A step forward in the general appearance of the town itself was taken this week when the Burgess and Commissioners scraped up money, from somewhere, to construct a new street through Emmitt Gardens. The project is a decided asset to the community and really "brings out" the Gardens. A struggle to have this street laid has been waged for a number of years and the culmination of these efforts has resulted in the completion of the project, to the satisfaction of all, we hope. There is only one bad aspect of the whole thing and that was that so many property owners neglected to have their driveways paved while the project was in progress. In fact, only two of the 15 home-owners took the opportunity to have work done. Needless to say, it will cost the others a trifle more when they do decide to have the work done because contractors will have to move their equipment here from quite some distance and you know what that costs. Anyway, the Mayor and Commissioners are to be commended for completing the project and it represents a decided asset to both The Gardens and the Town.

The decision of the County Commissioners this week to eliminate the proposed swimming pool meets with the public's hearty approval. Every newspaper in the county had opposed the plan which would have sent tax bills skyrocketing if every school demanded the same treatment as that proposed for the new Frederick High School. With the classroom shortage as acute as it is and has been it would have been fool-hardy now to stress any emphasis on the "for" side of our educational system. Let's hope this ends the matter for some time to come.

Efficient work by our local fire laddies Wednesday morning was instrumental in saving many thousands of dollars in fire damage when Fitzgerald's Inn was razed by a fire that perhaps had hours of a head start. At about two in the morning the sleepy smoke-eaters were roused from their cozy beds to respond to the alarm. In minutes flat the crews were rounded up, the trucks on their way and water on the fire. These gallant laddies receive absolutely no salary for their efforts and the jeopardization of their lives, at times. In appreciation of their efforts I feel that we should support the present financial drive of the Fire Company all the more. In addition, a new fire engine has been purchased and is now ready for action. This equipment represents a tidy invested sum and the only way the firemen have to pay for it is through your generosity, so answer that letter you received as soon as possible. We have good equipment and a great gang to man it so give generously.

Floridian Heads

Mount Alumni Group

Joseph M. Fitzgerald, of Coral Gables, Fla., has been elected president of the National Alumni Association of Mt. St. Mary's College, Emmitsburg.

A civil lawyer, Fitzgerald graduated from Mount St. Mary's, the nation's second oldest Catholic college, in 1939 with an A.B. degree. He attended Georgetown U. Law School, Washington, but interrupted his law studies to serve in the Navy as an ensign. After five years' naval service, including two years overseas duty, he was discharged as a lieutenant commander. He continued law studies at the University of Miami while in the Navy and received his LL.B. in 1946.

Following the war he returned to the University of Miami as a member of the faculty, teaching for two years in the evening school of the university.

He is a member of the American Bar Association, the Florida Bar Association, the Dade County Bar Association and the Judiciary. He is one of the founders of the Florida Catholic Lawyers' Guild and a founding member of Pi Alpha Delta legal fraternity. He is district governor of Serra International.

He's a miracle man if he can take the limp out of a lame excuse.

Commissioners Kill Swimming Pool Plans

There will be no swimming pool at the new Rose Hill Manor school. That was the word Tuesday from the Board of County Commissioners who went on record as being against the building of a pool at that school or any other school at this time.

Commissioner C. Burton Cannon, Jr., in a statement not connected with the official statement made Tuesday by the board, said "It's time the Board of Education got out of the pool and back into the classroom."

All three commissioners said they are against the building of such a facility but there was some concern as to whether the timing of their statement was appropriate.

After giving the matter considerable attention, the commissioners agreed that by stating publicly how they feel on the matter, the Board of Education will not have to expend further time and effort in considering the inclusion of a swimming pool in the plans for the new school.

Feeling that it would be better for everyone concerned to know how they feel, the Commissioners released the following official statement:

"After hearing the controversy of the new school pertaining to the swimming pool, the County Commissioners feel that it is their duty to issue a statement as to how they feel at this time. In our judgment, as County Commissioners, we feel that the taxpayers' money should not be used for swimming facilities in any school. We feel that the classrooms and facilities needed to raise our academic standards should be paramount in the minds of the taxpayers, the Board of Education and the officials of the County."

Commissioner Cannon told the other members of the board, President Delbert S. Null and Vice President A. Irvin Renn that on Monday he had written Dr. James A. Sensesbaugh, Superintendent of Frederick County Schools, and expressed his personal views. He emphasized only his views which were not to be construed as an official communication from the Commissioners.

The letter written by Commissioner Cannon stated:

"I assume your present position regarding swimming facilities in a future high school in Frederick evolves from discussions with some well-meaning citizens interested in a Civic Center. Certainly these citizens were fulfilling their interest in such a project by inquiring into the possibilities of combining such a center with a secondary school facility. I might as well state now that for reasons that seem basic to me such a combination would be unwieldy. However, if such a Civic Center for Frederick is needed, I'm certain there are other solutions for its location and financing.

"To return to your present position regarding a swimming pool in a future school or schools, I wish to advise that personally and officially I am opposed to appropriating any funds for such a project. I think the practical basic reasons against such a project are too obvious to list here, especially when basic classrooms and strengthening of the teaching staff have been emphasized as still our urgent needs.

"Personally, I have faith in your ability to upgrade our academic standards. Please get yourself and members of the Board of Education out of the pool and back into the classrooms."

Perfect Attendance

The sons of Mr. and Mrs. Karl Smith of Rocky Ridge are setting some sort of school attendance records. The couple has seven sons and no daughters. Four of the boys are old enough to attend the Emmitsburg school.

