A Public Service of the National Baby Care Council

By Doris Y. Genereux

Hitchcock Medical Center
Hanover, New Hampshire

The one-year-old usually has about two or three words which he clearly associates with a person or object. At 18 months, this increases to approximately 10 or 20 words. By his second birthday, the child usually achieves the 100-word mark and by his third birthday, a few hundred words.

Up until 18 months, one word implies a whole sentence or an entire situation. Bottle, which will probably come out as "babble" until the child can master the "t" sound, may mean, "I'm hungry," or "I'm not through with my milk, give it back." Although "bow wow" refers to the dog, it may also mean "where is he?" or

"I love him," or "there he is," or any other thought about the pet.

At two years, the child puts words together. He may say, "Bobby go" or "me go." It is in his third and fourth year that the child graduates to simple four and five-word sentences.

Mastery of sound, like all other aspects of language development, is up to the individual child. Generally, however, parents can expect their child to pronounce the letters p, b, m, w, and h at three and one-half years. A year later, he will work with d, t, n, g, ing and y. At five and one-half he should master the difficult f and v, and at six and one-half to seven and one-half, s, sh, z, th, l and r.

The timetable for the mastery of sounds is not a rigid one. Many factors are involved. For example: A child who is vigorous and energetic will learn through concrete experience.

Parents who can provide their children with toys and books offer a richer learning environment.

Girls tend to learn faster than boys. Playing with dolls and playing house promotes more speech than do boys' games where imitating mechanical sounds take precedence.

Well-adjusted parents tend to have well-adjusted children. They take time to answer a child's questions, look through picture books with him and read bedtime stories to him.

An overanxious parent may actually impede a child's normal process of speech learning. Talking to a child is beneficial but the parent should let the child absorb words at his own pace. If a child mispronounces a word, the parent should softly repeat the word correctly, after him. When the child is ready to work with the new sound, he will be happy to accept the correction.

Milk Payments Set By Order

A minimum price of $4.66 per hundredweight of 3.5% milk, for base milk delivered to handlers' plants, regulated by the Upper Chesapeake Bay Milk Marketing Order, was announced this week by E. Hickman Greene, Market Administrator for the area. The order establishes minimum prices to be paid to producers who supply milk distributed in the marketing area. The order does not establish retail prices of milk in the area.

The price for milk testing 3.5% is subject to a plus or minus adjustment of 7c per hundredweight for each one-tenth percentage variation from 3.5% in the butterfat content of the milk. Handlers, in making payments to producers, may make proper deductions from the price if the deductions are authorized in writing by the producer.

This minimum uniform base price for June, 1961, is the result of market-wide pooling whereby all producer milk received by pool plants is classified and priced according to the use made of it. Class I use, principally milk disposed of in fluid form, in June was priced to handlers at $5.10 per hundredweight of 3.5% milk. Class II use, principally cream disposals and manufactured dairy products, was priced at $3.077 per hundredweight of 3.5% milk. The total values thus computed are distributed to all producers, through the minimum uniform producer prices.

Producers are paid the uniform base price for a portion of their deliveries during the months of flush production and the remaining portion of their deliveries are paid for at the uniform excess price ($3.077 per hundredweight in June). Each producer's base milk is limited to an amount not greater than his level of deliveries during the prior month's of June, as paid during the month of June.

Daily average delivery of producer milk in June was 10.69% above a year ago but was 6.02% below last month. Class I use of milk was up 2.12% from June of last year but was down 4.52% from May, 1961. This seasonal decline in Class I use is expected since most metropolitan areas experience a decrease in the consumption of fluid milk during the summer months.

Approximately 2,217 producers supplied the 21 plants whose receipts and dispositions the above information is based.

Giants Cop Two In Little League Play

Pitcher Kerry Hewitt helped his own cause with a homer as the Giants beat the Red Sox 10-7 in Little League play Tuesday evening. The win threw the Red Sox and Cards into a first-place tie with the Giants a half game off the pace.

On Monday evening, Hewitt hit a grand slam homer in the first inning to get the Giants off to an eight-run bulge in the opening

Changes in the new social security amendments provide a reduction in the length of time a person needs to have worked under social security to get retirement benefits for himself or to qualify his family for survivors benefits in case of his death. W. S. King, manager of the Hagerstown Social Security Office said this week.

Thousands of older people will become eligible for cash benefits because of this change in the law—older men and women workers, their wives or dependent husbands and the widows, dependent widowers and aged dependent parents of workers who have died. First payments to newly eligible persons can be made for the month of August.

