Three Workmen Injured In Crash
Three Adams County men were injured at 2:30 o'clock Wednesday morning as a result of a tractor-trailer and cinder truck collision. The accident occurred five miles north of Emmitsburg on Rt. 15. Taken to the Warner Hospital by ambulance were C. Russell Rohrbaugh, Gettysburg Rt. 2, Pennsylvania state highway department road caretaker, and two members of his crew, Theodore J. Eckenrode, 28, Fairfield Rt. 2, and George Rhodes, 29, also of Gettysburg Rt. 2. Rohrbaugh suffered lacerations of the head, back and chest; and Eckenrode and Rhodes were treated at the hospital for head and chest injuries. The accident occurred as the cinder truck was parked in front of the Lloyd Troxell home, waiting for Mr. Troxell to join the crew to finishing cindering the roads made slippery by the snow. While the vehicle was parked, a northbound tractor-trailer, operated by Mahlon Masser, 32, Emmitsburg, left the highway and smashed into the rear and left side of the Rohrbaugh truck, upsetting the small vehicle. Pennsylvania state police said Masser told them he apparently fell asleep a few minutes before his heavy vehicle struck the Rohrbaugh truck. Damage was estimated by state police at $2000 to the tractor-trailer and $500 to the Rohrbaugh truck. One economist estimates that we will use about 415 billion barrels of crude oil between now and the year 2,000—more than one and one-half times the total oil discovered in the world to date. Lynch, Baltimore, were weekend guests of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Elder.

TV TODAY AND TOMORROW
By Ralf Hardester Feature Editor TV Guide

CBS AND CECIL B. DE MILLE are close to an agreement to stage an ambitious spectacular tentatively titled The Cecil B. De Mille Story. The spectacular is planned as part of De Mille's world-wide promotion campaign for The Ten Commandments... Frank Sinatra intends to film his new TV series for ABC at night, meaning 7 P. M. to 3 A. M. Frank says he works better that way. It will cost more, too, and he may find it difficult to round up a contented swing-shift crew. But that's the way he wants it... There's talk that NBC wants to move Caesar's Hour out of its present Saturday night period because of the too-heavy competition from the Lawrence Welk Show... NBC scheduled The Thirties for its Project 20 series in April, as a logical follow-up to the recent Jazz Age... Studio One will present a Cecil B. DeMille musical version of James Thurber's Many Moons early in February.

JAN CLAYTON MAY OR MAY NOT do a new film series next year, but she has definitely made up her mind not to appear in Lassie after this season. Enough is enough, she feels. Tommy Rettig may also leave the show. He's getting too big, and Lassie may find himself with an entirely new supporting cast... TV will cover President Eisenhower's inauguration with all the hoopla it gave the conventions. But The White House has ruled out any live coverage of the private, official swearing-in ceremony the preceding day... The U. S. public spent $3,550,000,000 on TV and radio sets, servicing and replacement parts in 1956—which is approximately $2,850,000,000 more than it spent on going to the movies... Marie Wilson will have no less than seven permanent supporting players in her projected new film series, the Marie Wilson Show... A test film has been completed... Bob Cummings will do a GE Theater episode, Too Good With A Gun.

JACK WEBB HAS YET TO sign the contract for those 78 additional Dragnet films, and he may never sign it. He's miffed with NBC for not getting behind the show with advertising and promotion... A new Screen Gems film series, Dr. Mike, will star Keith Andes. Test film has already been completed... There's a salute to RCA-Victor Spectacular in the works, to be produced for NBC by Ken Murray in the spring. Possible star lineup: Dinah Shore, Mario Lanza, Perry Como, Eddie Fisher, the original Benny Goodman Band, Elvis Presley — and Enrico Caruso's old records... Warner Brothers will start production soon on a 39-episode series of Mark Hellinger short stories... Two busy TV executives who had been trying for weeks to get together to talk about a new show finally got together They booked passage on the same plane flight to New York, had a nice eight hour conference in the air.

