forced to reorganize. J. R. Govett, of 37 Dover St., London, formulated a plan which will be used world-wide.

The Burma Plan
Mr. Govett's Plan divides stock ownership, and membership on the Board of Directors of the foreign-owned companies between the old stockholders and the foreign government at the start of the reorganization. One half of the stock goes to the old stockholders, and the other half is put in trust in a Rangoon bank to be delivered to the Burmese government as it contributes labor and native supplies. The Govett Plan insures that the profits henceforth will be divided fifty-fifty. The foreign nation supplies the ore, or oil, or customers if it is a utility, while the English and American investors supply the "know-how" and management.

I not only believe in the future of these Burma "50-50" companies, but also I believe in other companies in Africa, Australia, and Argentina which are considering the Govett Plan. Powerful Standard Oil interests have just adopted a similar plan for the Argentine, and the St. Joseph Lead Co. may follow. A great opportunity for the Govett Plan lies with the American & Foreign Power Co. which has holdings in Argentina, Brazil, Mexico, Venezuela, Colombia, Ecuador, Guatemala, Panama, Chile, Cuba, Costa Rica, and China. Most of these properties I have personally visited, including the Shanghai Power Co.

Shanghai Power Company
This was a most valuable property in a city of six million population. When it was expropriated by the Communists, it probably could have been saved by adopting the Govett-Burma Plan; but the American & Foreign Power Co., which owned it, hesitated to make such an offer fearing to set a precedent. As a result, the Shanghai Power Co. bonds, sold to U. S. investors originally for $1000 each, can now be bought for $5 each. The properties are still mentioned in the annual reports, but no capacity, output, or earnings figures are included.

Certainly the stock of the American & Foreign Power Co. is one of the most interesting of foreign investments today. There are 7,224,238 shares of common stock outstanding, and a large debt. The stock paid 75c in 1954 and sells at about 14. If the management has the vision and courage to gradually change the ownership of its foreign properties over to the Burma Plan, this American & Foreign Power stock could sell much higher. This would especially be true if Congress should pass certain tax legislations favoring foreign investments. If, however, the management and Congress are stubborn, this stock could become valueless. Several times I have personally talked this problem over with the company's famous founder, the late Sidney Mitchell, but it was wasted breath on my part. He was an honest and remarkable man, with technical training and great energy; but he was a hard dictator with very little social vision. Unfortunately, this applies to the heads of many big corporations today that have large foreign investments.

Your Personal Health

PLEASEINGLY PLUMP?

All this talk about the dangers of overweight—does it really matter? You aren't really fat, just pleasingly plump. Your idea of good eating is a luscious layer cake, not the rabbit food you find in reducing diets. What are the real facts about overweight?

Overweight does shorten life. At the age of 50 a healthy man can expect to live to 70, but fat will cut him to about 57. People who are fat in their 20's have a death rate 80 per cent higher than normal. Imagine carrying a round wherever you go, for years on end, a 50 pound bag of cement—even a 20 pound sack. Of course, you'd be putting a strain on your joints and making extra work for your heart.

Fat people are more subject to disease than those with normal weight. Their chances of getting high blood pressure, coronary heart disease, and diabetes are several times greater. The risk in major surgery is greater.

In recent years there has been evidence that it isn't just carrying extra weight but the process of putting on the weight that is most dangerous. While a person is putting on fat, especially when there is a sudden increase, he is apt to be depositing fatty material on the inside of his blood vessels. The heart may not get enough blood and a heart attack will be the result.

If you are already overweight, you need not give up. If the deposits of fat in the blood vessels haven't gone too far, they may disappear. You can definitely increase your life span by losing weight.

There's no easy way. If you have a tendency to overweight, it's a lifetime job keeping those pounds off. You really must want to do it. If you don't want a healthy old age, no one can make you eat less. That's the only answer to excess fat. You can and should eat a wide variety of nutritious foods, but you must eat less.

