You've heard the old tale about the "shot that was heard around the world"? Well last week there was an operation that was heard around the world. Some papers went to the ridiculous trouble of printing a full page and some two, full of questions and answers concerning the President's operation. A full blow by blow account of the now famous stomach-ache was given in every detail. As the Baltimore Sun so aptly put it, "For the fact that the operation was a success everyone gives heartfelt thanks. From the point of view of the patient there is only one drawback. Though he search the far corners of the civilized world he will never find a person to whom he can say, 'Have you heard about my operation?' without getting an affirmative answer." I'm not griping about the right kind of publicity that is given our President, but I abhor the type of journalism used in the stitch-by-stitch account of the operation. It's positively ridiculous and good news must have been scarce over the weekend.

Well here it is summer again and the heat is sweltering at the present time. For two years now we have been talking swimming pool and for two years exactly nothing has been accomplished. I can't understand the lethargy that grips our citizens. Most of them seem oblivious as to what goes on around them. It seems to me that some of our local nearby streams could have been dammed up to afford a little summer pleasure for our children. When you stop to think about it there isn't even a picnic table locally where a family can relax and enjoy a basket lunch. I can't understand why some enterprising local individual wouldn't jump at an opportunity like this. An inexpensive recreational grounds wouldn't cost too much and I'm certain it would be well-patronized locally thereby insuring its success, especially since there is no competition in this field! Oh well, I guess we'll continue on the same old pattern as usual and hunt a tree or lake elsewhere. You can't say I didn't try to get something started, but apparently my pleas fell on deaf ears.

The season's first hurricane talk came this week when a disturbance was reported in the southern hurricane belt. Fortunately nothing more severe than a disturbance developed but it served as a warning that the hurricane season is once more with us. Insurance companies were quick to shake off minor property damage claims caused by hurricanes. Most of them now have a $50 deductible rider attached to the policy. Under this plan, if a few shingles or spouting or windows are broken, if the sum is less than $50 (and it usually is) your insurance company will not honor the claim and no adjustment will be made. In the past most of the claims were of this small "nuisance" nature. So from now on if you want to collect damages the bill must be higher and the first 50 bucks is on you—the policyholder.

It's baseball time again and once more our Little League has begun a new season. This group has come a long way the few short years it has been operating and it now is a member of the National Little League organization. Parents should be honored to have their boys play on these teams and those who have boys who don't make the team, or childless couples, should patronize these games. All that is needed to keep the boys happy and active is a little moral support by local fans. If you do your part our boys will do their's. Let's show some good attendance figures at the excellent Little League field this year fans!

Bible School Opening Is Scheduled

The Emmitsburg Community Daily Vacation Bible School, sponsored by the Ministerial Assn., will be held again this year at the Lutheran Parish House from 9 to 11:30 a. m. for a period of two weeks, Monday through Friday. The school will open Monday, June 18 and close Friday, June 29.

Many children have already registered for the school by completing the pre-registration blanks distributed in the various church schools. However, whether they have registered or not, all children from the age of two and older are invited to attend.

Plans are still in the formative stage regarding an evening program for the closing of the school on June 29. Perhaps the interest of the parents of the community will be the final determining factor.

There are still a few vacancies to be filled on the staff, primarily teachers and helpers. If you have an interest in the spiritual welfare of the children of our community, perhaps you will avail yourself of this opportunity to be of service.

A meeting will be held Friday evening at 8 o'clock in the Lutheran Parish House for all the adults who are going to participate in the school. This will be a short planning session to discuss room assignments, classes, literature distribution, and any problems which the teachers may have regarding their classes. It is hoped that maximum interest will be shown by the community so that the school will continue to grow and progress for the benefit of our children.

Mother Asks

Support For Little League

Editor, Emmitsburg Chronicle:
Mothers, aren't you proud of our boys? The Little League in their good-looking uniforms, doing their best to please us and make us proud of them on that wonderful diamond.

The whole community should be thankful for that field. Lots of other towns and cities would be happy to have just a piece of ground for their boys to play on. Mothers, do you realize Emmitsburg got that diamond by lots of hard work that took lots of time by the men of our town. Besides, they spend hours with our boys for practice and games. We, the mothers, should be very thankful to them; they deserve plenty of credit and lots of thanks. Mothers, let us do our part to help our sons and the Little League. Can't we see that there is something cold to drink for the boys during the games? You know it gets plenty hot and those double-headed last a good while.

I'm sure everyone would enjoy a refreshing drink that we, without too much effort, could provide during the games. Come on mothers, be good sports and offer to take your turn—pick your night! Those interested in this community project are asked to contact Mrs. Edward Lingg, HI-7-5341, or Mrs. John Orndorff, HI-7-3494.

Taneytown Man Is Sentenced On Morals Charge

A prominent businessman from Taneytown was ordered committed to the Allegheny County Workhouse and fined $750 when he appeared before Judge Chauncey M. DePuy in Franklin County, Pa., Court at Chambersburg, on a morals charge this week.

Shaking so badly that he had to lean against the courtroom lectern for support as he waited for the jurist to pass sentence in the case, 54-year-old Wallace Walter Yingling, appeared near collapse when the court ordered him to serve from five to 18 months in the workhouse. Quickly he recovered though, and he walked to the prisoner's bench, flanked by his attorneys.