Karl Jr., aged 14 years, just passed from the ninth grade, and completed his eighth year without missing a day.

Ronald V. 12, just passed from the seventh grade and completed his sixth year without missing a day.

Larry Wayne, 11, just passed from the sixth grade and has had perfect attendance every year.

Jerry, 8, was less fortunate. He was hospitalized in the winter with appendicitis. He made every day last year though.

The three pre-school age children are James K., who was 4 on June 12; Ricky, who was 3 on June 29 and Randy A., who will be 2 on August 18.

State Raises Price Of Learner's Permit

John R. Jewell, Commissioner of Motor Vehicles, announced this week that the fee for learner's permits will be raised from $1.00 to $5.00 as of July 1, 1961.

In making the announcement, Commissioner Jewell stated that applications sent through the mail and postmarked after midnight June 30, 1961, must be accompanied by the new five dollar fee. "It is important," Mr. Jewell said, "that persons wishing to take advantage of the old rate either mail or deliver their applications to the Department before the end of June."

Four out of five dollars received for learner's licenses after that date will be earmarked for a special fund. All monies collected by the fund will be distributed by the State Department of Education to aid in the financing of the driver education program in Maryland's Public School system.

The Department of Motor Vehicles has issued more than 64,000 learner's permits since the beginning of the year. It is estimated that nearly $600,000 will be accrued by the fund during the first year the plan is in operation.

Commissioner Jewell reminded potential drivers that learner's permits are not issued to persons appearing at the Department but are mailed to them at the address given on the application.

Fire Razes Well-Known Restaurant

Fire of undetermined origin, heavily damaged Fitzgerald's Mason-Dixon Inn, located about a mile and a half north of Emmitsburg, early Wednesday morning. The Vigilant Hose Co., called to the scene at 2:10 a. m., did a remarkable job in saving the building from complete destruction even though the blaze had a considerable head start. The inn is located exactly on the Mason-Dixon State Line. A filling station, adjacent the property, was undamaged.

A passing bus driver noticed smoke and flame in the structure about 2:10 o'clock and notified the Vigilant Hose Co. The Emmitsburg firemen then summoned Gettysburg and Greenmount fire companies for assistance.

Chief John S. Hollinger estimated the loss at "about $25,000 to $30,000 after investigation had disclosed that approximately $8,000 worth of equipment and several thousand dollars worth of beer, wine and other supplies had been destroyed. Damage to the building itself and its furniture will be about $15,000, according to the chief's preliminary estimate.

No decision was reached as to the cause of the fire which apparently started in the basement where a number of heaters, the furnace, coolers and compressors were located.

Members of the assisting companies praised the Emmitsburg firemen for performing "an almost impossible task" in preventing the fire, which burned from basement to attic in the north side of the building, from completely destroying the frame structure.

Fire Chief Hollinger said it was fortunate that Edward Fitzgerald, owner of the tavern, and his family were absent from their second floor apartment in the building. Had they been asleep on the second floor it is possible some may not have escaped.

The Fitzgerald family had been at their farm near Thurmont during the day and had remained there overnight. The inn customarily is closed on Tuesdays. Fitzgerald, summoned from his Thurmont home, said he had left the inn about noon Tuesday.

The fire apparently started in the basement of the building near an oil furnace, cooler and compressors, and burned away the stairway into the cellar. The floor above the furnace, just behind the bar in the tavern, burned away completely and the beer cooler behind the bar dropped part way into the basement. The fire also burned away part of the stairway to the second floor of the house and spread through the kitchen of the establishment.

Following along the chimney on the north side of the house, the fire spread into the walls and then burned through the floor beside the chimney in the third floor of the building.

The heat of the blaze blistered paint throughout the structure. On the first floor the bar was badly burned, as were the stools in front of the bar.

The Emmitsburg firemen attacked the blaze with fog spraying booster tank lines and confined the fire to the north end of the building. Several strips of siding were removed from the structure to permit the firemen to reach the blaze inside the walls.

The Emmitsburg firemen placed a portable pump at Middle Creek, a half mile from the scene, to refill the booster tanks of the trucks.

Firemen from the other companies said Emmitsburg used a minimum of water with maximum effect in stopping the blaze.

Fire Chief Hollinger said the charred condition of beams in the cellar indicated the fire must have smoldered there for some time before bursting through into the upper part of the structure.

SPORTS AFIELD

Fishermen around the world have always used special local baits and fish attractors. Many of these "strange" methods have produced little-known salt-water lures, reports Robert D. Hall, Salt-Water Editor of Sports Afield Magazine.

The widely used Japanese feather jig was made to have the appearance and action of a live bait fish. The head of the lure is oval-shaped and chicken feathers are tied on to it so that the quills point outward. This flare imparts a breathing-like action to the lure when it's trolled through a rolling sea.

Years ago, before the feather jig became popular along the eastern coast of the United States, the turkey-wing-bone lure accounted for hundreds of bluegill. A wire leader was run through the center of the bleached white bone to a hook. The slight curvature of the bone gave the lure an erratic action that seemed to tantalize fish into striking. As the popularity of the turkey-bone jig gradually faded, commercial fishermen switched to curved white rubber hose about six inches long. They rigged it in the same manner as the turkey-bone rig.

Dave Engle's lampwick lure that caught a number of tuna in its day must not be overlooked. This trolling lure was made from a ten-inch length of one-inch flat lampwick with a lead thimble for the head. Many old-timers would troll a lampwick soaked in fish oil. However, fish were caught on both dry and oiled lampwick lures.

