Most Anything At A Glance

BY ABIGAIL

And so, with Thanksgiving already just a pleasant memory, we turn our thoughts to Christmas, which is less than five weeks away. Christmas means a lot of things to a lot of people: Settling down in earnest to figure out the gift list and the budget that inevitably goes hand in hand with it. Trying to make the two "give" takes the mental and financial manipulation of a real genius. Then we suddenly become aware that we haven't ordered our Christmas cards yet, and in compiling the list of persons to send cards to, we receive another jolt because somehow that list seems to get longer each year.

A trip to the attic to check the big box of Christmas decorations we've been using and adding to each year, reveals that they're pretty seedy looking after comparison with the beautiful things on display in the stores. Comes now the question, "Can we take out a few more dollars from the already groaning budget to remedy this situation?"

To many of us the calendar tells us that it's time to start planning the trip back home to spend Christmas with the folks. This, in itself, is a job of pretty mean proportions involving such things as completing the shopping earlier, getting a long range survey of weather predictions and road conditions in advance, equipping the car with snow tires, chains, etc. and a myriad of other details.

The passing of Thanksgiving is the sign for Mother to start baking the holiday cookies, and from here on wonderful tantalizing aromas will be emanating from the kitchen. You might as well enjoy the aromas because you know from experience that you can't have the finished products until Christmas... unless luck is with you and there happen to be a few broken or burned cookies that Mom wouldn't want the neighbors to see.

Yes, just the thought of Christmas approaching brings feeling of warm anticipation, happiness, kindness, thoughtfulness—all kinds of pleasant emotions that for some unknown reason have been lying dormant for some time. Like the exhilaration and warmth you experience while preparing a basket of food for some needy family. It's so rewarding. I would like to encourage those of you who have never done this to try it. Give a basket of food JUST ONCE to a needy family this Christmas and I promise you that the look of deep gratitude and the "God bless you" attitude of the recipient will send your spirits soaring. You'll be so glad you did it.

Indeed, Christmas does mean many things to many people but the over-whelming and over-ruling significance of the Yuletide Season is the celebration of the glorious birthday of Christ. The joyous Christmas carols, the words "Peace on Earth, good will towards men" never before had such meaning for us as they do now in this critical year. With the Cuban situation as it is just off our shores, and the day to day crises all over the world, each and every one of us should head the list of things we want for Christmas with PEACE! Like anything else in life, we don't just have things handed to us—indeed, we have to EARN them. We must offer prayer, deep and sincere, to God, and we must assure him of our real faith and love, and fervently hope that we will truly have "PEACE ON EARTH" during this Yuletide season.

Soon streets and homes throughout the country will be ablaze with colorful lights and decorations. Enthusiasm and anticipation will run high, and yet overhanging all this splendor, beauty and joy is a fearsome, horrendous cloud of fear and the grim, frightening thought, "Will this be our last Christmas?" It could so easily be—unless we entreat God to help.

Rain Diminishes Number Taking Polio Vaccine

A total of 19,243 people took the Type II Sabin oral polio vaccine at the 14 clinics in Frederick County Friday and Saturday, but the total was 1,488 less than the number who took the Type I vaccine last month, Dr. Forbes H. Burgess, county health officer said this week.

Dr. Burgess attributed the diminished turnout to bad weather Friday night, and to the fact that many area residents suffering from minor seasonal ailments such as colds and virus attacks would be reluctant to venture away from home.

During the four hours the clinics were in operation Saturday, 11,672 were inoculated.

He also mentioned that those who did not get the vaccine in Frederick County could receive it at Carroll County points, which will be open from noon until 4 p.m. Sunday.

"We plan to give the vaccine to students at the Maryland School for the Deaf this week," he said, "and in about two weeks to students at Mt. St. Mary's and St. Joseph's colleges. We will also send some vaccine to the Maryland Institution for Males at Breathedsville."

Vets' Education Rights Assured

Reservists who were called to active duty during the Berlin crisis have been granted additional time to complete their education and rehabilitation training under a bill recently signed into law by President Kennedy, according to F. E. Jinn, manager of the Veterans Administration Regional Office in Baltimore.

The extension amounts to equal time for services rendered Quinn said.

Reservists who were called to active duty under executive order before August 1, 1962, and those whose enlistments were extended, benefit under this liberalization of the original Korean GI Bill.