Bathtub Is Popular Playground

THESE LITTLE SISTERS are having a good soak — and a good time. They don't even care if they get clean, too!

WHEN IT COMES to combining soap and water and children, a mother just can't win. Either she can't get the youngsters into the tub, or she can't get them out. As long as she's going to lose the battle anyway, she might as well see that somebody has a good time!

As a rule, two youngsters to a tub are better than one, since they entertain each other. However, even one reluctant little creature can be persuaded to enjoy a bath if mother takes a little time and trouble to sell the idea.

Instead of saying "It's time to take a bath," try saying "Let's go and play with some soap and water for awhile." Instead of scrubbing Junior as soon as he climbs into the tub, let him play for a few minutes—with bathtub toys, with a spray-hose attached to the faucet, with some bright colored sponges. The more suds, the better, for rare is the child who can resist the magic of thick foamy lather that comes up as high as the rim of the tub.

Children love to experiment and discover — to see just how much suds can be squeezed out of one wash cloth, just how high a blob of snowy foam can be built up before it topples over. As for getting the kids out of the tub — well, the only sure method is simply to open the drain and let the bubbles disappear. When the soap's gone, the fun's over!

MARYLAND FARM FRONT

The formula which was used to determine the national average minimum support price of $1.81 per bushel on the 1956 wheat crop has been explained by George B. Reeves, chairman of the Maryland Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Committee.

He says the basic idea of the formula is to relate price support to the supply of wheat. According to the formula, support levels range from 90 per cent of parity when the total supply is not more than 102 per cent of normal supply, down to 75 per cent when the total supply is more than 130 per cent of the normal supply.

"Under provisions of the Agricultural Act of 1949," Chairman Reeves points out, "a support price of 76 per cent of parity is indicated for the 1956 crop. When converted to a dollars-and-cents figure, it amounts to $1.81 per bushel. The law provides for a support level of 76 per cent of parity when the total supply exceeds the normal supply by more than 128 per cent but not more than 130 per cent, and the total supply expected for the 1956-57 marketing year is 128.8 per cent of the normal supply."

A normal supply would be 1 billion 122 million bushels. The expected supply of 1,445,000 bushels was calculated by adding

Citizenship At The Grass Roots
Many signs point toward a continuous danger from encroaching, "back door" Socialism in America, but the bright, encouraging signs, I think, offset the gloomy ones. As this column is written I have just returned to my office from Purdue University after having participated in the annual American Farm Bureau Institute. What I know about the Farm Bureau's nationwide work among the farming population, together with what I saw and heard at the Institute, gives me a comforting feeling about the future of our great nation.

At Purdue I addressed 300 Farm Bureau national, state and regional officials. They were representing more than 1.6 million Farm Bureau families in 48 states, or nearly 10 million Americans. And the keynote of their week-long Institute was American citizenship education—with particular discussion on how the Farm Bureau can activate the people at the grass roots to fulfill their citizenship responsibilities. My subject was "Basic Concepts of Government."

Desire for Understanding
The impressive thing at the Institute was the earnest desire of the Farm Bureau's national leadership to get across to its field workers and member families the very clearest understanding of our American political and economic system, as well as an awareness of the dangers confronting it. My colleague at Harding College, Dr. Clifton L. Ganus, Jr., dean of Harding's pioneering School of American Studies, dramatized the elements in our unique system by actually building for the 300 conferees a 10-foot-high pyramid representing the political and economic structure of "The American Way of Life." Other speakers on the citizenship subject were Charles B. Shuman, president, American Farm Bureau Federation; D. B. Varner, vice president, Michigan State University, and Harry J. Reed, dean, School of Agriculture, Purdue University.

Another impressive thing was the well-organized program for carrying American citizenship education to the grass roots through the Farm Bureau's more than 3000 county organizations. There is an excellent kit of materials which has been in the process of development and refinement for a number of years. Training in the use of this kit was one of the chief purposes of the institute.