Under the new law, a man reaching 65, or a woman reaching 62, this year will need social security credit for only 2½ years of work under social security. A man who reached 65 or a woman who reached 62, before 1958 needs only a year and a half of work under social security to be eligible for social security retirement benefits.

The survivors of workers who died before 1958 may also become eligible for benefits under this change in the law if the worker before his death had earned social security credit for at least a year and a half.

I should point out that credit for work under social security is counted in three-month calendar quarters. Therefore, a person need not have worked for a continuous period of 2½ or 1½ years, as the case may be. Social security credit for calendar quarters earned at any time since 1936 can be counted toward the amount of work he needs to get retirement benefits for himself or to qualify his family for dependents or survivors benefits.

If you believe that you or someone of your family may be eligible for benefits because of this change in the law, get in touch with your social security office promptly.

You may have inquired soon after the law was changed by Congress in September 1960. But do so again; this is a new change that makes it possible for people to get benefits with even less credit for work covered by social security. As before, however, no one can become entitled to benefits with a total of less than a year and a half of work in employment or self-employment covered by social security.

Your social security office in Hagerstown is located at 59 North Cannon Avenue.

McClellan Victorious In Western Virginia

By Lon K. Savage

It was raining hard. Union Gen. W. S. Rosecranz and 1,900 troops hacked their way through the underbrush and tangled vines up the side of Rich Mountain in western Virginia. At their head was a farm boy named Hart who was leading a portion of Gen. George B. McClellan's army to his father's mountain-top farm. There, McClellan believed, a vital blow could be delivered to the Confederate army arrayed in front of him.

It was July 11, 100 years ago this week, and the beginning of the battle of Rich Mountain, which was to catapult McClellan into leadership of the Union army and close the first campaign of the war.

McClellan, himself, was moving with the bulk of his army that morning from nearby Buckhannon toward the base of Rich Mountain. For there was his first target, Confederate Col. John Pegram with about 700 men.

Mountain Fighting

Hardly had Rosecranz and his men reached the top when they ran into action. There, awaiting them, were 350 Confederates concealed behind log breastworks.

Rosecranz charged. The Southerners gave fierce resistance but finally were forced to flee into the thicket behind them. Pursuing, the Northerners took 21 prisoners and returned to find 20 other Confederates lying wounded on the field.

Down below, McClellan waited to make a frontal attack on Pegram. Although he heard the fighting from the mountaintop, he held back on the assault until nightfall, and during the night Pegram and the remainder of his men slipped out of their encampment and began a tortuous march along the pathless mountainside.

Ten miles to the north, Confederate Gen. Robert S. Garnett, commanding an army of 3,300 at Laurel Hill, learned of Pegram's fate and began retreating south toward Beverly and Staunton. Getting a report (false at the time) that McClellan had captured Beverly, Garnett about faced and fled northward. McClellan, meanwhile, crossed Rich Mountain and, indeed, captured Beverly, and his men set out in pursuit of Garnett.

The Yankees caught up with Garnett and his men July 13, and a running skirmish continued between the two forces for several miles. A lively encounter was had at Carrick's Ford, and a few miles farther, Garnett, while directing his skirmishers in a narrow ravine, was killed.

Pegram Surrenders

Pegram, meanwhile, emerged from the thicket a few miles north of Beverly and learned of Garnett's retreat. With McClellan's troops both to the north and south of him and with formidable mountain ridges on both sides, Pegram sent a surrender note to McClellan at Beverly. Next day he brought in his force, now reduced to 550 men, as prisoners of war.

That ended McClellan's western Virginia campaign. All told, fewer than 100 Confederates were killed or wounded in the fighting, but on July 14 McClellan was able to proudly cable Washington:

"Garnett and forces routed . . . Garnett killed . . . Our success is complete, and secession is killed in this country. Next week: The battle of Bull Run."

Read Luke 6:12. to pray, and continued all night. It came to pass in those days, in prayer to God. (Luke 6:12.) that he went out into a mountain. The Gospels tell us stories about

BABSON

Writes . . .

BY ROGER W. BABSON

Babson Says Investors Should Study History

BABSON PARK, Mass., July 13—In addition to my beloved father and mother there are four outstanding people who have guided my life. These are Joan of Arc of France, Sir Isaac Newton of England, Isabel Babson of Gloucester, Mass., and Cecil John Rhodes of South Africa.

