GEORGE W. WIREMAN

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the fourth in a series of five articles on Chicago, the second largest city in the United States. This week the author deals with the tremendous task confronting the citizens of Chicago in rebuilding the city following the disastrous fire of 1871.

Last week I covered the great Chicago fire of 1871 and stated that on Tuesday, October 10, 1871 the citizens set out to survey the damage and to take care of the suffering of its victims.

The burnt area as previously stated, extended North and South for four and three-quarter miles, and had an average width of one mile. Within these limits there were only smoking ruins.

The fire itself had destroyed property valued at $200,000,000. There were some 90,000 people left homeless and some 300 had lost their lives because of it. The common designation, the "Great Chicago Fire" is indeed an understatement; it was the most dis-tructive fire in American history. On October 8, 1871 the Mayor of Chicago, R. B. Mason, issued the following proclamation:

"In consequence of the great calamity that has befallen our city, and for the preservation of good order, it is ordered by the Mayor and Common Council of Chicago, that no liquor be sold in any saloon until further orders. The Board of Police are charged with the execution of this order."

In nearby Rock Island, Mayor E. Carter issued the following statement:

"To the people of Rock Island: The homeless and starving citizens of Chicago call for cooked food. Let every family in the city cook food and deliver it at the court house (for the 1st and 2nd wards) and at the depot of the Chicago Rock Island and Pacific railroad company, (for the 3rd and 4th wards) by five o'clock this evening. Boiled and roast meats, hams, poultry and bread are particularly desired. It is necessary to send a car load by the evening train."

"A meeting of the citizens will be held at the court house at 12 o'clock today to appoint committees and organize. Let all attend."

And so the work began, looking after the citizens who had managed to escape the fire itself, but only with the clothing on their backs and a few personal belongings.

On October 14, 1871, the D. M. Osborne & Company sent the following letter to its many agents and friends, and in it can be found a trace of the determination that was to play a great part in the re-building of the city. Chicago Not Yet All Destroyed!

"To our Agents and Friends: 'GENTLEMEN . . . The story of terrible destruction by fire in this city, from last Saturday night to Monday night, cannot have failed to reach you. We dare attempt no description of it. No history will ever be written, no picture ever painted that will convey to those who did not witness it, more than a faint realization of its utter devastation.'"

"We print this on our little press in our office, as the most available means of informing you that WE ARE SAFE; that the fire was not in the vicinity of our warehouse, and our only losses are through other parties who are sufferers."

"We are adding our 'mite' to the bounteous charity of the whole world in aid of the suffering, and hope to promptly receive from all who are indebted to us . . . and who are not sufferers . . . that which is due."

"Remittances, for the present, should be made in currency by express, drafts on New York, or in Post Office orders; as all drafts on Chicago for a time will need to be returned, causing great delay, inconvenience and loss of the use of money."

Very respectfully, Daniel Ransom D. M. OSBORNE & CO. With the contributions pouring in from all over the country and from foreign countries as well, the citizens of Chicago were most grateful. Knowing that the rest of the nation was thinking about them in their hour of need, these brave citizens became more determined than ever, to make the best of this disaster and begin at once to rebuild the city.

On November 10, 1871, in a letter written by Mrs. Anna E. Higginson, wife of George M. Higginson, a real estate broker of Chicago, mention was made of the re-building. She had this to say regarding it.

Nothing can describe the desolation which reigns over the whole North Side and nothing can be more depressing, unless it be the efforts at restoration upon the South. To see the lines of rough sheds which are taking the places of all the magnificent buildings destroyed is simply heart-breaking. Chicago is thrown back now to where it was twenty-five years ago and I for one do not expect to see it restored to where it was a few short weeks ago. The men of Chicago are heroes; their energy, cheerfulness and determination are something almost sublime, but I feel many a brave heart will sink under difficulties utterly unsurmountable."

But it was here that Mrs. Higginson was wrong. The energy, cheerfulness and determination of which she wrote of the men of Chicago did not sink. Within two years after the fire, bare ground in the business section was worth more than the same land, with buildings on it, had been worth before the fire.