The Motives
The educational project has two frankly stated motives: (1) to improve the welfare of America's farm families; and (2) to strengthen and protect the basic elements of our American system. The Farm Bureau leadership feels that No. 1 depends on the success of No. 2. And for this reason, the Bureau's grass roots educational project is of great worth to all of us in America.

Here is what the Farm Bureau is preaching and teaching in every phase of its citizenship educational project: "We believe in the American competitive enterprise system; that man's search for progress should be encouraged by maintenance of opportunity, not hindered by illusions of security; that a person should be rewarded in accordance with his productive contribution to society; that every man is entitled to own property, earn money honestly, save, invest and spend as he chooses;

Supply and Demand
"and to continue) that property rights cannot be taken away without infringing on rights guaranteed by the Constitution; that the Constitution is the basic law of the land, and that its interpretation should be in accordance with the intent of its authors; that government should operate impartially in the interest of all; that government's regulatory functions should be based on law; that government should provide only a minimum controls and aids; that government should stimulate, not discourage individual initiative . . ."

The Bureau's fundamental agricultural economic concepts are stated thus: "Grow for profit what the market wants. Get bigger markets—at home and abroad. Cut costs—on and off the farm. Permit the earning of honest dollars. Any program which has the result of expanding agricultural output in the absence of a comparable increase in effective market demand . . . is contrary to the interest of farmers."

Since I was born and raised on a farm, operate a farm today and have been close to the agricultural scene all my life, I am confident that our farm population is inherently self-reliant; and that, when given all the facts, it will be a potent force against encroaching Socialism.

Care Of Rugs Is Discussed By Homemaker

Maybe your summer fiber rug has that tired, lifeless look. Vitamin pills can't spruce up a rug, but there is a simple solution for this problem of tired rugs, says Vivian L. Curnutt, Extension home management specialist with the University of Maryland.

She says to paint them with an awning paint. At this time of year, a lot of families are moving out to their porches and patios, and last year's fiber, jute and straw rugs are just the thing for floor coverings. But, Miss Curnutt points out that some of them need rejuvenation. So, she suggests the awning paint. Clean the rug and put it on a flat surface—over several layers of newspaper to protect the surface below. Then, using a good, fairly stiff brush, cover about a square foot of rug space at a time with awning paint. Brush the paint across, and then up and down on each area. This helps to cover all parts of the area completely, the specialist advises.

It also tends to fill crevices and holes. The paint is absorbed by the fibers in the rug, keeping the rug from having a "painted look."

Awning paint is waterproof and long wearing, and it comes in

FIRST PAPER FROM OIL-BASED FIBERS

Nylon, Dacron, and Orlon, glamor queens of the oil industry, have been making the papers lately—synthetic papers. Petroleum-based fibers are being used for the first time in paper manufacturing. The new product is three to 10 times stronger than ordinary paper made of rags or pulp, and with many colors.

This brightening and renewing idea can also be used on canvas chair covers, cushions and chair pads, Miss Curnutt concludes.

What Every Farmer Knows Water... The Key to Better Crops

"Well-fertilized crops reach down deep for water . . . and make better use of the water they get." So says the Agricultural Service Department of the Union Bag & Paper Corporation, makers of Multiwall paper bags for fertilizer.

When crops receive liberal doses of plant foods, they develop stronger, healthier root systems that are capable of "digging" water from the subsoil. That's a point to consider closely as you look forward to the dry summer months. Weak root systems simply cannot get down to the subsoil to reach the vitally necessary moisture.

Plants need more water than most people realize. For instance, it takes an estimated 2,500 tons of water to make a 100-bushel an acre corn crop. Virtually every life process of a plant is directly affected by water—growth, feeding, breathing, digestion, and so forth. In fact, each plant in itself is over 90 per cent water!