When the kingfish run is on off the coast of Florida, fish can be taken on a short piece of Manila rope, one end of which has been untwisted, flared out and attached to the ring of the hook.

Polynesian fishermen have added to the number of artificial lures by using a curved section of a piece of mother-of-pearls, shell with a hook. These pearls, as they are called, are highly prized when one of the right design and shape is found. It means insurance for food at any time.

EFFICIENT FEEDING AND LIVESTOCK MANAGEMENT

By Dr. Gustav Bohstedt Emeritus Professor of Animal Husbandry University of Wisconsin

Salt More Than An Appetizer

Some time ago I received a letter from a reader of this column, referring to a recent test withholding salt from cows.

He writes: "I read the article you wrote about the experiment conducted by an Eastern university depriving a herd of cows of their salt. Don't you think that this experiment was ridiculous and uncalled for, considering the fact that people have known for centuries that cattle must have salt to live. Most any farmer or farm boy knows that if a calf needs a little salt, a cow producing a lot of milk needs much more, or she won't give any milk. Just because they were university professors, does it make sense to make cows suffer for months to prove such a known fact?"

In acknowledging receipt of the letter I recognized the writer's compassion toward animals and his obvious unwillingness that they be subjected to needless discomfort or suffering.

I stated that when some of the first such tests were conducted at the turn of this century there was a real need for such a salt-deprivation test with dairy cattle, for many things needed demonstrating.

Even in recent years a medical writer with a very large reader audience raised the question of whether salt was not merely a condiment, something to give flavor to foods, rather than being necessary. He said that inorganic substances like salt could not be assimilated in the body. Of course he was wrong.

At any rate there are always ranchmen and farmers in different parts of our large continent, and elsewhere, that feed salt in a very haphazard manner to livestock.

The experimenters to whom the writer referred must have felt a need, a half century after the early salt studies, to re-examine the experimental findings and to announce the results so that farmers and ranchers of this day would have and use the knowledge re-confirmed and newly developed by these salt experiments.

Question: What is there in early pasture that causes grass staggers?

Answer: Three things, according to Dr. E. J. Underwood of Australia: (1) The low intake and availability of magnesium. (2) The increased requirement for magnesium due to stimulation of milk yield.

(3) The slow rate of release of magnesium from the skeleton of mature cows. Old cows in their 6th lactation have been found 14 times as susceptible to grass staggers as heifers in their first lactation. It has been noted that ready access to salt often reduces the number of cases of grass staggers.

100 YEARS AGO

Lincoln, Cabinet Plan For Battle At Bull Run

By Lon K. Savage

Abraham Lincoln called his cabinet and his top generals together 100 years ago this week and laid his cards on the table. The nation was demanding an offensive—an attack—a march for Richmond. Time was running out; the three-months troops already had served half their time and had nothing to show for it. A Confederate force had been massed at Manassas, 30 miles to the south. There must be a battle.

He spoke mostly to old Winfield Scott, the federal army commander, and to Brigadier General Irvin McDowell, newly appointed commander of the troops at Washington. The cabinet members, too, looked at the two soldiers, firmly behind the President's demand for action.

Scott still was reluctant. He had drawn elaborate plans for his "Anaconda," to choke the South into submission by controlling the Mississippi and blockading the coast, and now this plan was about to be discarded. McDowell, too, asked for more time to drill and discipline his troops.

"You are green, it is true," Lincoln answered, "but they are green also."

Plan Of Attack
So McDowell then came forth with the plan he knew Lincoln wanted to hear. He would move 30,000 men in three columns south from Washington against the Confederates lined up behind Bull Run at Manassas under General P. G. T. Beauregard. General Robert Patterson, despite his delay in moving south from Pennsylvania, would see to it that the Confederate army under General Joseph E. Johnston in the Shenandoah Valley was kept busy. If the two rebel armies were kept divided, McDowell could win.

There was some discussion about Patterson's part in the campaign. His delay in moving toward the Potomac had annoyed Scott, who was considering replacing Patterson. Finally, it was decided Patterson would be kept in his post. And the plans for the Battle of Bull Run had been decided.

Lincoln left the meeting somewhat comforted. It was time for action, he felt, as the war was getting entirely too close to Washington.

Steamer Captured
Only the day before the meeting, the private steamer St. Nicholas was captured by Confederates on the Potomac while going from Baltimore to the Nation's capital. (Unbeknownst to Lincoln, the capture had been led by a Confederate naval officer, Hunter Lewis, who disguised himself as a pretty French "madameoiselle" His "charms" had captivated the Union men aboard the steamer before he had pulled his guns and, with other disguised Confederates aboard, had taken possession of the ship.

And only two days before the meeting, Commodore James H. Ward, commander of the federal Potomac flotilla, had been killed at Mathias Point, 30 miles south on the Potomac in an exchange of gunfire with a group of Confederates. Ward was on the bow of his steamer aiming a gun when he was hit.

In Lincoln's native Kentucky that week, however, the Union cause began to look up. Major General William Nelson, a former naval officer, established himself in southeastern Kentucky with the purpose of enlisting infantry for federal service. Perhaps it was a violation of Kentucky's neutrality, but Nelson had a promise of 5,000 stand of arms from Lincoln, and it would not be long before Kentuckians would be drilling and training to fight against the Confederacy—the fulfillment of one of Lincoln's fondest hopes.

Next week: The United States Congress convenes.