In the same short period the value of the city's manufactures doubled. By 1875, few traces of the great catastrophe were to be found. In spite of the fire and a major depression, Chicago's population rose from 300,000 in 1870 to 500,000 in 1880, and then leaped to more than a million at the turn of the century. By that time it was clear that the fire, while destroying lives and property, had also spurred an ambitious, hard-working people to produce a greater, fairer city, that in time would become the second largest in our nation.

In my last and final article on Chicago next week, we shall take a look at Chicago as it is today. The city that refused to die because of a great fire that destroyed almost everything but their energy and determination to rebuild a city even greater than the one that had been destroyed.

The spirit and determination of the citizens of Chicago will long be remembered and lives in the hearts of the citizens of this great city today. It is this same spirit and determination to build that has made Chicago what it is today. The best Chicago can do for her people is the best that can be done anytime, any place, and by anybody. If you doubt this writer's word, ask any citizen of Chicago and you'll get the same answer. Yes, Chicago has a lot to offer and next week we will dwell on these offerings and see Chicago as she really is today, the second largest city in the United States.

Track Team Wins

Although winning but three events, the Mount St. Mary's College track team had too much depth for their opponents as it won the 24th annual Catholic University invitational track meet at Washington, D. C., Saturday with a total of 52-2/3 points.

Other team scores were: American, 48 1/2; Catholic 36 1/2; Gallaudet, 15 1/2 and Western Maryland, 13.

Scoring victories for the Mount were Duncan Bossle in the broad jump; Mike Roche in the 120 high hurdles and Dick Lloyd and Dean Marraccini who tied in the high jump.

Mt. St. Mary's won its second straight track victory Tuesday by easily defeating American University 73-49 at Washington, D. C. Duncan Bossle was a double winner for the Mountaineers, capturing the 100-yard dash in 10.1 and the broad jump with a leap of 20 feet, 2 inches.

The Mountaineers' next engagement will be with Washington

College at Chestertown, on Saturday, April 23.

Read Matthew 5:43-48.
The Lord hath appeared of old unto me, saying, Yea, I have loved thee with an everlasting love. (Jeremiah 31:3).
Many years ago I took a little friend from another country to see that wonder of God's creation—Niagara Falls. He was terrified when he saw the rushing waters. He refused to go near. So we left the Falls and went for a walk.

A few hours later we returned to the same place. He was willing to go a little closer. As he looked at the water, his remark was: "It hasn't all gone over yet."
That remark reminded me of God's constant love and care-homush He has given and sent out, and still enough yet for every one of us. Divine love is constant by day and by night. Our shortcomings are as rocks and our sins as barriers, but the love of God flows around us and over us and goes with us all the way.

Prayer
For Thy love which never changes, our Father, we thank Thee. Establish us in faith in Christ so that we are no longer turned with the tide of everyday living. Keep us, we pray, always in Thy care and in the knowledge that Thy great love sent Jesus Christ to be our Saviour. Forgive us our sins and redeem us through Him, who suffered that we might have life eternal. For His sake. Amen.

Thought For The Day
God always cares for us; it is to our shame when we reject Him.

Trading Stamp Popularity Shows Increase

Trading stamps are now saved by more than three out of four eastern U. S. families, (77 per cent).

Results of a recent nationwide study conducted by the Princeton, N. J. research firm of Benson and Benson show that 77 per cent of all U. S. families are now saving trading stamps, an increase of 10 per cent over 1958.

The findings were recently disclosed by Jackson S. Smith, Jr., northeast district manager for the Sperry and Hutchinson Company, oldest and largest trading stamp firm.

Among interesting bits uncovered by the survey were that upper income housewives in 74 per cent of families earning more than $7,000 a year save trading stamps. The percentage of savers in this group is greater than the number of savers among families in the $3,000 income group—reported as 71 per cent.

And, according to Benson and Benson, homemakers with three or four children are the most enthusiastic savers. Mr. Smith explained that these women purchased more food in supermarkets, and thus acquired stamps more readily. He said that stamp enthusiasm increases in proportion to the number of times a person redeems stamps for merchandise.

To no one's surprise, the researchers found that women like stamps more than men. Only 19 per cent of the males queried in the survey reported that they dislike stamps and they think "they're not worth it." Seventy-one per cent of men say they like the stamps.

Mr. Smith said that similar studies were conducted by Benson and Benson in 1957 and 1958. He added that the 1959 survey showed that nearly half (48 per cent) of all U. S. families are saving S&H Green Stamps specifically.