INCOME TAX FACTS No. 3
Tax Hints for Car and Home Owners

(This is one of a series of articles on federal income tax filing. These articles are based on information provided by the American Institute of Accountants, and the Maryland Society of Certified Public Accountants in cooperation with the Internal Revenue Service.)

Your home and you car may be the source of deductions that will lower your federal income tax. It is important to check all possible deductions because of the savings involved. If you are in the lowest bracket—20%—each $5 you can find in deductions may mean a dollar in your pocket. For persons with higher incomes the possible savings are even greater.

The interest on a mortgage is deductible on your federal tax return. In most cases, payments to a bank include both interest and principal; as the mortgage is reduced the interest is less and a larger portion is applied to the principal. Only the interest is deductible in the case of your residence.

Real Estate Taxes
Sometimes the monthly payment also includes an additional amount which the bank holds for the payment of taxes, insurance, etc. In this case the bank is acting as your agent in paying tax on your property. Real estate taxes paid by the bank for you are deductible as if you had paid them directly.

If your home had been damaged by fire, storm or flood, your loss not covered by insurance is deductible. The amount of the loss is calculated by comparing the fair market value of the property just before and just after the casualty. This loss, or the cost of the property, whichever is lower, is reduced by any insurance recovery to determine the loss for tax purposes.

When large amounts are involved it may be wise to have an expert appraisal made immediately after the casualty.

When You Sell a Home
You are not allowed to deduct any loss you may suffer on the sale of your personal residence. However, you may be required to pay tax on a gain resulting from selling the house at a profit.

If, however, you buy and occupy another home within one year, before or after, the gainful sale of your former home, you are not taxed on the gain at the time of the sale. Alternatively, you can start construction of a home within a year, and occupy it within 18 months after the sale of your old home. If the new home costs as much as you received for your old one (with allowances for certain "fixing-up" expenses), you are not taxed on the gain. If your new home costs less, the gain is taxable to the extent of the differences. In any

Deductible Auto Expenses
From the time you buy an automobile you begin to have other expenses which are deductible on your federal income tax return. Any state or local sales tax you paid on the car purchase is deductible. So is the cost of your license plates, state inspection fees and interest on an auto loan. A common deduction in many taxpayers' returns is for state gasoline tax. It is best to keep a record of your gasoline purchases during the year, but if you don't have such a record you can still make a reasonable estimate. If you had a collision, you may be able to deduct for the damage to your own car not covered by insurance. Although driving may have been faulty, you are entitled to the deduction if the accident was not due to your negligence.

Such a loss, or loss from fire, theft or other accidents is determined in the manner described above in connection with damage to a house. The instruction book which comes with your tax forms gives further information. Help is also available by telephone or at offices of the Internal Revenue Service. The Revenue Service urges you to consult a properly qualified advisor if you decide to seek outside help.

SENATE CLOAKROOM

By J. GLENN BEALL

On D-Day-plus 1, a unit of the Maryland National Guard which had been activated for World War II hit the Normandy beachhead with 1,000 men.

Less than two weeks later, after the bloody battle on the high ground which was later dubbed "Purple Heart Hill," there were only 192 unjured men who answered roll call.

But the enemy had been repulsed!

Heroism Found In All Units

Behind the valor and determination of that unit was a tradition which extended back to the Colonial militiamen who took up arms to win us our independence.

Strengthened by that tradition, the members of the Maryland National Guard have constantly served in such a way that the heroism I mentioned above has had counterparts in almost every unit in every war.

It is unfortunate, therefore, that the current investigation of the Nation Guard's training program has become confused by certain statements which appear to reflect on the integrity of that organization.

The Guard has always maintained its traditions of honor and courage, and our current task is to see that its strength is never weakened.

Letter Sent To President

Speaking of traditions, it was recently announced that the time-honored custom of using horse-drawn caissons in the military funerals at Arlington National Cemetery was to be abandoned because of financial reasons.