Similar extensions of deadlines for training under the War Orphans Educational Assistant Act are also granted to orphans whose programs of education are interrupted due to certain conditions beyond their control. This is designed to aid orphans who (a) because of personal illness or sickness in the immediate family suffer financial hardship or (b) who are working and are obliged to temporarily suspend their studies because certain demands of their job force them to drop out of training.

More information about these GI Bill amendments can be obtained at the Veterans Administration located at Fayette and St. Paul Sts., Baltimore 2, Md., or at any other VA office.

Potomac Edison Co. Plans Giant Coordination Move

Plans for The Potomac Edison Company's participation in a more than $350 million dollar coordinated construction program were revealed this week by R. G. MacDonald, President of the utility company.

The entire program, which involves 18 investor-owned electric utility companies serving more than 30 million people in eight eastern states and the District of Columbia, was announced Monday at a special press conference in Philadelphia.

One of the highlights is construction of more than 600 miles of new 500,000 volt transmission lines from West Virginia near Wheeling to terminals near Philadelphia, in northern New Jersey and in metropolitan New York. These will serve as a major high-capacity link for the interchange of electric power between utility systems in the west, north and south. Another highlight will be two large mine-mouth power plants with an aggregate capacity in excess of 2,100,000 kilowatts to be built, one near Johnstown, Pa., and the other near Morgantown, W. Va.

The extra-high-voltage transmission facilities and the first units at the power plants are scheduled to be completed by 1967.

The high-voltage lines will tie together major systems in the eastern mid-Atlantic area, provide pathways to eastern load centers for delivery of power generated by the two new mine-mouth plants and permit the flow of large amounts of power to or from the west. One circuit of 500,000 volts will run eastward approximately 130 miles from a connection with the American Electric Power System not far from Wheeling, W. Va., to the new plant near Morgantown and then to the new plant near Johnstown, to be known as the Keystone Electric Generating Station. Two circuits of 500,000 volts each will run eastward from the Keystone Station, one about 225 miles to the Philadelphia area and the other approximately 300 miles to terminal points in northern New Jersey and the New York metropolitan area. The latter provides a 500,000 - volt transmission tie between the Pennsylvania-New Jersey-Maryland pool and the transmission backbone interconnecting New York City with upstate New York and New England.

In addition to further assuring ample supplies of power for future load growth, the new lines and power plants should produce substantial operating economies, important in maintaining low-cost electric service.

Law Assists Disabled Vets

Nearly 100,000 peacetime veterans who have suffered service-connected disabilities will benefit under terms of the peacetime vocational rehabilitation bill, according to Mr. F. E. Quinn, Manager of the Veterans Administration Regional Office in Baltimore, Md.

This bill extends to these peacetime veterans the benefits of VA's wartime Vocational Rehabilitation Bill.

Mr. Quinn said some 12,000 peacetime veterans incur injuries each year and may be eligible for the new benefits.

The new law provides similar vocational rehabilitation training for peacetime disabled veterans as did the original vocational rehabilitation bill.

Veterans entitled to the benefits are those who sustained service-connected disabilities while in the Armed Forces (a) during the period between World War II and the Korean Conflict, and (b) since February 1, 1955.

Mr. Quinn pointed out one difference between the original vocational rehabilitation law and the new law is that a peacetime veteran with a disability rated less than 30 per cent must have a "pronounced employment handicap" in order to qualify for vocational rehabilitation.

Another very important change is that there is no time limit or final date for benefits under the new law. Under the previous law benefits for most World War II veterans ended July 25 1956, and for most Korean veterans will end January 31, 1964.

From 1943 to 1962 the Veterans Administration has provided vocational rehabilitation services to one-and-a-half million disabled veterans. Their disabilities cut across injury and disease categories from the veteran with relatively minor disabilities to the quadriplegic (paralysis of all extremities), and the veteran with very serious psychiatric history.

Boat Registration Forms Mailed

Over 60,000 re-registration applications are being mailed this week to Maryland boat owners by the Dept. of Tidewater Fisheries.

"All of the present certificates for boats registered in Maryland expire on Dec. 31," said William B. Matthews, Jr., chief of the Boating and Recreation Division, "and we believe that by mailing the applications for re-registration now, the boat owner will have sufficient time to renew his certificate before it expires."