Shenandoah Downs Has Big Race Set For Tomorrow

CHARLES TOWN, W. Va. — Peter Vischer's Arch Rival looms today as favorite for Saturday's second running of the Inaugural Handicap, opening night feature at Shenandoah Downs.

The night track here opens its third meeting, a 31-night stand, with the 5½-furlong Inaugural topping the nine-race program. Post time throughout the spring meeting will be 7:15, half an hour earlier than in 1959.

A field of seven is expected to oppose Arch Rival in the feature, with Francis Harding's Effie J. appearing as the outsider if she goes. The three-year-old, a $77 winner at Bowie, would have to give away age to the older horses, but her owner thought her speed from the gate, plus a weight advantage might move her up.

The Inaugural, won last year by George W. Parker's Sand Boy, will be run as the eighth race on the program.

Shenandoah Downs, built last year at a cost of more than $4 million, will stage nine races nightly during the spring meeting. Reservations for clubhouse dining may be made by telephoning Charles Town 1000.

Passenger car advertisers invested over 13 per cent more in newspaper advertising in 1957 than in the previous year.

FOR THE SEASON of romance, Pat Boone has inspired a collection of Advance patterns named "Twixt 12 and 20." The one pictured above is pattern No. 9111, featuring Talon's Magic Zip skirt placket zipper. "Are you credited for the social security taxes you pay?" W. S. King, Manager of the Hagerstown Social Security Office, asked today. Make sure you are, because improper reporting of wages or self-employment income now may mean loss of benefits later.

Most people will need credit for several years work to qualify for payments when they retire. To make sure the record is right, a check every three years is recommended.

"It is much simpler to correct records if an error is caught within this period," Mr. King continues. However, it is better still to keep the record straight from the beginning. Self-employed people who had a business profit of at least $400 in 1959, must report their earnings for social security purposes on a regular Federal income tax return by April 15. The worker's correct social number should appear on his return. Those who work for wages should make certain their employers are reporting their wages correctly. To do this, the employer must have the worker's name and number exactly as they appear on his social security card.

He said, "If you haven't checked your social security record in you do so." A postcard form for the last three years, I suggest this purpose is available at our office at 59 North Cannon Avenue.

He that hateth his brother is in darkness and walketh in darkness and knoweth not whither he goeth, because that darkness hath blinded his eyes.—(John 1:11.)

But in giving a sincere pleasant smile; in doing a kindness; in being thoughtful, considerate; in simply holding good thoughts about others—in these small, easy ways we will ever walk in glorious light.

SPORTS AFIELD

By Ted Kesting

Ever since kit boats came into widespread popularity, yachtsmen and landlubbers alike have been arguing over their merits. Obviously, the main reason a man builds a kit boat is to get a boat cheaper than he could buy it for already built.

We have three broad classifications that most all kit boats fall into: frame kit, pre-cut parts kit and factory finished hull kit.

The frame kit is the simplest type of kit. Here we notice that factory-assembled frames constitute the main items that are supplied with this kit. Some companies include the built-up stem and transom, and sometimes transom knees and a breasthook. With this type of kit the builder does most of the work, and he will require and get a very complete set of plans and building instructions. Beyond these items, the man building a frame kit must purchase the necessary lumber and fastenings himself. To help with the ordering a list of materials is usually furnished. In all probability, the lumber, plywood and fastenings will cost more than the kit itself.

More manufacturers are turning out pre-cut parts kits than any other type. It probably follows that this is the most popular type of kit with the average man. All the parts and fastenings necessary to build the boat are supplied. This kit normally comes to you with each of the necessary frames completely assembled and machined at the factory; the fabricated stem and built-up transom ready to install; and all the necessary lumber and plywood pre-cut to exact size.

In addition to lumber, the pre-cut parts kit brings you all the necessary screws and fastenings, in the right sizes, to put the whole boat together. Seam comound to go between the underwater joints, or marine glue is included, and usually a very clear set of instructions and assembly drawings are provided.

Gordon P. Manning, a feature writer for Sports Afield Magazine, says many men have the feeling that it is very difficult to build a boat that will not leak. The factory-built hull kit solves this problem for them nicely, letting them do just the trim, decks, seats and finish work on their craft. All of which is above water!