Arrested by State Police with a Hanover pretzel salesman in a truck parked along a mountain road in the Old Forge section of Washington Township, Franklin County, Pa., Yingling subsequently pleaded guilty to two charges. He had been at liberty since that time under bond to permit him to undergo psychiatric examination and to receive treatment.

Yingling's companion at the time of the arrest, is now serving a three-to-10-month sentence in the Franklin County jail.

Yanks Victorious In Little League Opening Game

The curtain-raiser of Emmitsburg's Little League was played Tuesday evening at the local diamond. In the first contest the action was red-hot and was undecided at the end of the regulation number of innings. The contest between the Giants and the Cards was stalemated at 8-and will be played off at a later date.

The Yanks had little trouble in bowling over the Redsox and the final tally showed the Sox on the short side of a lop-sided score, 12-1.

Strawberry Blonde

This casual young lady is not watering her strawberries, she's weeding them! The modern way to weed is the chemical way. So the smart gardener leaves his hoe in the tool shed and sprinkles a weed preventer like Crag Herbicide-1 on strawberry rows. It takes only one tablespoon of the chemical in three gallons of water to keep weeds out of a 200-square-foot patch. One application will prevent most of the weeds for a month or longer.

The fight to free Maryland highways of litter is on. You can help by carrying a litter bag in your car and emptying it in the travel trash container provided by many service stations. Help Keep Maryland Beautiful.

PORTRAIT OF A DISASTER which could happen anywhere is this truck-train collision at West Newton, Pa. Almost immediately after the crash, which killed five and seriously injured two, Westmoreland County's civil defense rescue truck went into action with its power winches, cutting torches and other special disaster gear.

Complicating the job was an upended boxcar of explosives only two cars away from the one which the truck hit. While CD rescue teams dug into the wreckage, CD auxiliary police helped local officers evacuate a two-block business area until the explosives could be removed.

DATA ON DAD'S DAY

Sunday, June 17, is Father's Day, the 46th anniversary of the day first celebrated in 1910. Then, as now, the third Sunday of the month was set aside as a special day. Here, a loving little lady adds her daddy's socks to her washday chores. And Dad uses his gift, a new Kodak Stereo Camera, to catch the scene in all its color—plus the realism and excitement of third dimension. Not until such a slide is seen through a viewer, can the "reach-out-and-touch" sensation of stereo photography be appreciated. Here's a new adventure for the father and the family who haven't yet experienced the thrill of three-dimensional photography.

WASHINGTON AND "SMALL BUSINESS"

By C. WILSON HARDER

While perhaps some professional military men exercise political caution, the American Republic has been blessed with outstanding military leaders who have taken a stand for their beliefs regardless of possible political consequences.

General Billy Mitchell was one. So was General Douglas MacArthur.

Now General Curtis Lemay, commander of the bomber force that flies the big intercontinental atomic bombers on which nation's security rests, has stated flatly that not enough of these bombers; that they are not being delivered as has been ballyhooed.

Significantly, iron jawed cigar chomping general, when his claims were disputed by political sources, was backed up not only by Gen. Earl Partridge, head of Continental Air Command, but also by Gen. Nathan Twining, air force chief.

A Senate committee headed by Senator Stuart Symington, Mo., seeks facts of situation.

At time of writing, Defense Secretary Charles Wilson, former General Motors head widely publicized as a production genius has not explained why production has lagged on this vital bomber.

General Partridge reportedly told Symington committee he would be unable at present to defend nation even against small atomic attack.

Possibly in time an answer will be given to this enigma. It will be interesting to see if any attempt to set up an alibi on the grounds there is not sufficient money is made.

© National Federation of Independent Business

Recent official report on first seven years of NATO operations, the North Atlantic Treaty Organization, sets cost of maintaining these joint forces at $312 billion, of which U. S. taxpayers chipped in to the tune of $252 billion, leaving other 20% split among thirteen other nations.

Yet some experts feel in event of atomic war, result will not be determined by what happens in England or France, but rather, what striking force U. S. is able to launch from North America. This was essence of national defense advice given over three years ago by ex-president Herbert Hoover.

However, even in face of these revelations, there is drive to get through Congress additional $5 billion for foreign aid, to add to $69 billion already given away.

One of the most puzzling questions in Washington is just who among the nation's population is for continuing this game of playing international Santa Claus 365 days a year.

For example, nation's independent business, through National Federation of Independent Business voted 80% to 16%, with 4% not voting, in favor of stopping all foreign aid.

Concern of these businessmen is well founded. For a comparison, the new $5 billion now sought for foreign gifts from Congress equals almost 20% of total collected in individual income taxes in an entire year. Presumably, without this give-away load, individual income taxes could be cut a whopping 20%.

Yet taxes are not cut, and nation's three top airman testify nation does not possess security.

It therefore appears Sen. Symington will be joined by many others in Congress in asking quite bluntly "What cooks?"