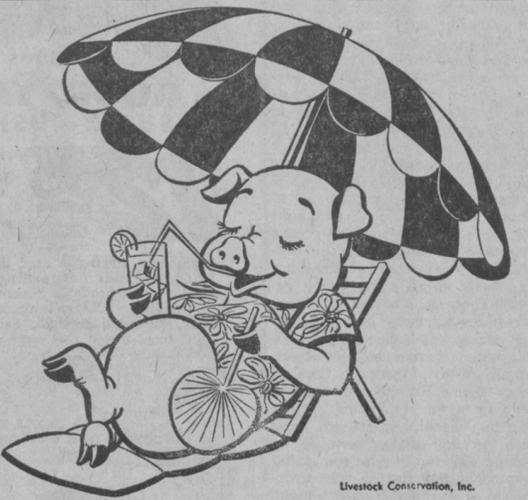

While the size of a man's feet are no sure indication of his height, big, deep and strong roots almost always mean higher quality, larger sized above ground plant parts. That, of course, means higher yields.

Consider, too, that as bigger root systems develop, they utilize more natural plant nutrients which are held in the subsoil. "Giving plants all of the "leg room" they need to reach for water and nutrients pays off in greater yields and higher profits.

While higher yields come partly from greater water use by plants, increases also come from more efficient use of available water. Tests on corn in Texas showed that well-fertilized, well-managed corn used nearly a quarter the amount of water that a poorly managed corn crop did. Liberal amounts of fertilizer can be used as a hammer to drive roots down deep in the subsoil for water. Crops will respond . . . with higher yields, higher profits.

From where I sit... by Joe Marsh

If You Can't Lick 'em—Join 'em

Just back from visiting with my daughter's family—and playing Grandpop to two of the cutest kids you ever saw. While there I picked up a couple of new ideas on child raising:

If your child's learning to use a pen, provide an old fountain pen—filled with bluing. Looks and writes like ink, but won't stain clothes or furniture.

Maybe you have a boy, like my grandson, who thinks he's too old for a bib—but isn't. A big cowboy bandana works just as well, and looks he-man to boot.

From where I sit, getting along with children is like getting along with grownups—it requires an effort to see things from the other person's point of view. At any age, there's no accounting for tastes. Take my neighbor who keeps a parakeet and drinks hot coffee in the summertime. That seems strange to me . . . a man who's partial to hound dogs and a cooling glass of beer. But I'd be "childish" to say it was wrong.

OF A NUMBER OF THINGS
Aids to Real Thinking
"We could all think better if we had better thinking machines, trained them better, kept them in better order," to quote one of the qualified writers on the mind and its activities, and certainly nobody would question this assertion. But the first of these conditions we obviously cannot meet—we have "for keeps" the thinking apparatus that we started life with and we will get no other. (This is even more literally true than the opticians' reminder, "Your eyes, the only two you'll ever have.") But as for training our minds better, keeping them in order, and so thinking better—those are possibilities as certain as they are marvelous; and all of us, however little thought we have given to this matter, must have known in ourselves and observed in others some convincing examples of them. (What this 'we' or 'they' is which, apparently outside the mind, gives the mind directions—mystery again, but the results we know to be facts.)

So we are now to look at some of the specialists' "Aids to Real Thinking" in part, at least, no doubt already familiar, always remembering that behind all successful efforts to apply these must be the sincere desire for improvement; the other preliminary, that we must know where we need help, has been emphasized as space permitted in the two preceding sections.

1. ALERT SENSES. The first 'must' in this important business of more and better thinking has to do with the senses, our means of connection with the world around us, the final source of our thinking (and of course including persons and the past as well as the present.) This being so, we are urged to cultivate our senses in the full meaning of the term, ALL the senses but most especially sight, thru which the most contacts are made. Several special reminders here seem worth remembering: (1) that the thinking apparatus must be given good and sufficient material to work with if it is to produce good thinking; (2) that those parts of the world to which we have paid no attention are powerless to affect our thinking, for they have, literally, not entered our minds; (3) that if we observe widely and deeply we may live in a world that is wide and deep. (A homely example of this enlarging of our world thru increased activity of the senses is given by Overstreet, a popular authority previously quoted: "My world was empty of steam-shovels until I had actually seen one taking bites out of the earth. Now steam-shovels are in my world." What Mr. O does with steam-shovels in his thinking is a matter of his further mental activity, but I think we may infer it is something worthwhile.) And we should also remember that even the wonder of the spoken and written word, without which, in some form, we cannot imagine any developed thinking, is dependent on hearing and sight.