"We are asking several additional questions, namely the manufacturer's hull number of each boat; the type of boat such as runabout, cabin cruiser, auxiliary yawl, etc., in order to give more positive identification on the certificate; and the home port of the vessel. It was pointed out that the boat's number will not be changed and that the new certificate will be valid until Dec. 31, 1965, unless the owner sells or transfers his boat before that time.

There is ample space on the application to correct any mistakes that are on the present certificate and everyone is urged to mail the renewal form back to the Dept. promptly. Matthews also stated that if any boat owner does not receive his renewal application by Dec. 1, he should write the Dept., being sure to give boat number and all the information as it appears on his present certificate.

All About Dogo

The Value of Your Pet

You can estimate the value of your pet in two ways. Method number one is simply add all the money you've spent on his maintenance through the years to his initial cost.

"An unrestrained shopping trip for dog accessories alone can soon increase the investment in your dog to astonishing proportions," says Clarence C. Pawcett of the Purina Dog Care Center, St. Louis. "Today, the nation's 28,000,000 tail wagers are responsible for an industry that is estimated to take in $5,000,000,000 annually! This includes output for foods, medicines, veterinarians, kennels, breeders, pet shops, and luxury items such as mink coats, beauty shop treatments and psychoanalysis!"

However, these tangibles mean little in estimating the real value of your pet.

Method number two is computing the intangibles. There's no dollar-and-cents expression for the joy and companionship your dog has given. "The incalculable sentimental value can make your pet one of your most precious possessions," says Pawcett. "This has been called, 'The only real love money can buy.'"

Since the healthy dog can contribute more to family enjoyment, Rover will continue raising his value in terms of love for years to come, if he's always given the proper care.

100 YEARS AGO

TAKE NEW POSITIONS
LEE, BURNSIDE, GRANT

By Lon K. Savage

In every theater of the Civil War, troops were on the move 100 years ago this week, getting into new positions for a winter of hard fighting.

The names of now famous generals—Lee, Grant, Burnside, Bragg, Sumner, Sherman, Rosencrans and Pemberton—were on everyone's lips as the shifts took place. New names appeared, too.

One near forgotten name—that of Joe Johnston—reappeared in the news that week as the Confederates hero returned to duty, having recovered from his wound at Seven Pines.

Another familiar name popped up again when James Alexander Seddon, the pre-war Virginia Congressman, was named as the new Secretary of War for the Confederacy.

New towns and cities began appearing in the headlines, names that soon would be the scenes of massive bloodshed: Fredericksburg, Murfreesboro and Vicksburg.

It was a tremendous scramble of troops hither and yon, as the lines for the winter's fighting were drawn. Briefly, it went like this:

In Tennessee

Heavy-bearded Braxton Bragg made one of the major movements with his Confederate army in Tennessee. For Bragg, after his retreat from Kentucky, had marshalled his forces at Knoxville and had watched as his new opponent—Federal Gen. William S. Rosencrans—had assembled his troops at Nashville.

Now, as November began drawing to an end, Bragg started his men westward across the state toward Rosencrans. When the move had ended, Bragg's army had a new headquarters at Murfreesboro, less than 50 miles from Rosencrans. It was a matter of time before the two would fight.

In northern Mississippi, Ulysses S. Grant, too, was on the move. With his eyes on Vicksburg, Grant slowly pushed his huge Federal army down the state beyond Holly Spring, with Oxford just ahead of them. As he moved, his subordinate, William Tecumseh Sherman, moved more troops overland from Memphis to join his boss. Ahead of them, Confederate Gen. J. C. Pemberton slowly pulled back.

In Virginia

In Virginia, events were transpiring of even more importance to the governments at Washington and Richmond. Half way between the two capitals, across the Rappahannock River from the little city of Fredericksburg, the veteran Army of the Potomac moved, 100,000 strong, into position under the new command of Gen. Ambrose Burnside.

On the morning of November 24, Gen. Edwin V. Sumner of Burnside's army demanded Fredericksburg's surrender. That afternoon, a division of Gen. Robert E. Lee's Confederate Army of Northern Virginia moved in to defend the city, and the demand was refused. There, too, it was only a matter of time before an engagement would be fought.

At Richmond, meanwhile, Joe Johnston showed up ready to fight and soon received his orders. He was to go West to command the troops of both Generals Bragg and Pemberton. While Johnston was in Richmond, he saw George Wythe Randolph, who had just resigned in a huff as the Confederacy's Secretary of War. Before Johnston left for the West, Randolph had been replaced by the thin, black-haired lawyer, Seddon.