BABSON

BY ROGER W. BABSON

Babson Discusses 100 Years Of Stock Prices

BABSON PARK, Mass., June 29 — Business was prosperous during the Civil War due largely to inflation, and started to boom directly afterward. The shooting of President Lincoln, however, caused stocks to tumble and a year of depressed business followed.

Unexpected Events
Again business began to boom with further inflation until the famous "Black Friday" in 1869, followed by another year of depressed business. Stocks quickly rebounded, and again investors were looking forward to several years of prosperity when, in late 1871, the Chicago Fire occurred. This was followed by the great Boston Fire in 1872.

The market had just about again recovered when the failure of the great banking house of Jay Cooke and Company was suddenly announced. For the first time, the leading Stock Exchanges closed for several weeks. There followed the great depression beginning in 1873; then higher stock prices finally returned as a result of another dose of inflation.

Important Banking Failures
Suddenly, on July 2, 1881, President Garfield was shot. A chain reaction of selling followed. During this period, the banking house of Grant and over their heads. Wrap-around garments will help overcome this. Here is a typical minimum layette list:

Four dozen diapers, one dozen if you use diaper service. Six shirts, long sleeves if it's cold, short sleeves if it's warm. Six nightgowns or wrappers. Three waterproof pants, part plastic or rubberized cotton. Two sweaters, one wool and one wool and cotton. Six pads, 12x8 and rubber sheeting to be placed over the mattress. Four flannel blankets, 36x40. One baby bunting or coat for cool weather. One woolen blanket. One package of special diaper pins.

If you plan to use a diaper service, you won't need a lot of diapers, but a dozen or so extra diapers will always come in handy.

A word about diapers. There are all sorts and the diaper service will be glad to show you the several kinds that they offer. The diaper should be soft and absorbent. There are some which have a triple thickness of cloth in the middle and are made so that they go around the baby with a lot less material left over to fold and pin. Make sure you see all kinds before you decide on the one you will use. The disposable paper diapers are very useful if you go visiting with baby.

If at all possible, use a diaper service. In the long run, when you count the time it takes, the amount of detergent, disinfectant and trouble involved, using a service costs about the same and you are sure that the diapers are germ-free. It takes a lot of washing under the right conditions to get diapers really clean. If you do them yourself, make sure they are clean and dry when you put them on baby.

It is a good idea to plan your baby's wardrobe so that one complete set of clothes is in the wash, one is ready in a drawer and one is on the baby.

Ward, and the two leading "bulls," Henry Villard and James R. Keene, announced their failures. Depression followed.

1892 was a year of great prosperity; but suddenly the failure of the National Cordage Company was announced in May 1893. This was then one of the ten biggest "blue chip" corporations.

Labor Strikes Begin
The following year the Pullman Strike—first serious labor strike—occurred and cast fear and gloom over the stock market. This was accompanied by a series of crop failures and mortgage foreclosures.

Again in 1897 business steadily improved and permanent prosperity was prophesied, accompanied by stock splits, mergers, and large security offerings. Suddenly, in 1903, there came rumors of great quantities of "undigested" securities . . . accompanied by the investigation of large life insurance and traction companies. The crash came just following the San Francisco Earthquake.

Supreme Court Decisions
Up to this time the Supreme Court had decided questions only between the States. Suddenly, in the early 1900's, it issued its "Northern Securities" decision. This took the zip out of the stock market until World War One began. After the closing of the New York Stock Exchange for several months, there followed some years of prosperity.

Then came the sinking of the S.S. Lusitania and our entrance into World War I. All went well with the economy until after the War when soaring interest rates and commodity prices brought on another collapse. This was quickly corrected and the stock market continued to advance until it reached an all-time high in 1929.

Speculation And The Crash of 1929
Then came the business collapse in Europe with the continued withdrawal of gold, climaxed by the very sudden failure of the Austrian Credit-Anstalt. This caused startling repercussions throughout the world. There followed several years of real depression.

Beginning in 1938 there was another recovery in business lasting throughout World War II, but this did not help the stock market much until 1942. With the exception of several relatively brief adjustment periods, our country has enjoyed good business for about 23 years.

What Of The Future?
The preceding one hundred years teach two lessons: (1) That there has always been an economic race between inflation and production. These inflations were of different kinds,

Proper Sunglasses Give Safe Comfort

The use of proper sunglasses on the beach or the lake this summer can spell the difference between a safe driver and one prone to accident.

Optometric research over the past five years has found that the motorist who exposes his eyes to the glaring sun during the day needs several hours to allow his eyes to return to normal. This is explained by the fact that cells in the retina of the eye contain "visual purple" which fades out in intense light unless protected by high quality ground lenses.

If such glasses are not worn on the beach, the eyes have low resistance to glare from approaching headlights, thus resulting in needless accidents.

Dr. Herman Z. Kudon, president of the multi-state Vision Conservation Institute, Inc. also warned that sunglasses should never be worn for nighttime driving even though they may seem to cut down the glare from approaching headlights.

Sun glasses at night lower visibility far below the safety mark and cause more accidents than they prevent, Dr. Kudon pointed out.

Another caution about sunglasses is the importance of buying only the best glasses possible. Cut-rate sunglasses may actually hurt the wearer's vision because of the low quality, distorted glasses, Dr. Kudon added.