Joan Of Arc The Unexpected

In the center of the public square, facing the home where I spent fifteen youthful years, is a life-size statue of Joan of Arc riding a horse and holding a sword. The statue was chiseled by the famous sculptress Mrs. Anna Hyatt Huntington. Joan of Arc not only has inspired me with courage; but has taught me to expect the unexpected. Her life shows how an unknown eighteen-year-old girl can change the fortunes of two entire nations. One year France was in supremacy and all English fortunes were at a very low ebb; then in a few weeks the picture completely changed. England became powerful and wealthy—despite the wicked treachery of the English who caught Joan with a flag of truce and burnt her at the stake.

Sir Isaac Newton And Economics

In the late 17th century, Newton announced to the world his Law of Action and Reaction, later called the "Business Cycle." Isaac Newton—unlike President Kennedy and his advisers—stated that periods of unemployment and suffering were caused by previous excesses of economic activity, waste, and luxury. In fact, Sir Isaac Newton's teachings were the Jesus' seeking the presence of the Father outside the temple doors. In the wilderness He sought God for strength to fight temptation. After a busy day, He prayed in the mountain. At the hour of His greatest need, He went to a secluded garden. Jesus felt that out of doors He could be close to the Father.

During a summer workcamp located on a hilltop, the young people made what they called their "Chapel in the Woods." The walls of the "Chapel" were the foliage and its roof was the open sky. The campers held their dedication service there. They felt the presence of God in this open chapel. We, too, can be with the Almighty when we seek Him outdoors. He is always there. He whispers to us through the flowers and birds, through the wind, the rain, and running waters. When we appreciate God's handiwork, we exalt Him and rejoice in His presence.

Prayer Under the canopy of the sky, O God, we come to Thee. Teach us to be appreciative of Thy works around us. Teach us to become more aware of Thy presence in the beautiful out of doors. Thru Christ, who prayed in the garden, we pray. Amen.

Thought For The Day The presence of God is manifested in His creation. Henry B. Pablo (Philippines)

foundation of my business.

We now have the third largest Newtonia collection in the world. His actual library was brought by Mrs. Grace K. Babson from London and built into the Newton Library at the Babson Institute. My forecasts today are based upon the teachings of Sir Isaac Newton who—in a way—founded Babson's Reports.

Isabel Babson Of Cape Ann

Early in the 17th century a wonderful woman and her young son James left London in a sailing vessel for a six-weeks trip across the Atlantic Ocean to Salem, Mass. From Salem they came to Cape Ann where Isabel became physician, midwife, and pre-natal nurse to the sixty families then living on Cape Ann. From her son James all Babsons in America are believed to have descended. April of this year marked the 300th Anniversary of Isabel's death. A small Pre-Natal College is being started in her memory. It will be located at 69 Main Street, Gloucester, Mass., where she had her humble log cabin hospital and became known as "Good Woman Babson."

The fourth character who greatly influenced my life was Cecil Rhodes of London who, broken down with tuberculosis, boarded a sailing vessel to South Africa. Since I have also been so afflicted, Cecil Rhodes is one of my "saints." He became the bold developer of Rhodesia and Africa's greatest statesman and financier—working toward the Congo about which we hear so much today. He died in 1902 at the age of 49. I visited his grave in Africa. His dying words were: "So much to do, and so little time in which to do it." He said this after developing the diamond and gold mines of Africa and leaving all his great wealth to international education.

Ancestry Studies Are Good Hobbies

The study of ancestry has been a hobby of mine and I recommend it to other businessmen as a change from collecting stamps and similar means of keeping one's mind employed. Studying ancestry is a most fascinating and surprising avocation. Furthermore, it means we are collecting new and permanent data which can be bequeathed to our heirs. All such work which we do is cumulative and can be carried on further by others after our death.

Those who have the time should interest their children and grandchildren in the laws of heredity, including genes and chromosomes and the new polymer sciences which may completely upset the orthodox theories of heredity. If we could interest our teenagers in the polymers, it might result in much happier marriages and more useful grandchildren.

State Uninsured Motorists Warned

Uninsured motorists in the state face possible suspension of their driving privileges unless they promptly remit the required $26 fee to the State's Unsatisfied Claim & Judgment Fund, the Department of Motor Vehicles announced this week.

John R. Jewell, Commissioner of Motor Vehicles, stated that within the past few months, the D.M.V. has contacted hundreds of car owners lacking automobile insurance and collected over $15,000.00 for the fund. Those refusing to pay the fee are being summoned to appear before the Department's reviewing officers. Failure to produce evidence of insurance at that time will result in the probable suspension of their driver's licenses.

"Every effort is being made,"

Commissioner Jewell said, "to track down those willfully avoiding payment of the fee. No further action will be taken, however, against those vehicle owners who voluntarily submit their twenty-six dollars to the Department immediately upon cancellation of their policies."