BABSON

Writes . . .

BY ROGER W. BABSON

Babson Talks About Advertising

BABSON PARK, Mass., Nov. 22—Advertising does not need to be defended against its critics; it can defend itself. I am quite aware that tremendous sums of money have been wasted in advertising, but think how much has gone down the drain in drilling for oil or mining for gold. When the right media and techniques are used in advertising, they can bring tremendous rewards, just as can drilling in oil-rich terrain or mining promising lodes. Advertising is, of course, a risk, and it should be sold as such.

Chance Worth Taking

Nevertheless, it is a risk well worth taking. I can think of few gambles more likely to pay off. It is obvious from the record that officials of American companies agree with me on this, so their outlays must have been profitable indeed. When the final total is figured for 1962, I expect that both national and local advertisers will have shelled out about $8 billion for ads in newspapers and magazines. This represents a most spectacular channeling of cash into newspaper advertising.

Proof of the success of advertising is found in its steady growth of popularity. Ten years ago, for example, expenditures for newspaper and magazine advertising totaled only $3½ billion, while they amounted to only $1½ billion just twenty years ago. For some years a steadily greater part of corporation costs have been going into advertising, and I am certain that this trend will continue over the years ahead. It is interesting to note that, along the way, those concerns doing the greatest amount of advertising have nearly always been at or near the top in their fields.

Advertising Helps Everybody

Some labor publications tend sometimes to complain that companies are putting too much money into this type of publicity. Union officials want higher wages for their members, and more and more expensive fringe benefits,—and often think of advertising as mere diversion of money that should go to the employees in one form or another. Hence, company officials should make plain to their personnel the value of advertising in holding up production and keeping employment high. A well-run firm is careful not to waste funds in profitless advertising. Results are always carefully studied, and directions are pursued that bring about greater sales, which in turn lead to larger payrolls.

Newspaper advertising is to a great extent responsible for our having the highest wage rates and the best standard of living in the world. There could be no mass selling without newspaper advertising. Mass production would be an impossibility without mass selling. Without mass production, our standard of living could not conceivably have reached its present historic height.

Smaller Cities Important

Many corporations located in or immediately outside of big cities place most of their outlays in national media, but more and more are recognizing the value of local placement. For instance, even some of the biggest concerns are giving more attention to small dailies and weeklies. I expect this tendency to increase over the coming years. Surveys have indicated that people of small communities read advertisements with great care.

In fact, I should say that I still consider newspapers, both large and small, are a safe investment. This is particularly true where there is only one newspaper which controls a given area, with the focus in a smaller city. True, production costs are moving upward, but it is still relatively easy to raise the price of a newspaper by a cent or two. People still want written news, and the more they pay for a paper the more carefully they read both the news and the ads. This means that the advertising space becomes more valuable.

Advertising And You

Occasionally I hear somebody say, "What is advertising doing to help me?" That is an easy question to answer. It is helping you, for one thing, to hold your job 52 weeks out of the year. It is helping to up your "take home" pay. It is increasing employment, so that your children too can get a good education. All of us should encourage newspaper advertising.

Always and for everything giving thanks in the name of our Lord Jesus Christ to God the Father. (Ephesians 5:20. RSV.)

Paul was in prison when he wrote our text. What a soaring spirit they reveal! When he and Silas were imprisoned, they sang hymns and praised God, and the prison doors were opened.

During the Thirty Years' War in Europe, Martin Rinkart wrote the words of the hymn: Now thank we all our God, with heart and hands and voices.

The Pilgrims who came to America set aside a day for thanking God. Surely their situation was not enviable; things were far from perfect. Yet from such a background America received its first Thanksgiving Day.

It would seem that being thankful for times of testing releases creative forces in us we never believed we had. Being thankful rather than resentful makes for soul development.

William Law has said that the surest way to happiness is to thank and praise God for everything that happens to us. If we thank and praise Him for it, we turn it into a blessing.

Prayer

Help us, O Lord, to render unto Thee the homage due Thee for Thy bountiful goodness and holiness. In our defeats as well as in our successes, keep our hearts in love and help us to give thanks. In our Lord's name we ask. Amen. Thought For The Day

Everything that happens to me can be a blessing if I have a thankful spirit.