I immediately wrote to President Eisenhower, pointing out that the anticipated savings would be only about $77.90 per funeral and that I felt there surely ought to be some way in which we could include this traditional item in our $38 billion military budget.

Sentiments Expressed

My own belief that the symbolic burial ceremony should not be completely modernized has received widespread approval, and I would like to quote a few selections from some of the letters I have received on the matter.

"Is there no sentiment left in this terrible age?" — from the daughter of a Civil War colonel who was buried with full military honors.

"We're getting too streamlined; let us keep our gallant traditions!" — from a constituent.

"The sight of the six white horses pulling the caisson brought comfort to me" — from the widow of an officer whose body lies in the National Cemetery.

"It is heartening to know that our legislators are aware that many of the 'fringe benefits' that the Army rank-and-file are anxious to keep are not necessarily 'pocketbook' ones, but sometimes are those that have for many years contributed to making the Army a place in which a man is proud to stay" — from a soldier at the headquarters of the U. S. Army in Europe.

And, in conclusion:

"A country, much as it boasts of its progress, must have roots if it is to grow culturally and spiritually. America cannot sacrifice its heritage and every last vestige of its glorious past in the interest of efficiency and economy" — from a New York newspaperman.

In the Circuit Court for Frederick County, Maryland Herbert W. Eyler vs. Gladys E. Eyler No. 18,542 Equity The object of this Bill is to secure custody of Richard W. Eyler, minor son of the Petitioner, Herbert W. Eyler.

The Bill states in substance that the Petitioner, Herbert W. Eyler, and the Defendant, Gladys E. Eyler, were married on the 26th day of November, 1947, in Colby, Kansas, by Reverend C. H. Coppedge, a regularly ordained Minister of the Gospel; that subsequent to the said marriage the parties lived together as man and wife until sometime during the month of June, 1956, at which time the Defendant, without just cause, deserted the Petitioner and moved to 2521 West Third Street, North Platte, Nebraska; that one child was born as a result of said marriage, namely, Richard W. Eyler, aged eight years, who is residing with the Petitioner in Thurmont, Maryland; that the Petitioner is a resident of Thurmont, Frederick County, Maryland; that the Defendant is a non-resident of the State of Maryland, whose last known address was 2521 West Third Street, North Platte, Nebraska.

It is thereupon this 23rd day of January, 1957, by the Circuit Court for Frederick County, sitting as a Court of Equity, ORDERED that the Petitioner give notice to the non-resident of the object and substance of this Bill by causing a copy of the same to be published in some newspaper published in Frederick County once a week for four successive weeks prior to the 2nd day of March, 1957, commanding her to be and appear in this Court, in person or by solicitor, on or before the 18th day of March, 1957, and show cause, if any she has, why a decree should not be passed as prayed.

profits—in all his undertakings. This is a fundamental human desire. When it is multiplied by the number of people in America it is a powerful force, producing great volumes of goods and services. By permitting this profit motive a great degree of freedom, the American system is tapping the brain-power and the energy-power of all its people.

A 12-year-old boy doesn't like to mow the lawn at home — for free. But let the next door neighbor offer $2.50 for a lawn-mowing job, and the 12-year-old suddenly finds joy in mowing that lawn. Given enough lawns to mow, at $2.50 each, he will spend the entire summer working without complaint. And the money he earns comes from somebody else's exercise of the profit motive. The man next door may be a carpenter, a manufacturer or a lathe operator in the local wood-working plant; whatever his occupation, his brain-power and energy-power are driven by the human desire for rewards, where he is earning so much he can't afford to mow his own lawn. Other Systems Advocated

The opponents of the American profit-and-loss system are advocates of some form of Socialism—whether it be the Soviet-type Communism, the Swedish-type "Welfare State," or the present English-style "Conservative-Socialism." The irony is that after 40 years of operation, the Soviet-type Communism has produced a living standard only one-tenth as high as ours; in the so-called Swedish "Welfare State," the living standard is about one-third as high as ours; and in England where "nationalization" of basic industries has operated 12 years, the living standard is not quite half as good as ours.