Insurance companies are cooperating with the state agency in this program. The Department is receiving notice of policy cancellations and is, in turn, requesting immediate payment of the fee or proof of insurance from the motorists involved.

In addition, personnel at the D.M.V. are matching insurance data on in-coming accident reports with that shown in the registration files. Any individuals discovered to have dropped their insurance between the date of purchase of their license tags and the day of the accident are also being notified of payment due to the fund.

Maryland motorists were required, for the first time this year, to show proof of insurance at the time of their purchase of new license plates or pay a $27 fee to the Unsatisfied Claim & Judgment Fund.

Farmers Warned To Comply With Conservation Contract

Farmers who have Conservation Reserve contracts are cautioned by William L. Dudley, Chairman of the Maryland Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Committee, about compliance with those contracts during the current cropping and grazing season. The contracts call for no grazing or harvesting on the designated acreage and for planting within the permitted acreage of Soil Bank base crops on the farm.

A farm with a Conservation Reserve contract has a designated acreage of land that has been taken out of production and is now devoted to conservation uses. The conservation uses include grains, oilseed crops, and most trees, grasses and legumes, water storage, and plantings beneficial to wildlife. In return for annual payments, the designated land is kept entirely out of production. Before the planting season started, each farmer with a Conservation Reserve contract was sent a notice of his permitted acreage of Soil Bank base crops. All small row crops are considered Soil Bank base crops under the Conservation Reserve program. Mr. Dudley said failure to comply with one of these three contract obligations is the most frequent cause of loss of the annual Conservation Reserve payment.

SPORTS
AFIELD

By Ted Kestrin

There's only one way to become a good fisherman or fisherwoman, insists Jason Lucas, Angling Editor of Sports Afield Magazine. Concentrate!

The one constant characteristic of all successful anglers is that they never mix fishing with talking. Even practice can't make one a competent angler unless it's thoughtful practice. The same is true for learning to cast. If you pay attention to what you're doing while you're practicing, it won't take long to become proficient. For the new caster, however, a word of advice. The end bearings of the reel on a fine casting rod must be oiled every day you use it. If the reel is neglected, it will do nothing but backlash no matter how well you cast.

Here's another tip for the beginning flycaster about the best way to back. Scrape about 3/4 inch of the surface from the end of the fly line and fluff out the end to get at tapered tuft. Double the tuft back on the rest of the line to form an eye about 3/4 inch. Touch the doubled part with lacquer. Roll the doubled part between slightly dampened forefinger and thumb to make it fairly round while it's drying. Then make a wrapping for it with silk thread, beginning a little up the line from the doubled part. Three or four half-hitches will serve at each end. Put on several coats of lacquer, letting each dry before putting on the next. Do the same at the other end of the line. Attach an end of the backing—usually braided casting line—to the reel arbor. Any safe knot will do. On the free end of the backing make a loop about six inches long. With a true backing line a perfection knot is preferable because it will go through the guides with the least bumping. In putting on the line, pass the doubled backing loop through the eye on the fly line. Then open out the backing loop, pass the reel through it and tighten it on the fly line eye.

SPORTING TIPS

Fishing

Crickets and grasshoppers are good bait but, at times, a little hard to control. The perfect container for them is an item found in almost every house—a one-pound salt box. Punch a few breathing holes, pull out the spout and slip in the insects. When you're ready to fish, open up the spout and drop out the hoppers one at a time.

Every angler has his own trick for scaling fish. Some of these methods work, some don't. Here's one that does. In place of the normal scaler, use a painter's steel wire brush. Even when the fish are dried out, scales come off one, two, three.

Do you know the legal way to measure a fish to see if it comes within legal limitations? Place the fish on a flat surface and measure on it—not on the curve of the fish. The length is from the tip of the spout (with the mouth closed) to the end of the largest ray of the tail.

The cheapest kind of bait is the kind you catch yourself. Here's a tip that should help you get more faster. When using an umbrella net, stir up the bottom mud until the water floating over the net becomes cloudy. The mud contains minute life forms on which the minnows feed. In this way you'll double your catch per dip.

Hunting

A pheasant is a bird which is as much at home on the ground as in the air. A running pheasant is a problem many hunters can't seem to solve. The wise hunter works toward an open field, creek or fence. When the birds reach the end of cover they will probably take to the air and give the hunter a fair shot. Even if they do not, the hunter will be able to spot them in the clearing and give chase.

If you wear the same jacket after ducks that you do after deer, you've got a problem. If you buy a red or yellow jacket you'll spook the ducks two miles off, if you buy one of olive drab you're liable to get blasted by a cross-eyed deer hunter. Here's the solution: Buy an olive jacket—good for ducks—and when you go after your deer mark the sleeves and back with industrial adhesive safety tape. These stripes of bright yellow will distinguish you from the deer.