—stock market, commodity, political; but they always gave business a "shot in the arm." Fortunately, increased production absorbed this . . . the great year of railroad building; opening of the South and West to farming; and finally increased commodity production due to inventions and advertising, accompanied by the electrical, chemical, and automobile eras. (2) That when each prosperity came to an end, it was from an unexpected event—a great fire, an earthquake, or the failure of some banking house or large corporation. In wartime, inflation always has been resorted to. We expect it will occur again to provide funds for the "cold war." This should mean higher prices for stocks, commodities, and real estate. Yet the period of inflation we are now entering may be absorbed by the "space era," which is an unexpected event on the optimistic side.

Improve Facilities At Ocean Downs

When Ocean Downs opens this year, horsemen and the betting public will have better facilities at their disposal than ever before in the track's history.

The new Club Terrace, seating hundreds, overlooks the finish line, betting windows are immediately adjacent and dinner and refreshments will be served before and during the races. Catering is to be done by Stevens, one of the largest and best catering services in the country.

On the mezzanine level, Ocean Downs has added entirely new facilities. Immediately before the betting windows, tables with gayly colored umbrellas lend a continental flavor reminiscent of the sidewalk cafes of France.

On the ground level, a new refreshment stand and added betting windows are being constructed to service the record attendance that is anticipated.

Within the barns surrounding the track, Ocean Downs can house approximately 600 horses and horsemen. Approximately 1000 applications to race have been received by Ocean Downs so far. Only the best will be chosen. To house some of the horsemen and horses that are selected, a new fire proof, cinder block barn has been constructed as part of the reconstruction project now underway at the track.

The track restaurant used by the horsemen has been completely renovated and a fully equipped first aid room will take care of any accidents that may occur on the track.

A glance at the horses who have already been entered in the Ocean Downs Stake Races indicates that some of the best horses in this section of the country will be present and that this season at Ocean Downs will be one of the best in its history.

I wonder if there ever was a child or a man who was caught in the act the first time he broke a rule, or was it the sixteenth infraction?

Weekly Stock Market Round-Up

Prepared by the Investment Research Department of Hemphill, Noyes & Co., 15 Broad Street, New York 5, N. Y. Members of the New York Stock Exchange

June 28, 1961

RESEARCH REVIEW

Our research Roundup this week has singled out four stocks which we believe to be particularly attractive. With the exception of Monroe Auto Equipment, which is not listed, these are all rated favorably in our Sentinel Service which is available at any of our branch offices.

Collins and Aikman appears to be on its way to a good year in 1961. For the first fiscal quarter ended May 26 sales were approximately $17 million versus $13.8 million in 1960's first quarter, a gain of about 23%. The company's research and product development program resulted in new products since 1955 that accounted for 40% of sales in the 1960 fiscal year. Acquisitions are being sought and modernization and expansion programs are underway. A dividend of $1.20 per share is paid. Earnings might be in the vicinity of $4 a share for the fiscal year to end in February 1962.

Oxford Paper (30) produces "cultural" types of paper products such as magazines, books, brochures and general commercial printing. In the past three years Oxford has been undergoing a vigorous change. A $37 million expansion is scheduled for completion in the latter part of 1961. In the first quarter of this year the company earned 62¢ versus 6¢ in 1960, a respectable showing in view of the recession. Allowing for a better economic climate and for the growing effects of the capital program, one can look for improvement over the $2.26 shown under 1960. We believe the company will eventually regain its earning power of 1955 and 1956 when earnings reached $4.20 and $5.43.

The chemical industry is one industry that should definitely benefit from the overall improvement in the economy. Union Carbide's strength lies in its long established position in the plastic and industrial gases fields, both of which offer significant growth potential. Earnings this year are expected to improve over last year's $5.25 per share total. This issue should appeal to the growth-minded investor interested in the chemical industry.

Although Monroe Auto Equipment Company (25) is still primarily an auto replacement parts manufacturer, it is now expanding to produce shock absorbers for washing machines, for army vehicles, and for railroad equipment. Earnings for 1961 are estimated at $2.00 as compared to $1.44 earned in 1960. Good technical know-how, a rising sales pattern, and a superior position in the replacement parts market lend this equity considerable attraction.

CLOTHING BABY

By Robert McNair Mitchell, M.D. Dept. of Gynecology and Obstetrics Pennsylvania and Lankenau Hospitals, Philadelphia, Pa.

For the first of his life, your baby needs very little in the way of clothing. The fact is that all your baby needs is to be clean and warm.

Baby's clothes should allow for growth, be easy to put on and take off, washable and durable.

As I point out in my book, "Nine Months To Go" (Lippincott), babies don't like to be overdressed, it makes them fussy. Babies also don't like to have clothing put

A modern research building for study of Chesapeake Bay problems was formally dedicated last week at the Chesapeake Biological Laboratories at Solomons Island, Md.

The same ceremony also marked formal transfer of the facilities and functions of the State Department of Research and Education to the new Natural Resources Institute of the University of Maryland.

The $120,000, two-story research building, which contains four laboratories and eight offices, houses a salt water aquarium for biological studies of shell fish and fin fish.

The new institute will be made up of the Crisfield Seafood Processing Laboratories, formerly under the university's department of zoology, the Chincoteague Bay Station and the Conservation, Education and Inland Resources Divisions at Annapolis.

The $400,000-a-year operation of the lab was transferred to Dr. Wilson H. Elkins, president of the university, by Dr. Earle T. Hawkins, chairman of the outgoing commission.

Dr. L. Eugene Cronin, director of the lab, will continue as director of the institute under university operation.

The institute plans to open a new facility in Western Maryland July 1, probably in the Cumberland or Frostburg areas. The Western Maryland facility will be for studies of forestry, fresh water fish and wildlife.