The people who are determined to change the American system fundamentally, center their subtle and direct attacks on corporation or business profits—trying to make people believe they are unreasonable and that, therefore, the system is not good. To intelligently understand such propaganda, and thus reject it, we should examine some facts about business, to make better products, and more jobs.

Profits Facts

In the last year for which we have the official Commerce Department statistics, the national income was approximately 300-billion dollars. The net profit of all the corporations in America amounted to 5.9 per cent of this total income, or about 17.8 billion. Approximately 30 per cent of the remainder of the national income, or $90 billion, was paid into the various governmental units in taxes. That left $192 billion going to individual citizens in personal income.

And what about the corporation profits; where did they go? Three and three-tenths, or $9.9 billion, was paid directly to the stockholders—more than 12,000,000 people, most of them small town residents earning less than $7,500 a year. The other 2.9 per cent of the profit was ploughed back into the businesses—to buy new machines, to pay for research, to develop new production methods and new products, to expand plants, to help build new plants, and to make new and better jobs.

On Sales Dollar There is another way to measure corporation profits—on the sales dollar. In the last year for which we have official figures, the annual corporation sales in America totalled $508 billion. In spite of the belief of some people (and the propaganda) that profits run 12, 15, 25 and 50 per cent—the fact is that the profit on this $508 billion in sales amounted to 3.3 per cent.

On my desk is a recent annual report of a big packing company, showing the breakdown on its sales dollar: 73.2 cents of each dollar was paid for raw material—cattle, hogs, sheep; 13.1 cents was paid to employees in wages, salaries and benefits; 2.6 cents went for shipping costs; 5 cents for supplies, chemicals, packaging; 1.3 cents for taxes; 4 cents for plant maintenance and other necessary services for doing business. That left in net profit, eight-tenths of one cent on each sales dollar! And a substantial part of this went back into the business, to make better products, and more jobs. The alternative to the profit system is Socialism—with its loss of freedom and drastically lower living standard. We should all understand these and other facts about our profit system—and be strongly for it.

New Publicist For Phone Company

The appointment of N. Page Worthington as assistant vice president-public relations for the Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Company of Maryland, effective February 15, was announced this week by W. Griffin Morrel, C. and P. vice president.

Succeeding Worthington as general commercial manager is Frank W. Carey, general accountant in the operations division of the comptroller's office of the A. T. and T. Company in New York. Worthington, a graduate of Dartmouth College, entered the telephone business in Washington, D. C. in 1934 as a traffic student. He held positions of increasing importance in the traffic department until he joined the Marine Corps in 1944. He returned to the Washington Company as traffic manager in 1945, and joined the West Virginia Company in 1947 as district traffic manager in Charleston, becoming general traffic manager in 1952. He was appointed general commercial manager for the Maryland Company in September 1952.

During his residence in Baltimore, Mr. Worthington has been active in civic affairs. He is a member of the Baltimore Kiwanis Club, Baltimore Association of Commerce, Coordinating Council of Fund-Raising Campaigns, and has served as fund chairman for the Heart Association of Maryland. In addition, he is a member of the Baltimore Country Club, L'Hirondelle Club and the Merchants Club.

Carey is a native of Salisbury and a graduate of the University of Maryland. He entered the telephone business as a clerk in the Maryland Company's accounting department following his graduation in 1941. After holding accounting supervisory positions of increasing importance, he became traffic manager in 1951. He joined the general accounting organization in Washington in 1952 as a supervising accountant and later that year returned to Baltimore as auditor of disbursements for the Maryland Company. In 1954 he was made division commercial manager, and in 1955 resigned to accept his present position with the A. T. and T. in New York.

During World War II, Mr. Carey served on destroyers in both Atlantic and Pacific fleets and after three years was released as a lieutenant, senior grade.

SPORTS AFIELD By Ted Kesting

As all bass-fishing enthusiasts know, there are some days when you just can't make a dollar. Jason Lucas, Angling Editor of Sports Afield magazine, has a secret, though. It's the black eel lure.