Congressman De Witt S. Hyde - 6th District, Maryland

WASHINGTON, June 13—The pending postal rate increase measure should be debated on its merits and not passed or rejected on the basis of political expediency. The bill is a major step in the direction of bringing postal receipts somewhere near the cost of carrying the mail.

Early Congresses recognized that the transmission of letters for the public was a service of the government and that the cost should be paid by the individual using the postal system. We have traveled a long way from this pay-as-you-go concept. Our postal deficit has grown to the point where it is costing the taxpayers almost a thousand dollars a minute to make up the difference between postal receipts and the cost of carrying the mail.

The House Interior Committee is currently holding hearings on the advisability of a coal research program. I have a bill before the Congress which would authorize the Secretary of the Interior to inaugurate a coal research and development program. It would also provide for a study of methods of protecting mines not now in use. My bill would provide for an immediate program without waiting for a House Committee review.

I am very pleased with the progress being made on the Little Youghiogheny Watershed project. I am informed that a final plan has been agreed by the local sponsoring organizations and the Dept. of Agriculture's Soil Conservation Service.

One of the major pieces of legislation relating to the social and mental health of the citizens of the District of Columbia is the narcotic bill. I am heartily in accord with the purposes of the act. On the matter of penalties, I would like to quote my friend Rep. Edward T. Miller who observed "it is the high probability of arrest, trial, and conviction" that makes the would-be offender pause. Strict enforcement of the law is a prime requirement in dealing with antisocial behavior in any community.

Further evidence of growth in the 6th Maryland District is the notice from the Federal Communications Commission that they have accepted and filed the application of Richard F. Lewis Jr., of Frostburg, for a license to operate a radio there.

From where I sit... by Joe Marsh

Just the Facts, Ma'am!

Having a red-hot crime wave in town. Specs McGuire and Buck Hanson were caught taking money out of parking meters—again. I was at Police Headquarters when a nice old lady rushed in to report them.

"It was dark but I saw their faces in the flashlight beam," she said breathlessly. "You can't trust anybody these days!"

She got flustered when Chief Benson explained that Specs and Buck are authorized collectors—working nights after their regular jobs. "Have to get 'em uniforms," said Benson. "Third time they've been turned in!"

From where I sit, we ought to guard against accusing anyone of being "wrong" just because that's the way it looks to us. For instance, I've heard people talk against a neighbor because they didn't approve of his choice of beverage! (They liked tea, or something, while he preferred a glass of beer.) Be sure you have a case before you lay down the law.

Living Today
by Colonel
Galen Cough

Director Approved Merchants
Administration, Inc.
Washington, D. C.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Living today in Washington, D. C., isn't what it used to be! During 1956 many changes are being made which offset anything ever contemplated in the way of buildings and district merchandising. The old buildings are giving way to the new and modernized Washington may soon find a new facial lift if the commercial interests can have it their way. Washington is becoming alert to modernization. With a streamlined development it may not be long until helicopters have a nest in the heart of Pennsylvania Ave. if the big boys have their way about it.

BUSINESS: The principle concern of Washington, D. C., is business and from this writer's viewpoint merchandising in the Capitol smells with an odor of "sell it regardless of how it is merchandised." Sales are in abundance. Trade downs from high prices are effective in numerous larger stores and cut rates are a drastic imposition on the small town merchants who can't buy merchandise at a mark down price, and which must be bought at the market price wholesale because they can't go to auctions and purchase inferior merchandise with money trade names. The vicious racket of cut rates has been sliced into thin onion skin wrappers and gilt-edged with a golden glaze to fascinate the buyer. In one drug store is a watch which they propose was advertised in LIFE magazine for approximately $80 which also provides as assortment of various other things including a pen, tie clip and what not—this is now sold at the price of $9.96—or for $70 less than the advertised price introduced in Life magazine—so how can we discriminate such a racket when the larger magazines and newspapers condone and accept such advertising? This is an evil practice that should be outlawed now. For this reason the Approved Merchants Administration, Inc. was organized—to fight such evil practices.

REPORT: The Approved Merchants Administration, Inc., is now a registered organization authorized to do business in the District of Columbia, with papers in the City Corporation legal department as well as having its charter and with the application pending registration filed in the patent office it now has an exclusive for six months pending final proof of grade and good qualifications for trade mark. It is therefore, exclusive and not unauthorized. Many high ranking officials have expressed commendation of the program set for for eventual national expansion.

The Washington area is set for a campaign and progressive developments have begun with much success to date. Coordinators of reputable off-time law enforcement officers are being signed for active assignments in both investigations and newspaper sales contacts in memberships. As an example, 21 co-ordinators were interviewed within a day's work. Eleven were accepted. Within 30 days an expectancy of 50 co-ordinators will be assigned to the Washington area alone. Various states will be included and developed as time permits.

The merchant will then have an active agency opposed to false advertising practices—gold decals of elaborate four-color design will be provided the merchants—the awards of merit will be given to qualified merchants, newspaper reviews will be given each merchant, helpful services such as contacts to state and national government agencies will be provided the bona fide merchant. Cuts for a mark of identification will be provided the merchants for use to distinguish them in their newspaper advertising from the lesser concerned. This and more will be given in a $25 membership—which in itself sets apart the good merchant from the unconcerned.