FARM BUREAU
EXCEEDS QUOTA

"An increased number of Maryland farmers have shown confidence in their voluntary organization, Farm Bureau," stated A. Kenneth Miller, as he announced the State membership goal of 10,050 had been exceeded for 1962.

Credit for over a 2% member increase from the previous year is given by Miller to the 18 counties who achieved or went over the top on their member quota.

Among the counties listed was Frederick County.

Farm Bureau, the largest general farm organization, based its membership campaign largely around the question, "Who is to manage the farms of America?"

The choice of who is to manage is among government, labor unions, off-farm corporate managers, or farmers themselves.

"Farmers are giving their answer," said Miller, "by joining together through their own organization." "It is their method of protesting federal schemes to regiment, police, blackmail and punish them in the name of 'new' farm programs."

Announcement of the membership increase was made just prior to the State Delegates' meeting on Nov. 20 in Randallstown. At this session, county representatives act on recommendations for national issues to be forwarded to the American Farm Bureau for consideration as policy for 1963.

WASHINGTON AND

"SMALL BUSINESS"

By C. WILSON HARDER

While a chap like Newton Minow, currently head of the Federal Communications Commission, may throw out all kinds of smoke screens to scare the broadcast industry into devoting hours upon hours to pumping out the propaganda for whatever line government wants to take at any given time, no bureaucrat so far has succeeded in controlling independent thought.

This was made apparent in a recent C.W. Harder cent nationwide poll conducted by the National Federation of Independent Business.

In fact, an analysis of the returns could well indicate nation's independent business and professional people are of the opinion there is a lot of "mar-larkey" going on.

By an overwhelming 88% the nation's independent business people express approval of the measure by Sen. Javits which gives Congress power to veto any trade deals entered into by administration, which actually means State Dept.

In the same ballot, the nation's independent businessmen also by a majority of 90% approved a bill by Sen. Curtis to permit business to discharge wildcat strikers, and by a vote of 95% approved a bill by Sen. Tower to prohibit unions from forcing on employers union rules prohibiting use of time saving methods of production, or new equipment designed to save production costs.

© National Federation of Independent Business

Somewhere around 100 years ago, a famous U. S. President said "You can fool all the people part of the time, part of the people all the time, but you cannot fool all the people all the time."

There is perhaps an awareness that there is need for some changes in the U. S. foreign trade policies. But they do not want the control to slip away from the people they elect from their local districts. Why?

The answer to this could be quite involved, but could perhaps best be summed up by a statement that the nation's businessmen are not sure whether the nation is governed for the welfare of all, or completely dominated by Big Labor on the assumption that Big Labor controls the votes to perpetuate any group in office.

All the yammer that U. S. must produce more to compete with the European Common Market seems to fall on deaf ears when the entire system appears to be based on producing less.

Wildcat strikes disrupt American production. Featherbedding increases the cost, especially in competing with nations like Spain where coal miners get $41 per month.

The question in many minds seems to be, whose kidding who?

In fact, the question before the house seems to be "Why not some leadership in putting our own house in order before getting so concerned over what is going on in Brussels? Is Big Labor, or common sense, shaping the destiny of America?"

Care and Cleaning of Stainless
Flatware and Accessories

More and more brides are selecting carefree stainless steel flatware over higher priced metals. So inexpensive, so easy to care for it's guaranteed to last a lifetime. Many young women today are combining a career with marriage. They simply don't have the time to polish flatware and worry about proper storage. They entertain frequently and informally—thus the need for a flatware service elegant enough for company, practical enough for everyday.

The increasing popularity of stainless steel flatware and accessories is due to its unusual combination of beauty and practicality. There is no more trouble to keeping items made from this metal clean than there is in cleaning glassware and dishes. Here are some hints from Jones & Laughlin Steel Corporation on cleaning stainless steel:

- Wash your flatware and service dishes in ordinary soapy water with or without detergent and rinse in warm soft water.
- Wipe everything dry to avoid the streaks that come from minerals in tap water.
- To remove dried sticky food deposits, soak the stainless item in hot soapy water a few minutes to help loosen the caked-on food.
- If you have to scour, always use stainless steel scouring pads available at hardware stores and supermarkets. Slivers of ordinary steel wool may break off, become embedded and cause discoloration.
- To remove burned-on spots, make a simple paste of ammonia, fine scouring powder and water.
- You never need lacquer or polish stainless. Even if you scratch it, stainless won't rust.

ALL ABOUT BABIES...