(Try for a $50 prize. Send your tip to A.A. Contest, Sports Afield, 959 8th Ave., New York 19, N.Y.)

The harness horses currently campaigning at Ocean Downs have been trained to race on an artificial gait, either the pace or the trot. When a horse leaves this gait, he is said to be breaking, that is, breaking into a gallop, the horse's natural inclination. If a horse breaks his gait during a race, the driver must pull him back until he reverts to his gait. Many uninitiated fans get disturbed when they see "their horse" so restrained, but the driver is disqualified if his horse does not run in his gait.

An albacore tagged and released off San Francisco on Nov.

15, 1959 was recaptured on Mar. 13, 1960 by a Japanese long-line tuna fishing boat, 1,000 miles southeast of Tokyo Bay, in the vicinity of Marcus Island.—Sports Afield.

Dove Banding Important In Management

The Department of Game and Inland Fish is cooperating with the U. S. Fish and Wildlife Service this summer live-trapping and leg banding mourning doves, according to Chester Kerns, Game Management Chief.

The results of the banding operation will enable the Service to establish a relationship between dove production and harvest areas when the bands are recovered by hunters this fall and submitted to the Federal agency for data analysis.

Dove management currently consist almost entirely on hunting regulations. However, habitat management may receive more attention if the banding information should indicate a marked decline in populations.

The mourning dove is expanding its range in northeastern United States and Canada and generally is in a period of population increase. Thus, a knowledge of the effect of hunting and hunting regulations on the population is of primary importance both in conserving the birds and in liberalizing regulations.

Fresh Waters News From Western Shore Counties

Heavy Fishing Pressure at Cedarville State Pond: Mr. Percy Miller, Forest Superintendent at the Cedarville State Forest, reports that from July 1, 1960 to June 24, 1961, 3,577 anglers fished in this community five acre lake. Even with this heavy fishing pressure, there are still a good number of largemouth bass and chain pickerel left, for this past week a crew of fishery workers using experimental electric shocking equipment turned up over a hundred bass, bluegills and chain pickerel in a 33x100 foot area along the shore line.

State-owned Ponds still very popular: Fourth of July holiday weekend brought out hordes of anglers on all state-owned community ponds and lakes. Catches of bluegills and crappie was reported good, with bass catches being only mediocre.

Loch Raven Largemouth: A Loch Raven angler reported seeing a school of largemouth which he estimated being between 80 and 100 fish, swimming and feeding near the surface. Some of us listened with doubt in our minds, but when he held up his stringer with 4 largemouth, all of which were over 4 pounds each, our doubt vanished. It is very regrettable that we failed to get this lucky angler's name.

Potomac River: If the water is clear and at its normal level, smallmouth bass can be taken practically anywhere along the Potomac bordering Montgomery, Frederick and Washington Counties. If the water should happen to be high and muddy, try for catfish.

Patuxent River: The upper regions of the Little Patuxent from the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad to Fort Meade, a few smallmouth can be taken. The lower Patuxent is muddy, eels, bullheads and white catfish are plentiful.

Big Patuxent from Laurel to Queen Anne's Bridge is muddy, eels and catfish biting, especially at night. If the water should clear, try casting for chain pickerel and fall fish with a Mepps spinner.

Susquehanna River: From dam to mouth of Deer Creek loaded with white and yellow perch, smallmouth bass, some pan size rock and a lot of catfish and an occasional walleye.

Conowingo Reservoir: Crappie fishing very good.

Loch Raven, Liberty and Pretty-boy Reservoirs: Crappie and bluegills abundant and largemouth still biting.

Federal-State Fish Kill Report

More fish are reported killed by industrial wastes than by other pollutants, according to a report of the Public Health Service's Division of Water Supply and Pollution Control.

Figures contained in the first fish summary report of the co-operative Federal-State fish kill project showed that in the first seven months, June through December 1960, a total of 286 reports were received from 36 States showing a total of 63,000,000 fish killed.

Agricultural poisons accounted for the second highest number of fish-kill reports, though they were in fifth place in total number of fish killed.

The total river mileage affected was 1153 miles, in addition to 51 miles of lake and bay shore lines and 1407 acres of lakes, reservoirs and bays.