The merchants will then be able to have an exclusive reputation marked APPROVED and this is a service which is philanthropic and non-profit so far as shares of stock, or earnings are concerned. A low budget of salaries will be paid the actual financial interests of the corporation and which in comparison to the possible earnings would be less than 10 per cent of the entire project. This means that 90 per cent will go into public beneficial programs. Such programs could be helpful to the local development and welfare of Emmitsburg—for interesting enough the Approved Merchants Administration, Inc., started in Emmitsburg and which town is construed as the HOME OFFICE—with the Washington offices being the executive administration business end of the Corporation. Emmitsburg merchants would profit by being friendly to the same cause and sympathetic

Farmers Advised

To Study Soil Bank Plan

Farmers should check with their county Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Committee before they take any action to participate in the soil bank, advises Chester S. Bradley, chairman of the State ASC.

Mr. Bradley says this is necessary because each farmer must enter into an agreement with the committee about the practices they are to carry out. The Agriculture Dept. is rushing more complete information on the soil bank to county committees as fast as possible.

Secretary Benson pointed out that, because it is so late in the season, the department is moving with all possible speed to make the soil bank available to those farmers who can take part this year. Before farmers plant next year's crops or make fall seedings of grain this year, the department will have a chance to review and study all provisions of the program in more detail. Then they can make any desirable changes before the 1957 soil bank gets under way.

with the program—all other merchants are not only welcome, but we would be proud to include them all.

Farmers who take part in the conservation reserve part of the soil bank can earn two types of payments: (1) A payment to cover most of the labor and other costs of setting up a conservation practice, and (2) an annual payment for the period of the individual conservation reserve agreement. Specialists figure the annual conservation reserve payment will average out nationally at about $10 an acre.

Maryland highways and scenic beaches can be more fully enjoyed if free of litter. Carry a litter bag in your car. Empty it in the Travel Trash Container provided by your service station operator. Help Keep Our Maryland Beautiful!

Air Cooling Usually Cheaper With 'Wet Bulb' Condenser

The key to operating cost of central home air conditioning is the way used to dispose of the heat taken out of the home. Heat disposal is done by the system's condensing unit—and one type of condenser may cost twice as much as another to do the same cooling job.

Sheldon Coleman, president of a manufacturing firm that specializes in air conditioning equipment for the home, explains that four kinds of condensers are in general use—air-cooled (dry-bulb type), air-cooled (wet-bulb type), cooling tower, and waste-water.

Mr. Coleman says, "In areas where there is plenty of water, where water rates are low, and where there are no restrictions on dumping the water after it is used, a waste-water condenser usually costs less to run. These conditions, however, are found in very few communities.

Water Consumption High
"With this type of system, water is drained off at an average rate of 90 gallons an hour for each ton of refrigeration. Since a small- or medium-size house will usually have either a two-ton or three-ton system, the amount of water consumed may run between 43,200 and 64,800 gallons a month.

"An air-cooled system of the dry-bulb type eliminates water bills, but it may substantially increase electric bills since the compressor motor must work harder and harder as the outside temperature becomes hotter. This method is most practical in areas fortunate enough to have unusually low electric rates combined with mild summer temperatures.

"The two other methods employ water conservation devices—the cooling tower and air-cooled condenser of the wet-bulb type. Both re-use water over and over again. The cooling tower, located outside, cools the water by letting outside air pass through it. However, dirt and other debris in the air are collected by the water and are carried along back with it to be trapped in the refrigeration machine, necessitating periodic cleaning.

Water Re-used
"The air-cooled condenser of the wet-bulb type—or evaporative condenser—forces a fine spray of water across the coil to remove the heat by evaporation. Aside from a small amount lost through evaporation and a small amount allowed to bleed off to carry away any airborne debris, the water is used over and over again. Compared with a waste-water system's use of 90 gallons an hour for each ton of refrigeration, the evaporative condenser uses three gallons.

"The evaporative condenser shows its greatest advantage in areas where the temperatures are high over long periods of time. However, as a general rule, it will always give the cheapest operating costs of any of the four systems except where an ample supply of cheap water is available for a waste-water system and there are no restrictions against dumping the used water."

Follow These Tips For Easier Painting

"Painting is easier than ever!" That's the good word from the nation's enterprising paintmakers.

As proof of the promise, Arthur W. Steudel, president of the Sherwin-Williams Co., points out that "modern paints can be applied with less effort, modern tools speed application, and modern techniques of painting eliminate many inconveniences formerly associated with the task."

"As a result of continuous research and testing," he explained, "our company has improved the brushing qualities of house paint to the point where you can paint as much surface with the same effort in two hours as you used to do in three."

Tools Simplify Task

Improved tools also help reduce the time and effort required for painting.

"For example," Steudel said, "you don't have to get down on your hands and knees to paint a floor nowadays. Thanks to a new long-handled paint roller, you can spread the paint while standing—and paint the floor much faster. "This long-handled roller is a great time and effort saver when you are painting ceilings, too."

Tricks Ease Job

New application tricks also make painting less disturbing to everyday family routine. By way of illustration, Steudel suggests the following technique when painting stairs.