A Public Service of the National Baby Care Council

Give Thanks For Baby

By William Kitay
Member, National Association of Science Writers

Editor, All About Babies
This Thanksgiving Day has special meaning in many homes. For in these homes, there's a new baby—a first child.

Thanksgiving Day is an American holiday. And just as American is the feeling that having a baby is an achievement.

The arrival of the first child is proof that the marriage vows have been fulfilled. It is an expression of hope that the new baby will bring happiness into the home and bind the marriage even more closely together.

To the new parents, the first baby is an image of perfection. The love that is in their eyes does not permit them to see the baby for what he truly is—a new individual, one who is rich in potential and desirous of responding to his environment.

And while the new baby is being "oohed" and "ahed" and his features are being discussed—"he's got your chin, dear"—the proud parents fail to see the unique individual the baby someday will be. He may resemble the father or the mother or the grandparents, but he doesn't look like any of these fine people. He looks like himself.

To many parents, the new baby is a repository of the ideals and the hopes that they themselves had not realized. The baby provides the parents with the opportunity to relive their own lives. This is especially true with a first child. "He'll be the doctor I've always wanted to be." "She'll have a chance to learn to play the piano, the chance I never got."

With thoughts such as these, many well-meaning parents set out to mold the new baby into a carbon copy of themselves. They deliberately interfere with the child's own personality and they wonder why the course they have plotted is proving such a difficult one.

The wise parents will encourage the development of the baby's own personality. They will encourage it along lines that are consistent with the child's own capabilities and goals.

It takes patience to know your own child, to understand the many variations in his behavior, in his rate of growth and development. It takes patience, time and understanding to readjust your expectations with reality and to experience the satisfactions and joys of being a parent.

CLOTHESPIN CAPERS

That reliable household servant, the wooden clothespin, is all set to add some unusual services to its regular duties. From the Clothespin Manufacturers of America, these handy tips:

Run a two-foot length of colorful ribbon through the coils of three spring-type wooden clothespins, tying each in place about 6 inches apart along the ribbon. Tape or thumbtack vertically to wall or door, and you have a ready-made note hanger, perfect for keeping memos and reminders in easy view.

Clothespins go to school with the kids to help insure against loss of rubbers, gloves and rain hats. Get full-size spring-type wooden pins and paint the child's name on the side with bright nail polish. They'll identify and keep pairs safely fastened together.

In the kitchen, a straight wooden clothespin serves as a perfect bookmark. Keep one close by your cookbooks; it holds them open and prevents flip-flopping pages when you are trying to follow instructions.

Bulbs wintering underground in your garden? To mark their location for spring cultivation, write the name of each type with a waterproof marking pen on the side of a straight clothespin. Stick in ground beside bulb so only the top of pin shows.

Grange Supports

President's Action

FORT WAYNE, Ind.—National Grange delegates from 38 states are meeting here to discuss a wide range of farm issues and establish policies for the year ahead.

One of the issues of major concern to the representatives of more than 800,000 Grange members is the increasing role of the Federal government in the areas of taxation, spending and controls.

A resolution adopted this week declared that the "trend toward centralization of governmental authority and responsibility . . . is a matter of deep concern to all people who believe in our constitutional form of government."

The Grange declared that individuals, local and state governments have surrendered a "disturbing portion of their obligations of self-government to the Federal government."

Another thing that disturbs the Grange is what it called the "encroachment" by any of the three principal branches of government—administrative, legislative and judiciary—upon the proper functions of any of the others.

The Grange declared that government participation in commercial and financial enterprises in competition with private business should be strictly limited.

"We seek," the Grange said, "the preservation and enhancement of our heritage of maximum individual freedom, consistent with 'the greatest good for the greatest number' of people."

In what amounted to a vote of confidence in President Kennedy's stand on Cuba, the Grange urged the President to "continue to stand firm and to take such action as is necessary to remove the Soviet threat from this hemisphere."

"If we are to obtain freedom and a peaceful world," the Grange declared, "it is evident we must move in the direction of world order founded on legal principles which are capable of judicial interpretation and effective enforcement."

"Despite negotiations between nations, disarmament conference, and efforts of the United Nations to relieve international tensions, all evidence warns us that International Communism still intends and plans to dominate the world," the Grange declared.

The Grange urged President Kennedy to make effective the Monroe Doctrine by prompt action "when any attempt is made by foreign powers to establish military installations or by infiltration to gain control of governments within the Western Hemisphere."