Experiments have shown that light is a stimulus to schooling by fish. With decreased illumination individuals of same species become active and schools disperse.—Sports Afield.

YOUR PERSONAL HEALTH

Leave 'Em Alone

Whatever happened to the beauty spot? Time was, that women without a dark mole or two, painted them on. Now you don't see artificial moles. And people with natural ones have become unduly worried about them. There's a fear they may become cancerous.

Mostly a mole should be left alone. It should be removed only if it is very unsightly or if it is in a spot where it is constantly irritated. However, if a mole suddenly starts to spread, become darker, or gets lumpy, then you should let your doctor have a look at it. It may have become that one in a million.

Moles are easily removed and they don't recur. Don't worry unduly about a mole, but don't take any chances, either.

Take Chances Progress always involves risks —you can't steal second base with one foot on first.

Chicago Skyway — Scenic Spectacular

Rapidly becoming a tourist attraction itself, the 7-3/4 mile Chicago Skyway affords visitors a dramatic view of one of the world's most massive industrial developments. The 101 million dollar 'high-rise' highway forms a vital connecting link between the Indiana toll road and the heart of Chicago. It has one of the nation's best safety records.

Motorists approaching or leaving Chicago this summer along the east-west toll road system will find to their surprise that the 7-3/4 miles of the Chicago Skyway are among the most dramatic of the entire trip.

Expecting to find scenic beauty only along rustic country lanes, many will be amazed at the panorama of massive industrial might afforded them along the 101 million dollar limited-access roadway.

Cement plants, malt factories and steel mills crowd for space in the corridor at the tip of Lake Michigan and stand shoulder to shoulder along an intricate network of highways, railroads and ship channels. At night, the former prairie comes alive with thousands of lights and with industrial fires that never stop burning.

For years, city-bound traffic foundered in this maze. Then a bold solution was suggested: "Build high — up and over the congestion." In 1958, the opening of the Skyway provided the vital connecting link between the Indiana toll road and Chicago's free expressway system, and a crossroads for the nation's superhighways.

Rising more than 13 stories over its surroundings, the six-lane highway has carried 22 million vehicles through the area five times faster than before and with an accident rate less than half that of toll roads nationally.

This summer, an estimated million and a half tourists will visit Chicago to enjoy its endless list of unique events, including the International Trade Fair, July 25-August 10, and the College All-Star football game August 4.

Looking Ahead

Some Things One Cannot Buy
It is a common American attitude that one can obtain whatever he wants by spending money for it, whether it is goods, services, or even something less tangible like public favor. It is part of our culture that we enjoy work and then expect to depend upon the fruits thereof for whatever we lack. Our free economy has made us acquainted with this process. However, the idea of spending for peace, for international good-will, for world political favor, for economic development of backward ward peoples, and for many other goals worthy in themselves seems more and more to represent a delusion from which we suffer.

We must not assume, desiring peace for some Latin neighbor or hopefully sympathizing with a peasant society, that "foreign aid" voted by Congress will develop their economy and prevent their going Communist. There's a colossal amount of wishful thinking attached to such a naive view. We cannot afford much more time in learning this lesson. About certain personal faults, the advertisements used to say, even your best friends won't tell you. But we have been told by foreign friends and foes alike for years that this is wrong. We pay little attention to them.

Idealism, Yes; Foolishness, No. The American people like to favor the underdog, too. It warms our hearts to hope that "underdeveloped" areas may develop, so that the underprivileged may enjoy the good life. Most of us are openly humanitarian and all of us are willing to give to all the down-and-out and unfortunate in this country or any other. We should be willing to send food, medicine, education and other help to those who want it. But even though it is consistent with our idealism and humanitarian tendencies, we must not be led astray into impossible fallacies of continued international almsgiving.

So much of our foreign aid has been utterly foolish. Instead of making friends, we have made enemies. Intending to support freedom, we have bolstered socialist regimes. Money intended for "economic development" has too often found its way into the hands of wealthy despots. Costly projects have been pushed, regardless of their practicability. Some countries are actually worse off than they would be if they had not received help from us. Obviously, we all live in one world. We are economically interdependent to a greater extent than we have ever been. Nevertheless, it is an illusion for us to assume that other peoples share what we consider the common aspirations of humanity. "Underdeveloped" peoples do not necessarily think like we think. We like progress and we therefore assume that people all over the world want exactly what we want. So we dispense wealth to them. Most of them do not know what to do with it.

When backward countries cannot govern themselves successfully, have not the desire to improve themselves, and do not know what to do with personal freedom, they need help. But they do not necessarily need money. They may be entirely unprepared for capital investments in enterprise. Certainly they do not need costly welfare experiments. Our own nation had to work, save and invest for generations under conditions of great freedom, before it emerged. It does not make sense to offer large sums of money to nations that rarely understand what independence means. Some of them seem to think that welfare experiments are their immediate key to prosperity. Shall we encourage them?

Official thinking in Washington seems to hold that a tremendously stepped-up foreign aid program is necessary. Is this extension of the Marshall Plan idea for "containing" Communism simply an attempt to buy peace through the world? If it is, I believe that experience tells it is bound to fail. Giving away tax dollars of American taxpayers never can replace sound political decisions that our leaders must undertake in meeting Soviet expansion. We cannot stop Russia by giving away money.

In many instances it works the other way. Currently the White House is trying to rush its big foreign aid bill through the Congress. This bill will permit us to aid Russian satellites, including Poland and Czechoslovakia, as we have done in the past. No wonder Mr.