Late last fall, Jason was fishing on a lake in northern Minnesota. One day, as he says, the bass there began reversing evolution—making monkeys out of men. They ignored everything except a spoon with a full-length rind, on which they couldn't be hooked. Then our boy tried a black eel lure and Bingo! — a six-pounder.

More tries with the black eel produced the same results. In a little over 2 hours, Jason landed 23 very good bass. He used the spoon and rind merely as a fish-finder; when one would short-strike, he'd switch to the black eel and cast back to where the fish was. He feels certain that he wouldn't have gotten a single one but for pulling that switch to the black eel. If he had stuck to the eel alone, he says he couldn't have covered enough water to let him get much more than three or four.

But there's another trick with the black eel. Anybody who fishes much for bass will occasionally hit a hotspot. Though fishing elsewhere may be poor, or entirely unproductive, this small area, usually no more than 50 feet or so across, will hold a great number—generally bigger ones—all feeding madly and easy to catch. With usual lures and methods, you can sometimes pick up your limit in a few minutes, and then keep on catching and liberating them, having the time of your life. At last, you seemed to have cleaned out the spot, put them either on your stringer or on their guard so that no more will strike. Then you usually go somewhere else. But next time this happens, put on a black eel. You'll find that they'll take it after they've stopped taking everything else.

KING-SIZE "DUSTPANS"—When the Lehigh Portland Cement Company starts operating its new plant at Union Bridge, Md., this mammoth battery of electrostatic precipitators will clean dust-laden gases before they escape into the atmosphere. Designed by engineers in the Baltimore plant of Koppers Company, Inc., which builds such equipment for a variety of industries, the installation consists of six large metal chambers—each as spacious as a five-room house—through which all dust-laden gases must pass on its way to exhaust stacks. The devices get their top-syllable name from the fact that, en route from kiln to stack, the dust particles receive an electrostatic charge which causes them to collect—to "precipitate"—on a maze of parallel plates that fill each huge chamber. From there the dust particles drop into disposal hoppers while the cleaned gas goes on out the stack. This photo of the Union Bridge installation shows the six precipitators in three stages of completion. The pair at the left already have outlet nozzles in place. The pair in the center are still open but the collecting plates are in place. These plates have not yet been installed in the pair at the right. On this job there are two precipitators for each of the three new kilns, one of which is the long, tube-like device in the right background. Each precipitator is approximately 25 feet high, 45 feet long and 12 feet wide. An idea of the vast size of the entire installation is given by comparison with the workman in the circle. The Union Bridge plant, when in full operation, will produce some 9,000 barrels of cement per day, making it one of the largest in the East.

BABSON

Writes . . .

By ROGER W. BABSON

Babson Discusses Retail Stores
Babson Park, Mass., Feb. 14 — I am concerned about the fate of the independent retailer in today's highly competitive markets. He is not keeping pace with chain store operators who spend large sums of money on new equipment, new lighting, intensive advertising and promotion.

Costs Have Skyrocketed

Independent merchants must pay just as much as the large chain operators for advertising space in newspapers and magazines. Often they must pay more proportionately for goods they stock because they cannot buy in such large quantities as the chains. Also, independent retailers are faced with increasing demands for higher employee wages and greater fringe benefits after these concessions are obtained initially by employees of big stores. Too many independent retailers have already succumbed to these pressures.

These chains have helped mightily, however, in bringing down the total cost of distribution. Their savings in buying, in window dressing and display, they share with their customers. They have made and are making a great contribution to the betterment of the American way of life.

What Independent Retailers Can Now Do

The independent merchant who prefers waiting on customers to waiting for his turn at golf has little to worry about. There always will be a demand for this personal attention on the part of certain customers. They are willing to pay for this personal attention as well as for credit and delivery. Of course, the independent merchant must be willing to advertise and secure a good location with plenty of show windows, always kept attractive. To believe, however, that he is destined to be pushed out of business by department stores or chain stores or mail order houses, is a mistaken idea.