Secretary of Agriculture Orville Freeman said, in addressing the delegates, that "agriculture will need to speak with a more unified voice (in the next Congress) if it is to be heard."

The next Congress, he declared, will be more heavily weighted by urban and city interests as a result of redistricting resulting from the shift in population shown by the 1960 census. "If it (agriculture) speaks with a babble of voices, then I fear the Congress will be inclined to say that no one speaks for agriculture and nothing can be done to help those who cannot agree among themselves," Freeman said.

Grange Master Herschel D. Newson, recognizing the need for greater farm unity, said "the Grange has consistently stood ready to participate in reasonable compromise as to methods or mechanics so long as the general direction of progress can be maintained reasonably consistent with our own program."

The Grange, he said, has always been interested in trying to understand whether there were real potentials, or what the possibility might be of success of other programs and proposals. "However," he added, "we have never, nor must we ever, be willing to sacrifice the rights and opportunities of individuals in the interest of presumed harmony."

In other actions during the past week, the Grange favored:

A program of multiple use of land and water in the public interest, with primary emphasis on private development and management.

Local zoning laws to limit the use of high-quality farm land for such non-agricultural uses as urban housing, roads, industrial sites and airports.

Enforcement of the 160-acre limitation on the use of irrigation water under the National Reclamation Act for farming.

The right of workers to organize and bargain collectively, but with compulsory arbitration to protect the public health and safety when other methods for settling disputes fail.

Preserving adequately powered radio clear channel stations serving farmers in remote areas.

The use of Standard Time thru the year and nation.

Extension of the Universal Military Training and Service Act from June 30, 1963, to June 30, 1967.

It's Time For ... EYE CARE

Dr. Newton K. Wesley MATURE VISION AND ITS CARE

Imagine a camera the size of a ping-pong ball. It takes motion pictures in 3-dimension and color. Focus is automatic for distances from four inches to the most far away star, and there's no computing with a light meter, whether you're taking pictures in candlelight or brilliant sunshine.

Well, you own two such cameras right now! I'm talking about your eyes — next to your life, your most precious possession.

But as you reach the later years, you have to realize your eyes aren't as young as they used to be. They can't do the work they used to do. Does that mean we have to gradually put away our reading, driving and other pleasures aside — and wait for darkness to overcome us? Not on your life! With proper care and attention, our vision can last much longer than it used to in the days gone by. Today, with modern glasses and contact lenses plus other modern techniques for dealing with such problems as cataracts, our elders may look forward to good vision for many years.

The first step in caring for the vision of all of us is to have regular eye examinations. In this manner, we can learn of eye defects that are present and treat them early. In some cases, early examinations may prove to be the means of saving your sight.

SPECIAL WASHINGTON REPORT

PART 2

U.S. Victory Predicted In Moon Race with Reds

By Sen. Robert S. Kerr (D-Oklahoma)

Chairman, Committee on Aeronautical and Space Sciences

The vast expenditures authorized by Congress for the U. S. space program obviously will provide a tremendous stimulant to our national economy.

Congress has authorized a NASA budget of $3.7 billion for the current fiscal year, enabling American industry to forge ahead in the development of the complex equipment required for the unprecedented venture into space. Military applications will bring the total outlay to approximately $5.5 billion this year.

"Space will become a vital factor in the national economy, perhaps the dominant one," says General David Sarnoff, chairman of the board of Radio Corporation of America. "Already more than 5,000 companies and research organizations are engaged in civilian and military space activities, producing some 3,200 different products related to space enterprises."

Perhaps, General Sarnoff's estimates are on the conservative side. The development of the experimental Telstar alone required the facilities of 1,809 different business organizations.

As called for by the President and implemented by the Congress, this space program is a unified national effort.

President Kennedy said "The Nation's conscience requires it to lead the world's drive into space."

America will be victorious in the moon race with the Reds.

All of NASA is devoted to civilian pursuits, but the Department of Defense and the Atomic Energy Commission also have a significant role to play.

President Kennedy, with congressional approval, placed Vice President Lyndon B. Johnson in the key role of coordinator. The Vice President, by a 1961 enactment, serves as chairman of the National Space Council.

For administrator of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, the President wisely chose a successful business executive with broad experience in public affairs. James E. Webb, who served as Director of the Bureau of the Budget and Under Secretary of State during the administration of President Harry S. Truman, has provided able leadership to the fast-expanding space agency.