Paint alternate steps in each flight. Follow up by painting the others when the newly painted ones dry. That way the stairs can always be used, and nobody will be inconvenienced while the paint is drying.

(Left) ROLLING PAINT on floors with a long-handled paint roller saves time and effort. It's a good tool for painting ceilings, too.

Protect This Freedom

Free labor is one of five key factors in America's unmatched economic progress. The other factors are freedom to dream, freedom to compete, screened management, and high investment in industrial tools. All are interrelated in the American success story. Take away one of these five factors and the other four cannot function successfully for long. The American citizen, born and reared in freedom, could not possibly produce to his full capability unless free to choose his job and to change jobs as he wished. Our private enterprise economy preserves free labor. This is a significant fact which everyone should think upon. When we examine the workings of Socialism we see that sooner or later it must conscript, control and regiment labor in order to make the Socialist production blue-print work. When a government makes the decisions on how much of what is to be produced—as Socialist governments do—it must be able to rigidly control the work force in order to meet the rigid production schedules. Example In England

England with its Labor-Socialist government elected in 1945 presents an excellent illustration of how a government is forced to control labor if it controls production. The British people understood the value of freedom. In years past they had become the foremost nation in Europe because they based their economic activities and their operations on freedom. In the beginning they had less land than Spain, Germany, France or Italy, and yet they forged ahead because they knew the value of freedom.

The Magna Charta is an indication to the determination of the British to have freedom. When Clement Atlee in 1945 was elected Prime Minister of England on a platform pledging that the government would take over the major industries of the nation, he made this significant statement: "No nation has yet succeeded in nationalizing its industries and at the same time avoiding compulsion of labor. But England shall avoid it."

Knew the Danger

The Atlee statement showed that he was aware of the danger of the compulsion of labor in a nationalized economy. It showed too that he was dedicated to freedom (although a Socialist) and determined to keep it. It is also significant that he was the Labor representative, and thoroughly dedicated to preserving freedom for labor. How long did he preserve it? The coal mines were all taken over by the Socialist government in January 1946.

In February 1947, 13 months later, England was confronted with a great coal famine. Half of all the wheels of industry stopped for want of coal. The people needed food, clothing, machinery, trucks, buses and everything that their plants would make. Yet here were half of all the wheels of industry standing still for want of coal—and the Socialist government responsible for the planning of production and the actual production itself.

Compulsion Required

Finally, as spring came and the heating needs were lowered, the government saw an improvement in the coal shortage. But as summer drew on Atlee knew awfully well he was going to face another coal famine when winter came. He knew the wheels of industry would stop again and he knew England couldn't stand it. So finally, in the summer of 1947, Atlee addressed his Labor-Socialist parliament, and said: "Give me compulsion of labor." The hated Control of Engagements Act was put into force.

Atlee didn't want to force compulsion on labor, but he couldn't escape it—which I think is pretty sound proof that it can't be escaped in any government-owned or controlled economy. Free labor is of great value to a nation as a whole, and it is precisely as valuable to the individual citizen as the value he places on freedom. In our country labor is free, free to organize, free to bargain collectively, free to choose, to seek, and to quit a job. All of us must be alert and wary of encroachments on this great freedom—which has been a key factor in making America the most wonderful nation on earth.

SPORTS AFIELD

By Ted Kesting

No matter how good or how expensive the rest of your tackle, it's that little hook out there on the end that holds and lands your fish. Or doesn't hook him because of poor design. Or breaks or bends because of poor material.

Anglers should be most particular about trout-fly hooks. Because of their small size and necessarily light wire, they must be of very good steel, with the right temper. Hooks on most lures, being larger and of heavier wire than those used with flies, can be and usually are of somewhat lower quality, but they still serve well enough for practical fishing purposes if they're correctly designed. For regardless of good steel and proper temper, if a hook is inefficiently designed it's bound to cause unnecessary misses. So let's see what is an efficient design.

Jason Lucas, angling editor of Sports Afield magazine, thinks that with artificials (including flies) you'll land most fish with a hook having what comes closest to a plain round bend. It's hard to buy such hooks, but you can generally alter them so they'll be effective as if originally made round. Hooks on nearly all lures are soft enough so that you can easily reshape them with a small pliers. Hooks on better-class flies are much harder, but can usually be reshaped without breaking. Remember that for practical purposes, a bend that's somewhere nearly round will serve just as well as one that's perfectly round.

The most important point about a hook is—the point. There are three types. A "rolled-in point" is curved toward the eye of the hook. It is best for some large hooks, especially in deep-sea fishing, and some fishermen like it on smaller hooks for use with natural bait.

On a "parallel point" the outside of the point is parallel to the shank. Hooks of this type are used on nearly all fresh-water artificials, including flies.

A third point is the "outpoint" where it is turned upward, away from the shank. With fresh water artificials, and especially with the small hooks used for trout flies, as slight outpoint will hook and land a much higher percentage of your fish than will a point of any other type. Every wiggle a fish makes while you're playing him must drive that outpoint in deeper and deeper.

Statistics Reveal Steady Growth Of Maryland

WASHINGTON — Maryland's population of registered passenger cars will increase by more than 473,000 and there will be a gain of 186,000 families in the state by 1965, according to a study by the nation's largest independent automobile finance company.