To Win The Cold War

In order to win against Mr. Khrushchev's type of fighting, America must get off the defensive and show some spunk. To win a non-shooting war, one does not necessarily have to rattle muskets, but it seems that an aggressive spirit and certain fixed objectives are required. First of all, therefore, this country must get up off the floor and begin to look like a winner instead of a loser. We have ideals, principles, techniques and accomplishments that the world admires and appreciates. But why do we soft-pedal and become reluctant when it comes to the American heritage?

While Russia has been bragging and precipitating crises, agitating and building offensives, we have either vacillated or reacted only weakly, showing hardly enough spirit to cause any friendly nation to commend us. The Soviet Union appears to have goals, whereas we have none. They don't mind whooping it up for their objectives. (Too many of us have not believed them, even when they tell the truth!) They carry the cold war into our own territory, then they win when it seems we are not there with leadership vigorous enough to support our own interests.

A Special Kind Of War
This picture is, of course, pessimistic, but it is a true one. Some of us are at long last realizing that the "cold war" is a most realistic conflict. But that we are in a particular kind of war is a fact that many are not willing to concede. Business as usual, politics as usual, and government as usual is the wishful thought of too many Americans today. Just handle what comes whenever it comes up, we seem to say, and perhaps the unpleasant way will go away. But the Russian threat is not going away simply because we vote several billions in foreign aid!

The antidote for Communism can be Americanism. Mr. Khrushchev knows this, for he is a practical man with well-informed observers throughout the world. But like the rest of the world, he sees us trying to buy favor about the nations. He sees us insisting on social experiments for other nations that in many instances imitate socialism and turn out to be impracticable. He sees us exporting very little Americanism at its truest and best.

A Long Drought

We ought to be explaining to all the world the importance of our system, under which 44 per cent of the world's manufactured goods are produced by 7 per cent of the world's population. And why have we not been doing this? The reason is utterly simple. We are not even in the habit of explaining it at home. We have been too busy imitating the Socialists. Most Americans, I suppose, have a certain respect for our way of life. But the value of constitutional government, of our private enterprise economy, of our common standards of trust and integrity as part of our national character — these things are chiefly taken for granted.

We Americans have done very little, next to nothing, in the last 30 years, to build love for freedom and the American way. Right here at home our educational institutions, both public and private, are beginning to realize that a long, long drought was permitted in citizenship training. A generation was virtually lost, for it has not been taught respect for Christian values and for the American heritage. We have neglected the basics that gave our nation its stature, and in doing so we have almost misshaped and mislead our youth. America Almost Neutralized

We have also almost neutralized our people. Today when one talks about the objectives and tactics of Communism, too often it falls on deaf ears. These ears are dulled by so-called liberalism, which all too often turns out, after analysis, to be merely political expediency without responsibility. These are not true "liberals" who value liberty. These misguided persons, often high-minded, join in ridiculing anyone who warns of Communism. Those who so willingly and foolishly become dupes of Red policy need to overhaul their definitions as well as their viewpoints.

Unless we can pull ourselves out of lethargy we are going to lose as surely as the sun comes up in the East. We shall have to inform ourselves first about these threats to America, recognizing the objectives and tactics of the Communists for what they are: Attempts to destroy us. The onslaught against us can be resisted only if we want to save America and believe that America is

THIS WEEK IN CONGRESS

By Cong. Charles McC. Mathias Jr.
(R-6th Dist., Md.)

Recently two members of the Greek Parliament visited the 6th District Congressional Office in Washington. These distinguished visitors asked me to tell you of the deep gratitude of all their nation for American aid which had made it possible to withstand the pressure of Communism. When I replied that Greek courage and endurance had also been necessary, they reaffirmed that without the help of the United States it would have been impossible to avoid falling into the Communist orbit. They also said to you, through me, that they had two suggestions for the conduct of the policy of the free world. The first was to understand, support, and encourage reforms where they are needed within the free world. The second was to improve our ability to express ourselves and explain our principles and objectives. I am sure that most Marylanders will agree with our gallant allies on both points.

At mid-week, I organized a dutch cruise up the Chesapeake and Ohio Canal for fellow freshmen Representatives in the 87th Congress. It was an evening enjoyed by all aboard and gave many members a welcome chance to enjoy the hospitality and beauty of the Maryland scene. The Congressmen, who came from all parts of the country, saw the C & O Canal for the first time, and I know many of them now understand the C & O Canal National Park plan and will support it.

The Fourth of July proved to be a busy day from beginning to end. I was in Baltimore at 10:30 that morning where I joined in the ceremony marking the official return of the United States Frigate Constellation to her home port. I was extremely happy to take part in this dedication as it was an inspiring reminder of our stirring naval traditions.