2. REFLECTION. We must find time to reflect on the reports that our various sources of information and inspiration are constantly supplying to the mind, for otherwise they will have no meaning or connection, and thinking, in fact, cannot proceed. The Abbe Dimnet, who had severe words for us earlier on the lack of thinking, has this on the lack of time for reflection: "Have you really no time? Are you sincere, or are you just repeating what everybody else is saying? No time! The extremity example, from pleasures not so pleasant, from prolonged visits of idlers, from unnecessary telephone talk. And he asks whether we waste time by forgetting, which he declares can be largely prevented by exercising foresight.

As to the problem of what are proper subjects for reflection, the specialists of course can give no specific advice. A great practical authority on good thinking suggests in a striking sentence that we would do well to keep away from much thinking about ourselves: "At the very best, a person completely wrapped up in himself makes a small package," and many others make the same point more prosaically. We are also urged, the world being as it is, "so full of a number of things," so many fields of thought and these in turn with so many divisions, to select certain centers for constructive thinking (the basis of all constructive action.) These will naturally be selected according to our interests and our opportunities (which can of course change and enlarge), and the inspiring point is that all of us can really do constructive thinking when we follow up our reflecting on the world we have taken in and given meaning by making plans to do something about changing it—for "no environment is ever quite good enough to leave alone." And we are further reminded that there are two main centers around which the things we think about group themselves: state, our nation, and now we can actually say "our world"; the other center is that of subjects, limited or not by location—family relations, education, social welfare, sports, religion, government, etc., practically without end.

(By the way, to go back for a minute to the beginning of this paragraph, I should like to say that Dr. Fossdick, whom I quoted there, would be the last person to say that we should disregard ourselves in our thinking; as many column readers know, much of his life has been spent telling thousands of listeners directly and by radio how to change their own thinking and, in consequence, their conduct, before getting to work on any other changes.)

3. CONCENTRATION. This is of course essential to reflection, but also to any other phases of real thinking, noted in an earlier section (recalling past experiences, drawing conclusions, making decisions, etc.), so seems to deserve a paragraph under its own heading. And I have seen no more picturesque way of putting both the difficulty and the certainty of being able to concentrate than in Arnold Bennett's "How to live on 24 hours a day," from which I've already quoted something on the unimportance of too much of our thinking. "Begin at a certain time," says Mr. Bennett, "on the way to work, say, to concentrate. You will not have gone 10 yards before your mind has skipped away under your very eyes and is larking around the corner with another subject. Bring it back by the scruff of the neck. Ere you have reached the station you will have brought it back about 40 times. Do not despair. You cannot by any chance fail if you persevere." (But beware of being too pleased with your success; for from the possible by-product of self-satisfaction we should all wish to be spared!) A.E.H.
(To be finally concluded)

each one seeks is the same—a bright little circle of gold. "The Tender Trap" is the story of Charlie Reader, a New York bachelor and his biggest problem is trying to keep his Saturday night date from running into his Monday night girl. Yes, he does become 'trapped' but how and under what circumstances is worthy of a date to see the show. If you're a man, you'll revel in the carefree life of Charlie Reader and squirm when he's caught. If you're a woman you'll root for your favorite gal and delight in the wiles each one uses in the perennial game of landing a man.