Retailers can further be helped by the plans of the UNITED INFORMATION SERVICE with headquarters at 6 Maiden Lane, New York City. This service enables consumers to learn quickly (any time between 6:00 A. M. and midnight) where they can get any desired merchandise. This shortens the time between the consumer's reading of an advertisement and his getting into a retail store. Cutting this time in half has the effect of doubling retail sales. Furthermore, it enables a group of merchants to save the expense of keeping open evenings by co-operating to concentrate evening inquiries through one channel.

and the simultaneous expansion of our industrial economy give ample evidence that we can produce above and beyond our needs. The war needs of ourselves and our allies provided a challenge in production. Wealth in abundance, in form of goods and services, we have learned to produce.

However, we have been practically standing still in distribution, except for the development of the chain "5 and 10" variety stores, the chain supermarkets, and the chain drug stores. There however, is much more to be done.

Selling Our Goods Abroad

In addition to making plans for easier and cheaper movement of our production into our own domestic consumer channels, I forecast that we will also take steps to sell more American-made products abroad. These products are urgently needed in many parts of the world where disease is rampant because of food and other deficiencies. However, no plan has yet succeeded which would make surpluses in some nations available to needy people in other nations, without upsetting the economic balance between industrial countries or groups of countries.

We must help solve the problem of the growing imbalance between the "have" and the "have-not" nations. Communism has made great strides in Europe, Asia, and Africa largely because Soviet leaders have been so successful in pointing to the "selfish and wasteful" living standards in the U. S. American movies shown abroad are largely responsible for this. Positive steps toward solving the problem of international distribution would thereby remove the greatest grievance upon which Communism feeds.

WASHINGTON AND "SMALL BUSINESS"

By C. WILSON HARDER

Many independent businesses extend credit to their customers. But they try hard not to extend credit to deadbeats.

Yet government, in lending Britain another $500 million to offset losses due to their own foolishness in Suez situation, seemingly turns blind eye toward England's record as a credit risk.

During World War I, U. S. loaned England money. England still owes almost $8 billion on these loans. Less than half of this is due on unamortized principal. More than half represents defaulted principal and interest payments.

During World War II, U. S., through Lend-Lease, loaned England more than $29 billion. At end of war in 1946 this was cut down to mere $600 million, payable over a long term at a low 2% interest. U. S. government is paying more than 2% on money it borrowed to loan England.

Also in 1946, after debt was scaled down from $29 billion to practically nothing, England's then socialistic Labour Party government talked Washington out of another loan for $3 1/2 billion. Now England, due to the high cost of slaughtering Egyptians, wants to waltz on payment of an $81 million item of interest due on that loan.

In addition, since 1946, other loans or outright gifts made by U. S. to England in period from end of World War II until present total almost another $4 billion, not to mention another $1 1/2 billion forked over by RFC, Mutual Security Administration, other bureaus who can lay their hands on U. S. tax money.

Altogether in past 40 years U. S. government has taken from American taxpayers almost $42 1/2 billion to loan, give, or otherwise convey to England. Repayments have been only $4 1/2 billion. Not a very healthy record.

This current "Bucks to Britain" episode will likely loom large in forthcoming Congressional struggle to seek amendment of tax laws so small enterprise may keep part of profits for expansion and modernization to stay competitive.

In fact, it almost seems this new loan made to England with great haste for purpose of forestalling any Congressional tax cuts. It has often happened that way. "Boys," Congress is told, "You can't cut taxes now, because while you were not in session, we spent a lot of money that must be raised somewhere."

Of course, throughout history, bureaucrats have never advocated tax cuts. Theory of bureaucratic thinking seems to be that if screws are once loosened on taxpayer, it may be impossible to tighten them up again.

However, this time it could be different. President has already promised tax relief for small business.

And at grass roots level there is great resentment against U. S. policy of throwing tax money all over world in blind delusion this policy wins friends who can be counted upon. Repeated expressions of opinion by nation's small businessmen voting on mandates of National Federation of Independent Business shows this.