Later that afternoon, in a speech at Thurmont, I called for a revitalization of individual initiative; a reawakening to our splendid heritage of freedom, opportunity, and progress. In a sense, I stressed the need for a new declaration of independence on the part of every American—an independence of thought, an independence of purpose; but always remembering that America must remain as one land, strongly united in the face of world pressures.

On the evening of the Fourth, before 60,000 people in Takoma Park, I was prepared to reflect on our courageous past and its impact on our future. But by the time it was your Congressman's turn to speak, dusk had fallen and the many boys and girls were staring anxiously into the sky. It was a time for firecrackers, not wisecrackers! Thus, remembering an old saying that the best speaker is one who stands up and sits down in as little time as possible, I quickly said, "On with the fireworks!" However, I do want to express my thanks to the Takoma Park Independence Day Committee for a most excellent and enjoyable evening.

I sincerely hope that each and every one of you enjoyed a happy, safe, and inspiring Fourth of July.

Might I add that this week I'm issuing my first Washington newsletter. If you don't receive one, and would like to be placed on our mailing list, please write me at Suite 133, Old House Office Building, Washington 25, D. C.

Naval Academy Available Appointments

Congressman Charles McC. Mathias Jr. announced this week that after October 1, 1961, he will nominate candidates to fill two openings in the Class of 1962 at the United States Naval Academy. The Representative from Maryland's Sixth District said that one principal nominee and five alternates would be chosen for each position at Annapolis. The successful candidates will enter the Academy as Fourth Class Midshipmen in July, 1962.

Mathias said that he will accept applications from qualified men until September 15th. Candidates for nomination must be citizens of the United States between the ages of 17 and 22, and have a high school diploma. The Congressman said that his procedure will be to give each applicant a preliminary Civil Service Examination in November. Those who pass this examination will be referred to a Board of Review, composed of several representative citizens of the Sixth District, who will personally interview each man. The men selected by the Board will be referred to the Naval Academy, where they will be given the College Board examination and final physicals. The Academy makes the final selections from those passing the tests. "I believe," said Mathias, "that this system assures the Academy of the best qualified young men, and it gives each candidate an equal chance for selection." Application for Congressional nomination should be made by writing Representative Mathias at Suite 133, Old House Office Building, Washington 25, D. C.

The Congressman had high praise for the young men interested in the Naval Academy. "The desire of these young men to serve their country through a career in the United States Navy is most commendable; and I can assure them of the respect and esteem of their fellow countrymen."

The unerring "Asroc" Missile has been built to prevent any submarine threat on our coastline or to our shipping. The front half of the missile is a homing torpedo which is boosted by a solid propellant rocket to the target area. The rocket booster separates in flight and a parachute lowers the deadly torpedo into the water. The missile is then free to seek out its target.

EFFICIENT FEEDING AND LIVESTOCK MANAGEMENT

By Dr. Gustav Bohstedt
"Meritus Professor of Animal Husbandry University of Wisconsin"

Avoid "Flavored" Milk

To produce palatable milk, not a "feedy" or "barry" flavored milk, a cow needs to be well ventilated, both inside and outside her body.

Why? Because the fat particles in the milk attract and hold odors that give a flavor.

It is not difficult to understand why a barn needs to be ventilated. It is partly to get rid of excessive moisture and in the process to refresh the air.

There may be strong smelling feeds in manure or feed carts. Besides silage there may be different kinds of hay, weeds, or by-product feeds like wet brewers' grains down the feed alley.

Such odors are easily trapped by the surface layer of butter fat in the milk. Milking parlors and pipeline conveyances of freshly drawn milk to the coolers in the milk room help prevent this unwanted flavoring.

What about ventilating the inside of the cows? We can do a lot in this respect by not allowing access to any "flavor" feeds such as alfalfa hay or silage or rye pasture within about four hours before milking.

It is known that smelly volatile fatty acids are absorbed from the digestive tract by the blood. Through the thin membrane separating the blood and the milk systems in the udder they tend to pass into the milk.

But what passes into the milk during a few hours after feeding also passes back into the blood and from there through the lungs and out of the body. The recommended four-hour interval between eating strongly flavored forage and milking permits the desired ventilation.

A very convincing demonstration that outside odors which are absorbed by the cow can pass into the milk, is to rub the inside of a Western feed bag with garlic or onion and hang the bag briefly over the muzzle of a cow, then milk her and sample the milk.

Question: I read that in an experiment where milking cows on pasture had access only to block salt they ate only one ounce a day, and it was considered enough. Is that true?