W. B. Benson of Washington, vice president in this area for Universal CIT Credit Corp., said his company's analysis of the expected growth in the state's population and in family income—without considering other important economic trends at work—points convincingly to higher levels of prosperity in the future.

Passenger car registrations by 1965, he said, should total more than 1.2 million, a 72 per cent increase over the 656,000 now registered.

The finance company official also forecast a population gain of about 25 per cent, or more than 365,000 persons by 1965. This would bring the state's population to more than 3.3 million. As for families, he foresaw a gain of 25 per cent, raising the total to more than 918,000 as compared with about 732,000 families now.

"Credit is a major force in maintaining local prosperity, particularly in view of the excellent payment record made by families in the state," he said. "Two out of every three automobiles are sold on credit. Its continued use in the sale of cars and other valuable consumer goods will continue to make for higher living standards, more convenience and greater comfort for American families."

Other encouraging factors in the automobile outlook, he said, are the rapid growth in two-car families, accelerated by the trend to suburban living; the sound record for credit repayment established by families purchasing cars; continued high levels of employment, income and savings; and more aggressive selling by automobile manufacturers and dealers.

Modernization of highways and streets, including relief of city congestion and provision for more parking facilities, the finance company official added, are vital considerations in view of the expected growth in auto registrations.

of the world. He doesn't believe that World War III will happen during our lifetime but if it does, the war will be for control of this fabulous wealth of oil. He says: "Arabia is where the United Nations' Headquarters should be located!"

Another very interesting man, one of the nation's greatest "fundamental physicists," is interested only in studying atoms. He thinks that our banks, factories, and stores are mere "peanuts"; and that I should not waste time studying them. He talks of the marvelous possibilities from rearrangement of atoms so as to make anything cheaply—perhaps life itself—and the securing of free power from or through the air.

Archaeologists Make You Think

Another interesting man is one who has just returned from excavating the great city of Carthage in Northern Africa. Here are found seven layers of cities, averaging from 75 feet, one below the other. All were once rich and powerful; all but the last have been destroyed. This man would not own any property in any vulnerable large city. He says: "The safest investment is a small, fertile, well-watered farm in the center of the United States." Based on all previous history, he foresees within 100 years a complete collapse of our "experiment with Democracy," to be followed by a dictatorship and later a monarchy.

My next choice is a famous parapsychologist from a leading university. He is studying the most advanced methods of psychic communication, including clairvoyance, telepathy, and other extrasensory powers. He hasn't much use for telephone wires or even present methods of broadcasting. To hear him talk, you would think we were still living in the "Stone Age," with little realization of our powers to think or communicate.

What Is Beauty?

My last visitor was a shabbily dressed man who had traveled over a 1000 miles to discuss "Beauty," which to him included architecture, paintings, music, jewelry, and even perfume. "These," he said, "are the few things which we find in the oldest tombs of the wealthiest Egyptians Pharaohs." He believes these are the best investments today. To enjoy these things, he claims that they do not need to be heard, or seen, or touched; but that Beauty is something we enjoy through our thoughts and that, like gravity waves, it can penetrate any enclosure.

When I praised certain rich men like Andrew Mellon for buying famous paintings and establishing great art museums, he considered me very materialistic and frowned on the thought that Beauty could be "purchased." His parting words were: "Read your Bible, especially the 21st chapter of Ecclesiastes and the 13th chapter of First Corinthians."

Looking Centuries Ahead

The actual Bible which I read was published in 1549 by my ancestor Rev. John Rogers, who later was "burned at the stake" in London for looking ahead. After reviewing these five visitors, I wonder if there may not be a time ahead of us when the possessing of something not now considered of value may be recognized as the only true wealth. The Old Testament prophets may have had it in mind when they talked about "Jehovah"; Jesus, when He talked about "Love"; and the Early Church leaders when they wrote of the "Holy Spirit." Most religions now use these words in their creeds; but very few of their followers, including those of us who call ourselves "Christians," treat these unseen forces as wealth. This is not surprising, as it took our ancestors a million years to awake to the power of electricity! It is even possible that the atoms of the physicists may also be "peanuts." I don't know.

I am inclined to believe that too many of us are wasting our lives in things that do not really help to give us health, happiness, or power. Perhaps real wealth is something that cannot be touched, or seen, or even deposited in a bank or kept in a safe-deposit box. I do, however, forecast that the time will come when it will be recognized that wealth is not what nearly everyone now considers wealth to be.

U. S. Leads in Life Expectancy
Says Health Information Foundation

The United States leads all other nations with a population as large and diverse as ours in high life expectancy at birth. Children born in the United States today can expect to live an average of nearly 70 years, the Foundation reports in its monthly bulletin. This represents a striking increase of almost 50 percent over the average life span of 47 years that prevailed at the turn of the century.