In this kit, the completed hull (fiber glass, molded plywood or whatever) is received with the pre-cut pieces or lumber required to finish up the entire boat. Fastenings, screws, seam compound, are all included.

Naturally, this type of kit is quickest to finish, because over half the work is finished before it left the factory. As far as tools go, there will be need for fewer tools in this kit than the other two, and less knowledge of woodworking. The factory-finished hull kit will be the most expen-

4 Tips from Pat Boone How To Get Along With Parents

"When I was a boy of fourteen, my father was so ignorant I could hardly stand to have the old man around. But when I got to be twenty-one, I was astonished at how much the old man had learned in seven years."

In his best-selling book, "Twixt Twelve and Twenty, teen-age idol Pat Boone recalls Mark Twain's famous quip, and adds his own ideas on how relations between parents and teen-agers might be improved. Although Pat is the father of four daughters, he is not too long out of his teens. As he puts it, "I've got a first class view of both sides."

Most of the friction and heart-ache develops because both parents and teen-agers don't really try to understand one another, he insists. While parents should mix sympathy with discipline, teen-agers can help improve relations with a few rules of their own. Pat Boone urges teen-agers to:

1. Try a little empathy. That is, put yourself in your parents' shoes. How would you act in their place?
2. Give parents credit for having once been young. Talk to them about their own youth and problems. If you feel yours are different, discuss them reasonably, and try to work difficulties out.

3. Try to imagine life with a different set of parents. In your imagination "move in" with some of your friends' parents. You'll soon discover that every home has restrictions and no parents are perfect by any teen-age yardstick.
4. Dime insurance. The "staying-out-too-late" conflict can often be avoided if you relieve your parents' justifiable worries about where and how you are with a dime handy for such a call.

Parents, too, have responsibilities to avoid making home a constant battlefield. Pat Boone, who at 25 is a top entertainer, a successful husband and father, and active church worker, has much to say on this, as well as on such problems as petting, earning money, making friends, preparing for marriage.

Pat Boone

"Twixt Twelve and Twenty, written frankly and with intimate knowledge of his audience, sold half-a-million copies as 1959's top non-fiction best seller. Now in a 35¢ paperback edition from Dell, it is reaching millions more on "both sides" of the great teen-age debate.

SPEAKING & CARDS

CARD ETIQUETTE

Most people find card games are fun and relaxing. But an unfortunate few seem to forget their manners once they sit down at the card table.

See if you can recognize anyone in this cast of card characters:

Take the "impatient type," for example, who sighs audibly when you're a little bit slow in playing your hands. Sometimes this card character is also known as the "drummer boy" for his habit of nervously tapping the table with his fingers while you're trying to concentrate on the next play.

Then there's the "I-can't-wait-to-get-started" character who has the annoying habit of arranging his hand, card by card, as each is dealt. He apparently never learned it's considered good manners to wait until every player has been dealt his cards before he picks up his hand.

Or how about the "dreamer," the original absent-minded Bridge player, who has to ask for a complete review of the bidding simply because he has allowed his mind to wander and hasn't been paying attention to the game? His popularity at the card table is always on the doubtful side.

But perhaps the worst card character of them all is the "critic." He's the one who can't refrain from making a caustic comment, arguing over a card that should or should not have been played, and showing his annoyance when a partner makes a poor play or when an opponent makes a good one. To top it off, the "critic" is usually the first one to gloat if he's dealt a particularly good hand.

Maybe you are not listed among this cast of card characters but you might still be guilty of another serious breach of card etiquette if you expect your guests to play with old, dog-eared "prehistoric" playing cards. It's much pleasanter to play with crisp clean cards and it makes shuffling and dealing easier too.

A number of ingenious ways for you to use up those old decks as party decorations and playthings for the children are illustrated in a new free leaflet called "New Uses for Old Cards." For your copy, send a card or letter to Playing Cards, Dept. NU, 420 Lexington Avenue, New York 17, N. Y.

STRENGTH FOR THESE DAYS
from the Bible
This poor man cried, and the Lord heard him and saved him out of all his troubles.—(Psalm 34:6)

What is our attitude when we pray? Are we telling God what we want, and why and when we want it? Do we ask that His will, not ours, be done? When we come humbly and penitently to Him, firm in our faith, seeking only His mercy and His love, we are never denied.