Answer: The report of the particular experiment may be true, but a serious question is whether with only block salt available under all climatic and management conditions, milking cows would eat enough salt to meet their need. It is recommended that one percent loose salt be mixed with the grain, and in addition that loose salt or block salt be freely accessible. Often the recommendations call for trace mineralized salt.

Sometimes they launch a boat at a likely spot, crank up a Merc 60 (ideal for a cartop boat) and motor upstream to a starting point. Then as they wade downstream the boat stays with them. As fish are caught they are dumped in the accompanying boat and finally delivered back to the car where the journey started.

The system works particularly well because catfish seem to enjoy laying up in holes under brush heaps and spots where the current has undercut a bank, thereby making hand-fishing a very efficient method.

And catfish are mighty good to eat, however they are caught.

Let's Go Fishin'

BY BOB BREWSTER

Outdoor Editor, Mercury Outboards

In some parts of the U.S. it's called "stump-knocking"; in others "hand-fishing," but by either name it is the same thing — walking in a creek or river and catching fish by reaching into hidden holes and grabbing them.

In some states hand-fishing is as illegal as making bathtub booze, in others it is accepted, if not openly encouraged. It would be wise to check state laws before venturing forth, the Mercury outboard company fishing authorities advise, just to be on the safe side.

To those who view it for the first time, hand-fishing must seem like a crazy way to bag fish. The practitioners wade a typical sluggish river, feeling under brush piles and undercut banks for the "holes" in which catfish seem to prefer. When they feel a fish they often stroke it to quiet it down (this works and I've done it) much like petting a cat, then ever so carefully get a good grip on it and haul it out of there.

REAL SIMPLE

Which sounds real simple until you do it. One complicating factor is a hand-fisherman never knows for sure what will be in the hole until he reaches in — it could be a big snapping turtle and if so he could lose a hand. Or it could be a catfish big enough to swallow a hog, in which case, he'll need help to land it.

The hole can be difficult to reach and the fisherman may have to go in water over his head to check it out, it can be filled with snags that rip the hands, or it could be the home of a dandy catfish. And if the latter case is true the hand-fisherman can, with a little luck, bring home enough catfish to feed his family for a week . . . or maybe a month if he successfully tangles with some of the upwards of 150-pound monsters that roam the Mississippi River and its big tributaries.

In some areas hand-fishermen go in groups for their muddy fun, with several on hand to help in case one of the group gets hold of more than he can handle. Sometimes a sack is taken down to the hole and the fish shoved in the sack underwater. Others believe in taking down a hay hook and slamming it into the fish, then landing it by brute force and shouting curses, which seem to help a lot.

BOAT DELIVERY

Sometimes they launch a boat at a likely spot, crank up a Merc 60 (ideal for a cartop boat) and motor upstream to a starting point. Then as they wade downstream the boat stays with them. As fish are caught they are dumped in the accompanying boat and finally delivered back to the car where the journey started.

The system works particularly well because catfish seem to enjoy laying up in holes under brush heaps and spots where the current has undercut a bank, thereby making hand-fishing a very efficient method.

And catfish are mighty good to eat, however they are caught.

Sun Burn Can Be Harmful To Skin

A Little At A Time

Your skin can get older than you are. Those who get a gorgeous suntan year after year, do so at the expense of skin that may get wrinkled, dry and discolored before its time. That's what too much sun can do to you.

Aside from the fun and relaxation of it, nothing about tanning in the sun is especially good for you. However, people will continue to seek a sun-bronzed skin so—true burn that can really make you suffer.

Remember sunburn is a

... Don't spend more than 20 minutes in the sun the first time out.

... Increase your sunning time gradually.

... Use a suntan lotion or cream while you are getting your tan. Put on more lotion or cream whenever you come out of the water and renew it every two hours.

... Don't be fooled by a cloudy sky. The burning sun rays come right through.

... The sun is strongest for about two hours before and after noon.

... You get more of a burn at the beach than in the country because sunlight reflects from water and sand. But you can still get a burn midst the greenery, so better observe that 20 minute limit first time out, whenever you are. Summer means picnics and polio are in full swing again, stated Mr. C. E. Wise, Executive Secretary of Maryland Farm Bureau. "It's a time for family fun or family fear, if members are not polio vaccinated."

"As Marylanders under 40 should have their polio vaccination," said Mr. Wise. "Particularly children under 10 years of age should be vaccinated because nearly two-thirds of all polio cases occur in this age group."

"Contact your County Health Department or your family doctor for further information," urged Mr. Wise. "All children under 20 are eligible for vaccination at the local Health Department."

The schedule for County Farm Bureau picnics according to Mr. Wise includes Frederick County on August 19 at the Carroll Manor Grounds.