This addition of 23 years to the life expectancy of Americans can be traced to the marked progress in controlling infant mortality and deaths from communicable diseases, although in recent decades impressive strides have been made in reducing deaths from causes primarily associated with the middle and older ages. Advances in medical science and new drugs, plus the improved practice of san-

State Will Begin July 1 Collection Of So-Called "Unfair" Cigaret Tax

State Comptroller J. Millard Taves has announced that beginning July 1, 1956, the "Unfair Cigarette Sales Act" will be administered by the Maryland State License Bureau, headed by Edward J. Dyas, chief inspector.

This law was passed by the 1956 General Assembly in Annapolis upon an approval made by the Legislative Council as a carry-over from the 1955 session.

The law, and its provisions, was viewed favorably by the Maryland Wholesale Tobacco Distributors. They felt its enactment to be a safeguard to the sale of cigarettes in Maryland by curbing unfair competitive practices, bait advertising, and loss leaders.

Mr. Taves stated that beginning June 15, application forms, copies of the law, and regulations approved by the Attorney General of Maryland, will be available at the State License Bureau, 34 Hopkins Pl.

Regulations promulgated by the Comptroller will apply to the licensee and will be transmitted along with the license.

Mr. Taves pointed out that these licenses should be in the hands of the tobacco wholesalers and retailers with whom they are directly concerned by July 1.

He explained that all licenses are renewable May 1 of each year and will run from May 1 through Apr. 30 annually.

With a 10-month period involved in the initial administration of the new law, two licenses will be pro-rated while only one will be at full cost.

The no-pro-rating stipulation involves an additional Retailer Cigarette License called "A Special Retailer's Cigarette License," which must be secured in addition to the regular $25 annual license (which has been in effect for years) at a no-pro-rating cost of $2.50 license fee for the initial 10-month period.

Two other types of licenses are required by the new law and carry a pro-rating for the 10-month period. The first is a "Special Wholesaler's Cigarette License," which is new, and starts July 1. It will cost $250 per year, but, under the pro-rating feature, the initial 10-month period cost will be $208.33.

The second pro-rated license, also a new feature under the law, is called, "A Special Vending Machine Operators Cigarette License." It will cost $250 annually, but is pro-rated to $208.33 for the initial 10-month period.

Mr. Taves said that this special license will be required of anyone owning and operating vending machines or other mechanical devices for dispensing cigarettes on a 40 or more premises basis.

Local Cattlemen Purchase Blooded Stock

Local dairymen have recently made an initial purchase of registered Ayrshires, according to the Ayrshires Breeders' Assn. executive secretary, Chester C. Putney of Brandon, Vt.

They are Robert Gillelan and John D. Gartrell, both of Emmitsburg.

The transaction was recorded in the national office of the Ayrshire Breeders' Assn. in Brandon where complete records on all registered Ayrshires in the U. S. have been maintained since 1875.

Because of their ability to produce at a low cost an abundance of milk with an average butterfat test of 4 per cent, the Ayrshire breed of dairy cattle has become increasingly popular with dairymen throughout the country.

To remove a broken light bulb from the socket, once you're sure the current is off, press a damp bar of soap into the broken glass and turn left.

Save that old broom! Cut the bristles away, tie an old felt hat or scrap of carpet around the "business end," and you have a good floor polisher.

Worn-out toothbrushes are just the thing for scrubbing jewelry or brushing the leaves on your plant.

To get further use from linen tablecloths that are worn thin, dip them in a thin Perma Starch solution to toughen the fibers.

Your tea will taste even more delicious if you brew it for a full four minutes.

Old powder puffs are excellent for cleaning and polishing silverware. They won't scratch the delicate metal, can be laundered and used again.

Rev. Heary, C.M., Addresses Graduates Of St. Joseph's High

The following is the graduation address to the 1956 class of St. Joseph's High School delivered by the Rev. Vincent G. Heary, C.M., assistant pastor of St. Joseph's Church:

"Very Rev. Monsignor, Reverend Fathers, Sisters, parents and friends of the graduates and graduates of 1956. My dear graduates, today the goal of your youthful dreams has been reached. All the hardships and worries of the past four years fade away in the joy of your graduation. And as you pass from the guiding hands of the Sisters, who through the years have patiently trained you in the fundamentals of religion and learning, there is one particular thing they would ask of you—loyalty. Loyalty to God, loyalty to our parents, loyalty to the principles which you have been taught.

"It was away back in your early years that you learned the most important lesson that you can ever learn. And all the education, and the wealth and fame and honor that you may gather in the years before you will mean nothing, if you ever forget that lesson. It is the simple lesson, the answer to the question: 'Why did God make me?' and immediately the answer comes to each one, 'God made me to know Him, to love Him, to serve Him in this world, and to be happy with Him forever in the next.'

"There it is—life defined—Life defined, Life is God; life is living for Him. In that and that alone lies the whole story of human happiness. That is the sum of all wisdom. Alongside the wisdom of that little answer all education is as nothing. Out in your world of tomorrow, you will hear other formulas for life and success and happiness, but they will not do. They do not satisfy the very men and women who offer them.

You are fortunate in having studied in a Catholic school. For the end of education is the formation of character. Character rests on the basis of morality, and morality, if it is to have life and vigor is interfused with religion.