Which tire is BEST for you?

Buying the right tire is as easy as B-F-G!

- B-F-G "HT" Silvertown
This Extra Smileage tire is best for drivers who pile on the mileage, can take advantage of its economy. For only 10% more than a new-car tire, it delivers 22% more mileage. Extra quiet rubber, too.
- B-F-G Long Miler
Best bet for 'round town drivers who don't travel the superhighways, or don't often speed it up. Same tread design as the new-car Silvertown but the body's not quite as rugged . . . and we don't recommend it for constant high-speed driving.
- B-F-G Silvertown
By far the best tire for Normal driving. Tough Tyrex cord body. Big tread puts lots of non-skid rubber on the road. Built to give more Smileage for drivers who take a few long trips each year, hundreds of short ones, and a lot of city-country, all-around driving.

Electrical Heating Shows Popularity

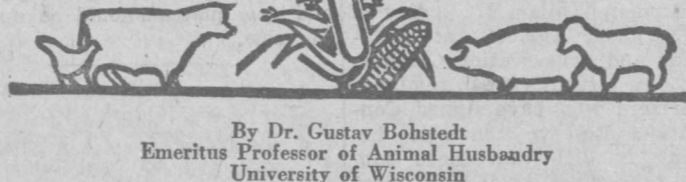

Planning to buy or build a new home? Give some thought to heating your new home with electricity, and thereby qualify for the Gold Medallion. The advantages of electric heat are many. Since no fuel is burned, electric heat is clean. There's no need for furnace space—a furnace isn't used. It's completely efficient, because there is no heat from a furnace to escape up flues and chimneys, and temperatures can be controlled in individual rooms. Families who are considering installing electric heat won't be pioneer by any means. A survey by a leading business magazine shows that more than a half-million homes in the nation today—500,143—are being heated by electricity. Further, the National Electrical Manufacturers Association predicts that nearly 3,000,000 homes will be fully heated by electricity by 1965. Several electric heating systems are available, including the heat pump, which automatically switches from winter heating to summer air conditioning. But by far, the most popular system is direct heating, in which current passes through a resistance wire. This system is available in a wide variety of styles, including the wall insert panel, with colored coiled wires around a ceramic core, a wall-mounted radiant heater, heating cable embedded in ceiling plaster, and baseboard heating. Heavier insulation makes electric heating economically feasible by keeping the heat inside. Most utility companies and manufacturers of electric heating equipment recommend six-inch thick insulation in ceilings at least three inches in walls, and two inches in floors over unheated areas, such as porches, garages and crawl spaces. Here are the reasons why:

1. Electric heating can be installed quickly and efficiently. There are no ducts or pipes from room to room, and most heating components are built into a wall or ceiling or fit closely against it. Consequently, there's little mess and a minimum of labor.
2. In an older home, rooms that are difficult to heat with an outmoded heating system can be made comfortable for even the most particular member of the family.
3. When a new room is added and complete electric heating system for the entire house is not desired, the new room can be given an electric heating system of its own, utilizing one of a number of equipment types available.

Silage Can Be Transferred

There are times, such as after a farm sale, when it may be desirable or even necessary to take silage out of one silo and put it into another silo. A good many people facing this prospect fear that a lot of spoilage may take place. From our own experience there need be no fear of spoilage if ordinary precautions are taken. This is true provided the silage had been put up correctly in the first place. We have transferred silage during both winter and summer, and with good success. The silage in both cases was corn silage, put up when beginning to dent and when the green corn was still rather succulent. In other words, it had packed well at the first filling, and would pack well again on being transferred to another silo.

ess of filling. We did not trust mere leveling off between loads. The silage so relocated appeared to be as good as before and the cattle consumed it with relish. There were no mold pockets or other forms of spoilage. While this was our favorable experience with corn silage, there seems to be no reason why similar good results could not be obtained with grass silage or any other kind of silage, provided, as stated before, it has kept well in the first place. The original quality of the silage, therefore, is of greater importance than the kind of weather, either hot or cold, during which the silage is being transferred.

Question: Can twin lambs be made to gain as rapidly as single lambs by using specially fortified creep rations?