Mountain Theater Features "The Tender Trap"
Tuesday evening marked the opening of the second major production at the Mountain Theatre, atop cool Braddock Heights Park. This week, James Dyas, director, is presenting through Sunday his New York Equity Co. in the fabulous hit of the Broadway stage, "The Tender Trap." Of special interest is the fact that the Mountain Theatre is the first known summer stock company presenting the very recent hit play at this early date. The laugh-filled comedy on "how to trap a bachelor" has a cast of eight and features Lois Barden as Sylvia Crews; Dorothy Lee Tompkins as Julie Gillis; Bill O'Brien as Charlie Reader, and John LeGrande as Joe McCall. Miss Barden, a professional actress of the stage, radio, films and television, is again appearing at the theater, having been with the 1954 company.

Mr. O'Brien, another member of the resident company, has appeared on the Broadway stage and on television has been seen on "Studio One," "Suspense," and "Philco Playhouse."

Two local residents will also play the theatre this week—Malcolm Rose and Fran Whiting.

Here is a play for all gals on the prowl for men. Each feminine member of the cast has her own approach, but the reward

The flags will be flying, the orators orating, the children shouting and gleefully banging their firecrackers about and the lemonade will be cool and tempting.

Practically everywhere in the United States, in every county and city throughout the land, bands have rehearsed, pageants and parades have been planned and all is ready for the celebration of the greatest day in American history—the Fourth of July.

Independence seems to be a particular pride of the American people. While in these parlous times the shadow of fear hangs over the world, while organized disaster seems to threaten from every point of the compass, we maintain our independence and glory in it.

Perhaps the feeling grows from the knowledge that this independence is guaranteed by the Constitution of the United States —the most important political document in the history of mankind. Perhaps it stems from the knowledge of the sacrifices, the determination, and the courage of our forefathers who fought the American Revolution, the fight which brought to fruition the hopes and dreams of the 13 original colonies which were expressed in the Declaration of Independence.

Under this Constitution our Nation has expanded in territory, in power, in commerce and in happiness.

Our system of free enterprise has been denounced by every dictator in contemporary history. We have been branded as a capitalistic, decadent and reactionary people. We have been called soft. Perhaps that is the definition some apply to independence.

But let us point out to those who would judge us so; we have never started a war nor have we lost one. For it is a strange, but happy paradox — we are independent and we are the most united people on earth.

Possibility Of New Medical Examiner

Dr. Robert J. Furie notified the County Commissioners by letter on Monday the office of the Chief Medical Examiner of Maryland is relieving him of his duties as acting deputy medical examiner of Frederick County effective June 30 at midnight.

Dr. Furie, it is known, has been anxious to resign from the position for some time. There was no indication who will succeed him. The letter said Dr. Russell Fisher, who is the chief medical examiner, would contact the commissioners regarding the position.

Chaplain Completes Field Training

Chaplain (Lt. Col.) Stephen D. Melycher, son of Mrs. Suzzanna M. Melycher, 692 Dewey St., Bridgeport, Conn., completed two weeks of active duty last week while undergoing summer field training at Fort George G. Meade.

Training at the summer encampment was a continuation of weekly branch class room instruction which the Reserve Army Chaplains have been receiving in their local areas.

Chaplain Melycher has returned to his parish at St. Joseph's Church, Taneytown.

Arabs Vote in Israel Election

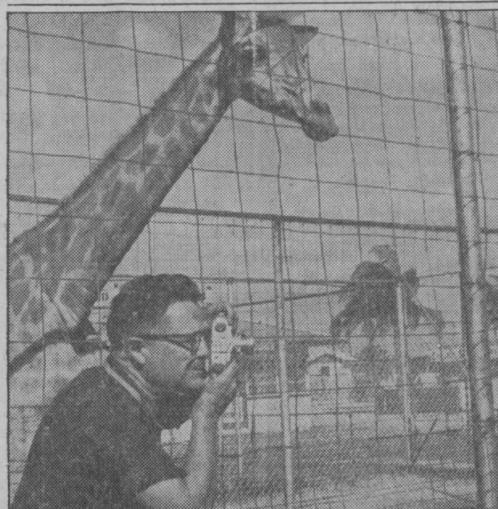

Citizens of the small nation of Israel take their voting seriously. More than 85 percent, aged 18 and over, are expected to register for the July elections. Under the country's democratic system of government, there are 14 political parties vying for 120 seats in Israel's Congress, the Knesset. The three Arab parties currently have five members there. Israel is the only country in the Middle East which gives Arab women the right to vote equally with the men.