Khrushchev favors our foreign aid. The Poles, in turn, have sent $13 million in aid to Castro in Cuba, and have promised more. The Czechs have been arming Castro with planes, tanks, and ammunition and have promised to send soldiers if he needs them. In so many ways, the Communists discover they can use our own money against us.

Ghost Lake in northern Wisconsin produces about 125 muskellunge every season. That's about one musky (30 inches or better) per three acres of water. Sports Afraid.

"THERE IS NO HOLIDAY FROM TRAFFIC ACCIDENTS"—This warning is given to all motorists and pedestrians alike by the Maryland Traffic Safety Commission. The Declaration of Independence insures our rights to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness but does not include a codicil giving us the right to kill our fellow man. Therefore, on this commemorative Fourth of July when we celebrate the anniversary of the signing of this historic document remember excessive speed is the cause of approximately 45% of the traffic deaths and injuries occurring in the State of Maryland—9 people died on our highways over the last Fourth of July holiday weekend and 362 were injured. This isn't just cold statistics, but each number represents a human being—and we as individuals can do something about it. In order to avoid a repetition of last year's tragic fatality record please—Drive and walk with extreme care—Always respect and obey traffic laws—Be courteous and alert at all times—Help your fellow man by accepting your responsibilities to him and yourself by being a safe sane driver. Remember Governor J. Millard Tawes' plea for maintaining a safe speed while traveling over the Fourth of July holiday weekend.

THE WORLD'S MOST WIDELY USED DEVOTIONAL GUIDE

Read Timothy 4:1-10.
Demas hath forsaken me, having loved this present world. (11 Timothy 4:10.)
Writing from prison to the young man Timothy, Paul shows his disappointment and heart-break because Demas turned his back on the Christian faith. "Having loved this present world," Demas lost the trail and no longer followed Christ. The world presents many alluring faces which could have tempted Demas. Which ones lured him from the faith we shall never know. However, Paul warns Timothy against some of them—pride, covetousness, thanklessness, a lover of pleasure more than of God.

Have we been like Demas? Having once felt the glow of Christ's spirit, have we been mean, bitter, stingy, slow of compassion? Having our names on the church roll is not enough. We need to live that the world may know that the moving force in our lives is the spirit of Christ. May our living Lord not say sadly to us,

Milk Cooperative Manager Retires

William P. Sadler, since 1954 manager of the Maryland Cooperative Milk Producers, Inc., on Friday, June 23, offered his resignation at a regular monthly meeting of the Board of Directors. The offer was accepted and

"Alas, you have forsaken me, having loved this present world." Prayer

Our Father God, grant us the gift of constancy in faith. When tempted to seek ease and comfort, arouse us with a new baptism of Thy spirit. When lured by the enticements of this world, may we keep our gaze upon Christ lest we miss the trail leading to Thy kingdom. In our Savior's name. Amen.

Thought For The Day
The church does its work through those in whom the spirit of Christ is the moving force.

Charles B. Piper, Physician (Connecticut)

the Board named R. L. Strock manager to succeed Mr. Sadler. He will begin his new duties July 1.

In tendering his resignation, Mr. Sadler said: "After 40 years of intense and continuous activity in the dairy industry I have, for some time, felt the need of a rest. In leaving the helm of the Association I feel it to be in good position to serve its members, the industry and the public. Under the guidance of the Board of Directors with the loyal support of the membership, every challenge has been met during the seven years it has been my privilege to serve as business manager. My interest in the welfare of the 1600 dairy farmers who make up the organization will continue unabated."

Mr. Strock has been with the Cooperative since 1951, all but a few months as assistant manager and in recent years Secretary-Treasurer.

Mr. Strock is a native of Pennsylvania who was raised on a dairy farm. He graduated from the Pennsylvania State University and took a Master of Science degree at the University of Illinois. He was commissioned a naval lieutenant and served in the Pacific in World War II.

Following his military service he joined the staff of the Milk Market Administrator in Philadelphia, before having offered a position with the MCMP.

Commenting on the action of Mr. Sadler and the Board of Directors, Edgar G. Emrich, MCMP president and dairy farmer of Thurmont said:

"We regret the loss of Mr. Sadler, who has given us long and faithful service in his capacity of business manager and we sympathize with his desire for a rest."

"I personally think we are extremely fortunate to have Mr. Strock at hand to take over in Mr. Sadler's place. In his positions as Assistant Manager, Secretary-Treasurer he has taken a great part in the active management of our affairs and knows them thoroughly."

OUTDOOR SPORTING TIPS

Fishing
Even if he prefers snuff, the wise angler always carries a pack of chewing gum in his tackle box. Here's why. When fussy trout refuse to take any of your fly offerings, place a small piece of gum on a bare hook. Hold it over a match flame until it becomes sticky. Then catch some of the flying-type flies in the area. Stick one on the gum and cast it out. The fish are almost certain to show interest.

It's no secret that fish like worms. But, they'll like 'em even better if you follow this hooking technique. Don't thread your worm on the hook, or hook him through and through as you probably have been doing. Instead, slip the barb under the worm's breeding band and out through his head. He'll stay livelier longer and attract more fish.

When you tie a monofilament leader to your nylon or silk bait-casting line, put a drop of clear fingernail polish on the knot. When it dries, put on another drop. You'll discover that this will cause the line to slip easily through the guides, just as if there were no knot at all.

Camping
When your old camp ice box develops a leak it may well be time to get a new one—but don't throw the old one away. It will work just fine for keeping dry foods dry and moist foods moist.