Answer: It was demonstrated at Purdue University that this could be done. Previous to the pasture season (Feb. 1 to May 4) twin lambs had access to creep rations made up of corn, soybean oil meal, alfalfa meal, sugar, bonemeal and iodized salt. This was fortified with a premix containing aureomycin, thiamin, riboflavin, niacin, calcium pantothenate, vitamin B₁₂, ascorbic acid, tocopherol, vitamin A, vitamin D, iron sulphate, copper sulphate and manganese sulphate.

winners may grace the starting lineup in this Saturday's 40th running of the Chesapeake Stakes at Laurel as the popular Baltimore-Washington race track reaches the half way point of its spring meeting ending May 3. Of the 34 sophomores nominated for this $25,000 added mile and furlong classic, which has long served as a proving grounds for any Derby-minded three-year-old, seven are viewed by Racing Secretary Charles McLennan as good bets to start in this year's classic.

Included in this select category are the Elkcam Stable's Keenation, purchased last winter from the Calumet Farm; Cecil B. Fischbach's Ft. Dodge; Harry Nichols' Foreign Land; Mrs. Ada L. Rice's New Commander, second in the Gotham Stakes last week; Tuckahoe Farms' Persian Gold; Valley Farms' aptly-named Yomolka and Alfred Vanderbuilt's Idolater.

Others expected to take a shot at the Chesapeake, won by Mrs. Ada L. Rice's Rare Rice last year under jockey Joe Culmore include William Hal Bishop's Playgoer; Daphne Collings' Timberlane; William G. Helis Jr's Vix Pop; Walter Jeffords' Merganser; Larry O'Brien's Trogan Jewel; James Robertson's Primastone; Bayard Shrap's Rich Talk, and Jousett Shouse's Tuscan.

That puts the possible field at fifteen but the usual last minute defections may reduce the final lineup to twelve or less. However, prospects at this point indicate one of the best Chesapeake in years both from the standpoint of class and competition.

"You have what we call 'Taxpayer's Syndrome'—Limp, lifeless and lethargic!"

YOUR PERSONAL HEALTH

Overweight But . . .
In our younger days we used to go to the opera mostly for laughs. That was the time of heavyweight sopranos, when it was a brisk five-minute walk around Madame Diva's waistline. We found it especially comical when the mammoth singer languished in bed, coughing pathetically until she died of "consumption."

Those days are gone. The singers are svelt now. And the notion that someone can be stout and "consumptive" is not at all funny, because it is true. We call the illness tuberculosis nowadays. We don't use the term "consumption", partly because our ideas about the disease have undergone quite a shift. We no longer think of TB victims as being "consumed" by their illness, so that they become mere shadows. It is possible to be overweight and still have tuberculosis.

It is impossible to tell just by looking at somebody whether he has tuberculosis. Many TB patients don't cough at all. Some are husky-looking, fat, with good color in their cheeks. TB germs can be active and doing damage without giving any outward signs whatever. That's why controlling tuberculosis is such a complicated problem. TB's victims often don't know that they have it and are infecting others.

The only way of being sure about tuberculosis is to have a tuberculin test and, if result is positive, a chest X-ray. Ask your doctor about it at your next check-up. This column is sponsored in the interest of better health by your Tuberculosis Association.

Secret Ingredients

If cooking is a chore to you, that fact will show up in the flavor. A loving heart and imagination are necessary if you are going to be a memorable cook. One way to express this is through sauces. Here are some easy ones that will give variety and memorable flavor to some of your family dishes.

Broiled or Baked Fish: Add 1 tsp. Worcestershire, 2 tsp. finely chopped chutney, 2 tsp. chili sauce to 6 Tbsp. creamed butter. Mix well.

Roast Lamb: Orange Mint Sauce— Combine 1/2 cup fresh or dried mint, chopped fine, with 1/2 cup strained lemon juice, 1 level Tbsp. powdered sugar, salt to taste, dash of pepper and nutmeg. Let stand in warm place on hour before serving. Then add 1/2 tsp. grated orange rind. Serve with Lamb.

Ham: Melt Damson plum preserve, pour over ham before baking, baste frequently. Fresh orange juice is also an excellent ham baste.

Roast Chicken: Add 1 to 1 1/2 tsp. dried Tarragon to 1/4 lb. soft butter. Or melt butter, add Tarragon. Baste frequently.