Don't Be Bashful—
Get Into The Picture, Too!

"JOEY AND THE GIRAFFE" by Mrs. Joseph Janney Steinmetz, Sarasota, Fla. This one with a Graphic 35 at 1/50 sec., f/11.

DON'T spend the rest of your life behind the camera—get in front of it, too! Many photographers are so busy taking pictures of other people and things, that they never see themselves in a picture.

Two cameras in the family are a good way to lick this problem, according to T. T. Holden, photo director of Graflex, Inc., Rochester, N. Y. This photo was taken by Mrs. Joseph Janney Steinmetz as she watched her photographer husband at work in a Florida zoo. Her picture proved that giraffes have a sense of curiosity, too!

Another very effective way to make sure that YOU get into a picture once in a while is to buy a camera that has a self-timer. With the Graphic 35, for example, you can press a lever and 12 seconds will elapse before the shutter goes off — giving you plenty of time to scamper into the picture.

Two cameras in the family can make picture-taking more fun. In addition to getting the photographer into a picture once in a while, you can also keep one camera loaded with color film while the other is loaded with black and white. And if one of those once-in-a-lifetime shots comes up when your camera is unloaded, that extra camera may save the day.

When planning the ownership of two cameras, it may be wise to think of a 35mm camera and a 2 1/4" x 2 1/4" camera. Amateur color photography is still best taken with the 35mm size which is easily projected for viewing. The larger negative size of the 2 1/4" cameras will give you a little better picture in black and white — especially if you have your processing done at the corner drugstore.

BOY SCOUT ACTIVITIES

The weekly meeting of the Boy Scouts, Troop 284, was held in the clubhouse last Thursday evening.

The boys liked from headquarters to the "Willows" along Tomers Creek to hold their meeting. Organized swimming was held in this manner: first, each boy had his refreshments, after which test requirements were taken. The boys left before dark and arrived back at the Scout house by 9:30 p. m.

It was announced the Scouts will hike this weekend and camp out at Friends Creek over the Fourth of July, leaving Sunday afternoon at 1:00 o'clock and arriving back Monday afternoon at 2:00 p. m. The meeting was closed with the appropriate Scout ritual.

Plans are well under progress for a successful five-day camping at Weishars, near Fairfield the last week of July.

The Scout food sale will be held at the Fire Hall tomorrow morning at 10:00 a. m., the receipts of this affair will go towards the camping expenses. Anyone desiring to donate food for this affair, kindly bring it to the Fire Hall tomorrow morning.

Writer Urges Backing Of Youth Programs

Editor, Emmitsburg Chronicle: Having been appointed chairman of the Troop Committee of the Boy Scouts, I wish at this time, to remind the residents of this community that the revival of the Boy Scouts and the newly-organized Little League, are in my opinion, the biggest steps in combating juvenile delinquency, which stems many times from inactivity during vacation from school and after school hours, during the winter.

The Boy Scouts is an activity which is held the year around. The Little League is a summer function, but interest in it can be kept alive during the winter by holding classes and making plans for the next season.

At present I am busy with my Little League team and also I'm trying to do all I can for the Boy Scouts and I plan to be more active this winter. I urge all the citizens of this town to get behind these activities and push, and anyone having suggestions for more activities for the boys (and girls) of this community. Please divulge these plans, or inform us of your suggestions so we can do a better job.

While writing this letter I have learned that the Girl Scouts have been active, so this makes me feel as though we really have the ball rolling here.

"People of Emmitsburg," let's back the Boy Scouts, the Girl Scouts and the Little League and any other activities that are begun or are in progress, for the youth our community! JACK ROSENSTEEL