One poor creature who has few friends is the snake. The reasons are obvious, and campers know he's a good critter—to stay away from. When camping in snake-infested country, the wise sportsman will carry a handgun loaded with shotshells. This way, when Mr. snake gets ready to strike, the camper will have a good chance of blowing him to bits.

When you get that funny buzzing in your ears, it doesn't mean you're losing your mind—not if you're a camper. What it probably means is that an insect has flown into your ear. How do you get him out? Easy! Just shine a bright light close to the uninhabited side of your noggin and the bug will come flying out again to see what's up.

Boating
If you lose the plastic knob from the control panel of your outboard motor you are not out of luck and you do not have to go to the trouble of locating a new one. Here's all you do. Fill a plastic bottle cap with epoxy putty and position it in the place of the lost knob. You'll discover it even works better than the original item.

(Try for a $50 prize. Send your tip to A.A. Contest, Sports Afeld, 959 8th Ave., New York 19, N.Y.)

Five Centuries of Integration

School's out in Angola

Alabama's explosion of race riots when the "freedom riders" sought to desegregate bus terminals in violation of state laws is having world-wide repercussions, according to overseas reports.

Communists are using the riots to distort conditions in the United States and thus weaken administration foreign policy, particularly among the newly-formed African nations, in an effort to bring these countries into the Red bloc in the United Nations.

Red agents who were responsible for fomenting riots in Angola, Africa, are now reported to be using the Alabama riots to turn Negroes against whites in that Portuguese province.

But the Portuguese feel that these Communist efforts, and even the vote in the Security Council by U. N. Ambassador Adlai Stevenson for an investigation of Angolan affairs, are doomed to failure because Portugal has practiced integration in all of its provinces for five centuries.

As Portuguese U. N. Ambassador Vasco Garin told Security Council members, native Africans have the same rights in Angola as the Portuguese. Fellow citizens in Angola, white and black, he said, are treated the same under the law; the children go to school together, adults eat in public places and work together. Negroes can attain high offices in government and inter-marriage is commonplace.

Dr. Antonio de Oliveira Salazar, Premier of Portugal, and most Portuguese citizens, were surprised and disappointed over Ambassador Stevenson's stand on Angola since Portugal has demonstrated loyal friendship for the western allies and particularly this country. Not only are they outspoken in their hatred of Communism, but they were a strong ally during World War II, even to the point of permitting the United States Air Force to use the Azores rent-free for refueling bases.

In stating that most Angolans are loyal to Portugal, Dr. Salazar declared that "recent events in Angola are the result of a terrorist action instigated and directed from the outside." He said that as soon as peaceful activities are resumed, the government will re-establish the reformative efforts in which the nation has engaged for many years.

A Child's First Visit to the Dentist

Proper dental care during infancy is indispensable to good teeth. Starting children off properly pays lifelong dividends, and one important milestone in a child's dental hygiene program is his first visit to a dentist. This should take place between the ages of two and three, by which time he has all twenty of his first teeth.

Dealers of Stanley Home Products, Inc., of Westfield Mass., who supply many dental hygiene products designed specially for children, offer these suggestions to help establish a friendly relationship between the child and dentist during that all-important first visit:

ERUPTION AND SHEDDING OF PRIMARY (FIRST) TEETH*
	eruption	shedding
upper	7½ mo.	7½ yr.
Central incisor	9 mo.	8 yr.
Lateral incisor	10 mo.	8 yr.
Cuspid	18 mo.	11½ yr.
First molar	14 mo.	10½ yr.
Second molar	24 mo.	10½ yr.
lower	20 mo.	11 yr.
Second molar	12 mo.	10 yr.
First molar	16 mo.	9½ yr.
Cuspid	7 mo.	7 yr.
Lateral incisor	6 mo.	6 yr.
Central incisor	6 mo.	6 yr.

*Note: Primary molars are not shed until the child is 10 to 11 years of age. If a primary molar is extracted prematurely, a dentist should determine the necessity of maintaining the space for the incoming permanent tooth.
*A.D.A. pamphlet, "Dental Health Facts For Teachers." NP

1. Talk with your dentist beforehand about your child. Give him information that will help to understand your child, such as interests, personality, weaknesses, etc.
 2. Be calm in your own feelings about dentistry and your child will usually have the same attitude.
 3. Explain to your child what to expect at the dentist a few days before the appointment.
 4. Be careful in your choice of words when explaining dental methods. Avoid references to pain and concentrate on the benefits to health and appearance.
 5. Take your child to the dentist before he has trouble so he can get acquainted in easy and friendly stages.
 6. Make sure your child gets to the office on time so he will not be upset on arrival.
 7. Don't expect too much of your child at the dentist. He may cry some, but there is a difference between crying and hysteria.
 8. Don't worry too much about your child being hurt in the dentist chair. Modern methods have done much to eliminate pain.
 9. Follow the dentist's advice as to whether he wants you in his office with your child. A difficult child is often more cooperative without the parent watching.
 10. If your dentist does not handle child patients, ask him to recommend a pedodontist, a specialist in the care of children's teeth.
- Stanley dealers have dental products for all ages and needs, and most helpful for children are the Junior Tooth Paste, and specially designed toothbrushes. These, together with a wide variety of other good grooming and hygienic aids, will help the child form the health habits that will be life-long assets. A copy of the special "The Care of Your Teeth" pamphlet may be received by writing to the Home Service Department, Stanley Home Products, Inc., Easthampton, Massachusetts.