All Purpose: Combine 3 parts softened butter, 1 part Lea & Perrins Worcestershire. Cream until blended. Use as sauce for steak, chops, fish or vegetables. Also fine for frying, sauteing. Can be wrapped, stored in refrigerator like regular butter.

For recipes using Worcestershire in baking, write Lydia Perrins, Room 1010, 28 West 44th St., New York 36, N. Y.

State Needs More Troopers

The Commissioner of Personnel has announced that a written examination for Trooper, Maryland State Police will be held on May 18, 1960 at the State Office Building in Baltimore.

Anyone interested in filing for the position must complete and return an application to the Commissioner of Personnel, State Office Building, 301 West Preston Street, Baltimore 2, Maryland, no later than April 27, 1960.

To qualify for the position, an applicant must meet the following basic standards:

21-31 years old (an applicant may take test when he is 20, but cannot be appointed until he is 21; he must not have reached his 31st birthday at time test is given).

Minimum Height—5'-10" (without shoes); weight in proportion to height and age; U. S. citizen and a bona fide resident of Maryland for at least 6 months prior to taking test; high school graduate or equivalent; possession of valid Maryland motor vehicle operator's permit; excellent physical condition; good moral character; and either single or married.

Salary—$3,450 yearly and subsistence allowance, plus longevity credits every three years.

Applications may be obtained from the Office of the Commissioner of Personnel, the Maryland State Police Headquarters in Pikesville, or at any Barrack or Post throughout the State.

Baseball Practice Sunday

The initial practice of the 1960 for players on the Emmitsburg baseball team will be called for Sunday afternoon, April 17, following the local Easter egg hunt.

President Joseph W. Sullivan of the local ball club, asks all players and interested individuals to be present at the ballfield between 1:30 and 2:00 o'clock.

The Pen-Mar League, of which Emmitsburg is a member, begins regular season play on May 1. Business Manager Norman Flax invites all local young men interested in playing for the team this year to be present at the practice Sunday for tryouts.

Embattled Family Discovers: Pitched Roof Only Escape From Clam-Loving Gulls

ISLAND PARK, N. Y.—Long Island's dive-bombing sea gulls don't know it yet, but it looks like they've lost the battle of the flat roof in this seaside community.

Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Martin are considering having a new pitched roof erected over their contemporary flat-roofed home to foil the hordes of gulls that have been bombarding the house with fresh clams day and night for nearly a year.

The new pitched roof would solve the problem because the falling clams will glance harmlessly off to the ground.

The Martins' troubles are the result of the fact that their house is the only one with a flat roof in the entire 500-house community.

The flat, hard roof was an ideal surface for the clam-dropping because the impact cracked open the shell, exposing the succulent meat to the hungry gulls.

For months the clatter of clams and the clamor of the excited gulls kept the Martins awake at night and on edge during the day.

Besides getting rid of the gulls, the Martins would enjoy these other benefits of their new pitched roof:

1. More living space. Mrs. Martin would use the new space for a study for her husband.

2. More ventilation. An air space under a pitched roof permits air to circulate through louvers in the gable ends.

3. New exterior beauty. A pitched roof can have asphalt shingles in one of many colors available.

4. Wide overhang. This shades the windows from hot summer sun and protects them from rain and dirt.

Mountie Nine Loses To Rider

Mt. St. Mary's lost its second straight baseball game Tuesday at Emmitsburg when Rider College captured a 7-4 decision.

A pair of home runs and a double by Jack Pilger, first baseman for the winners, driving in six runs, featured the game.

Luke Fannon collected a single and a double for two of the Mountaineers' nine hits. Bobby Segrell batted in three of the four runs.

The Mount will be idle until April 21 when it meets Western Maryland at Westminster.

Census "Mop-Up" Starts Saturday

The 1960 census of population and housing enters its final stage April 16 when a picked group of interviewers begins a "mopping up" operation to complete the 10-year inventory of the nation's people and their homes.

The interviewers are primarily concerned with accounting for the "blue" household questionnaires which were left at every fourth household during the first stage of the census which started on April 1.

The "clean up" interviewers will make personal visits to the households from which report forms have not been received and obtain the answers to the census questions.

They also will seek, by telephone and personal visits, the answers to questions left blank or incorrectly answered in the report forms already sent to the census office.