In addition, high-living, global thinking, free spending bureaucrats will have to come to this hard fact. The well is running dry. Dollar has now hit its lowest value in history. In event of war, this could be fatal, as even U. S. victory at arms would not stave off bankruptcy.

THE WORLD'S MOST WIDELY USED DEVOTIONAL GUIDE

Read John 8:12-20
That was the true Light, which lighteth every man that cometh

into the world. (John 1:9)
While I was passing Singapore
one night, the water was calm.
There were several lighthouses around. As I stood on our ship, I was fascinated by the fact that regardless of the direction from which they came, the beams of light from each lighthouse made a path of light to my feet.

It seemed as if the beams were for me only, until I realized they were for anyone who cared to see them.
If it were possible for all persons in the world to stand in any direction in sight of a lighthouse, the beams would reach all persons.
So it is with God's love; it is like a beam shining in every direction providing a two-way communication channel between God and us. God extends His love to every believer in the world and to the nonbeliever also. Christ has said: "All that the Father giveth me shall come to me; and him that cometh to me I will in no wise cast out."

Why a Tuberculin Test?
Sometime during the school
year your children may come home with the announcement that they are going to have tuberculin tests.
In more and more communities adults, too, are being asked to have this simple skin test. What's it all about?

A tuberculin test will show whether or not you have been infected with the germs that cause tuberculosis. It does not show whether or not you have the disease.

There are three major values in having this test. First, for the individual. If the skin test is positive, a chest x-ray and other tests can be made to find out whether you actually have TB. If you have, treatment can begin at once. The sooner treatment begins the better the chance for full recovery. If the disease has not developed, you're lucky. But more than that, you've had fair warning to take good care of your general health. Infection need not lead to disease unless you let down your body's defenses against TB.

The tuberculin test is also a detective device. For example, if a child has a negative reaction to the test one year and a positive reaction the next year, it's clear that he has come into close contact with an open case of TB.
Since a child's contacts are relatively few, health authorities can often track down that open case.
This is important protection for the health of the whole community.

The third value of the test is in tuberculosis epidemiology — a program, but legal snarls have prevented the Hospital from officially qualifying under present law.

big word meaning the broad study of how TB is spread among groups of people. Tuberculin testing of large groups of people at regular intervals adds knowledge important in planning national,
state, and community TB control
programs.
That's quite a lot of good to come out of a little prick with a needle. So, when you're asked to have a tuberculin test, stand up and take it like a soldier. You'll be helping defend yourself, your community, and your country against TB.

Conservation Reserve
Sign-Up Under Way
Through April 15, Maryland
farmers have an opportunity to sign contracts to put part of their cropland in the Conservation Reserve Program. The remainder comes from Leonard C. Burns, Chairman of the State Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Committee.

Essential points in the program which farmers should have in mind, according to the Chairman, are: Land put in the Conservation Reserve must be land
which otherwise would be in crops,
the same acres may not be put in both the Acreage Reserve and the Conservation Reserve Programs, the total acreage in crops on the farm must be reduced by the number of acres put in the Conservation Reserve, and a farmer is eligible to participate in the Conservation Reserve only if he does not exceed any acreage allotment established for his farm.

According to the committee farmers who participate in the Conservation Reserve must sign a contract to keep the designated acreage in an approved conservation practice for the required
period of years. Approved practices include protective vegetative cover, water storage facilities, or other soil-water-wildlife-or forest-conserving use.

No crop may be harvested from the land put in the Conservation Reserve. The only exception is timber from trees thinned out as required by sound forestry management, and wildlife.

Contracts run from three to five years if the land already is in approved cover, five to ten years
if approved cover must be established and ten years if trees are to be planted.

For participating in the program farmers may earn an initial payment representing up to 80 per cent of the cost of the practice and an annual payment
for the period of the contract,
which in Maryland, averages about $12 per year for each acre
under contract.