"And in our secular educational system, religion has been rejected. God has been excluded from the classroom. It isn't simply that religious teaching is shut out, what often happens is that irreligious teaching is permitted. To learn what materialistic science teaches—that is education. To learn all about Freud, not simply as a genius in psychiatry, but as an atheist, who taught all religion as illusion—that is education. But to acquaint our youth with the great prophets of the Old Testament or with the personality and principles of Christ, that is religion and must be bootlegged in, if it gets in at all. No one can disregard God and play a man's part in God's world. Unfortunately there are many, and their number is daily increasing, who live their lives without recognizing that this is God's world. And this exclusion of God from human thinking and living is at the root of the trouble in the world today.

"It was the fertile soil in which such social monstrosities, as Fascism, Nazism and Communism could germinate and grow. It is doing more than anything else to blight our heritage of Christian culture, which integrates the various aspects of human life and renders to God the things that are God's. This is God's world and if we are to play a man's part in it, we must first get down on our knees and with humble hearts acknowledge God's place in His own world. This, then, is your first loyalty—loyalty to God. Throughout your whole life, the things of God must come first, for you were made for God, and the only happiness you'll ever find in life will come from being loyal to God and His commandments.

"Your second loyalty is to your parents. They are proud of you tonight and may they ever remain so. You have graduated from high school, but you still have much to learn. Don't think that you know more than your parents. From the great school of life and experience they have abundant knowledge, and they have your interest at heart. So listen to their advice, obey them and you'll never regret it.

"Your third loyalty—to the principles of right and wrong, which the sisters have diligently taught you. You are graduates of St. Joseph's; you should be the exemplars of Catholic youth. As you go forth into your new fields of life, you will meet many who do not think of God, many who live only for the materialistic things of life, many who do not know why they are here or where they are going. Don't become like them, rather by your Catholic influence make them become like you.

"This thing that we call the struggle of life is for us something so different from what it is for the world. The world sees it so often as a mere physical and intellectual combat. In her philosophy it is the sound body and trained mind that fits one for life. But Christ tells us that it is essentially a spiritual battle, a fight between a man and himself!

"The real problems of life are problems of the soul. The only failures in life will be they whose education has not taught them the answer or—what is more tragic—they who having been taught the answers have gone away to forget.

"They may be successful in a worldly sense, but if they do not know how to meet temptation and sin, if they do not know how to brave sickness and death, how to rise above discouragement and failure, then there is no education at all. The only adequate preparation for life is the preparation that is spiritual—prayers, the Sacraments, the Grace of God.

"And thus, if in the Providence of God, you are not destined for great things in the worldly sense of the word, do not think for one moment that your life has lost thereby any of the elements of true greatness. You may never make the headlines, you may never be well-known in your own community, your sphere of activity may be as narrow as the confines of your own house, but you can still be great. For without any of these things you can still go out to do that which has been man's greatest work down through the centuries—you can go out to spread the influence of a good life.

"And so you go forth tonight with the best wishes and congratulations of each one here present. Remember, keep God first and you're on the road to success no matter where you go. Perhaps, my thoughts can best be summed up in the words of the poet:

I'd like to think when life is done,
That I had filled a needed post,
That here and there I'd paid my fare,
With more than idle talk and boast.

That I had taken gifts divine
The breath of life and manhood fine
And tried to use them now and then
In service for my fellowman.

I'd hate to think when life is through
That I had filled my round of years
A useless kind, that leaves behind
No record in this vale of tears.

That I had wanted all my days
By treading only selfish ways
And that this world would be the same
If it had never known by name.

I'd like to think that here and there
When I am gone, there should remain
A happier spot, that might have not existed
Had I tried for gain.

That someone's cherry voice and smile
Shall prove that I had been worth while
That I had paid with something fine
My debt to God for life divine.

STRENGTH FOR THESE DAYS
from The Bible

I shall bless the Lord at all times; His praise shall continually be in my mouth.—(Psalm 34:1.)

How may we bless and praise the Lord? Surely through acts of love and kindness to our fellow men—in seeking only the good that is God in all of us, striving to be of service, in His name, to those who need our help.

Flame Weeding Boosts Farm Output

LA JUNTA, Colo.—Often called "Nature's mortgage" on farm property, weeds can reduce production up to 30%, according to agricultural experts. Growing in irrigation and drainage ditches, they obstruct the flow of water and increase irrigation time and costs. Weeds along fence rows and other isolated areas contaminate nearby fields and can double the cost of cultivating and hoeing. They can also consume up to 35% of the food values in average farm soil, robbing crops of nourishment. Mounted on a tractor which tows a mobile liquefied petroleum gas fuel tank, the new weed burner illustrated can direct a 6- to 12-foot blanket of flame to clear a mile of dense weed growth per hour. Smaller models mounted on pick-up trucks travel three to five miles per hour and use only 40 gallons of LP-Gas (butane-propane) to destroy an acre of weed growth along the average ditch bank. Roadsides or plots with weed growth of lesser density can be controlled at lower cost figures. With such plants as water grass or bulrushes, growth can easily be controlled with three gas flaming applications per eight-month growing season. Research tests show, that after the third year, only one application is needed to maintain a desirable soil condition. Because it is safe, economical to use and available in all sections of the country, LP-Gas makes an ideal weed-burner fuel.