Our civilian space program is comprised of five major areas including manned space flight, applications, space sciences, advanced research and technology, and tracing and data acquisition.

TIMETABLE

The manned space flight program has three principal objectives: piloted earth-orbital flights lasting for several days—or even weeks; manned missions penetrating deeper into space; and, exploration of the moon in this decade by a United States team. To carry out the program, this country is developing more powerful launch vehicles, more advanced spacecraft, new or improved ground-test and launch facilities, and supporting equipment.

Our national policy is concentrated on the peaceful application of this space know-how for the betterment of mankind, but it is also available to our military forces if the United States should be threatened by an enemy aggressor ranging beyond the atmosphere.

By legislating its plans and conducting its experiments openly for all to see, the United States has thrilled people around the world, inspired all Americans and proved its peaceful intentions. We have not forgotten our spiritual values in this new age of scientific discovery. We seek new knowledge about man and about God's universe in the firm belief that this knowledge will help man to live in greater harmony with his fellow man.

Science Saves Lives

The advances of science are playing a key role in reducing high death rates in overpopulated, underdeveloped countries. Only a short time ago both adult and infant mortality in these areas was cruelly frequent.

Outstanding developments that have contributed significantly to a lessening of the mortality rate are:

Penicillin — Discovered by accident in 1929 by Sir Alexander Fleming, its anti-bacterial and non-toxicity to humans were established by Sir Howard Florey in 1941. Today it saves lives in foreign medical programs.

Salk Vaccine — Originally tested in 1954, it was first used on a mass basis in the United States to combat polio in 1955. In many of the newly-emerging nations it is helping to combat polio as it has in the United States.

Enko — Developed in 1957 by Joseph Sunnen, this aerosol foam method of birth control was proven highly successful in Puerto Rico. Today, sold across the United States and distributed overseas by medical missionaries, it is making possible intelligent family planning under difficult conditions so that all children born can be properly cared for, fed and given medical attention.

Sulfa drugs—Synthetic drugs from sulfanilamide were first made in Germany in 1908, but it was not until 1936 that sulfanilamide's therapeutic value was confirmed in this country by studies at Johns Hopkins University. Used to treat a variety of bacterial infections, sulfa drugs are contributing significantly to lowering the once high death rates in underdeveloped countries.

DDT—First synthesized in Germany in 1874, it was not until this insecticide was used to save the Swiss potato crop in 1939 that its great value was recognized. Today it not only eliminates household pests but also protects crops in many countries.

Italy Stands Firm As Fashion Center

Italian fashions have scored again winning bravos from buyers and the press alike at the recent showings in Florence by Italy's top designers.

Because of the great acceptance of Italian couture, look forward this fall and winter to seeing a revival of the old-time "siren" type as portrayed by the great femme fatales of the past.

Many of the fashions shown in Florence hark back to Greta Garbo, Marlene Dietrich and Bette Davis in the days when they personified glamour, international intrigue and the world for the asking.

Fashion editors in the U. S. said "Couture Thriving in Italy". A Los Angeles fashion editor intoned "Italian Fashion Designers Challenge French".

What all this means is that you can look for a tailored mannish look by day—Garbo in a belted suit and wide-brimmed fedora, slinky, feline, siren effects by night—Jean Harlow, sinuous and desirable in "Dinner at Eight". Also look for brocades, and sarong skirts, and mandarin coats.

Back are slim but supple skirts; high, straight collars, many of them fur; narrow shoulders some slightly padded; renewed interest in sleeves; big, elaborate hats, uneven hemlines, long skirts for evening, clinging crepes and satins and lames.

Still in are tunics, capes, scarves, cocoon coats, fur hats, elaborate at-home costumes, many of them trousered.

When it comes to fashion all roads lead to Italy, the hub of the haute couture.

Here is an example of the type of fashion that is winning from the style-conscious world.

No '3 D's' Rural Homes Launder With Gas

Automatic appliances and modern laundering aids have eliminated the "3 D's"—drudgery, dampness and disorder—once associated with wash day.

According to Margaret Spader, home service consultant to the Gas Appliance Manufacturers Association, sales records of the people who make gas dryers and combination washer-dryers show that rural homes were quicker than their city counterparts to adopt laundry automation.

"Laundering is enjoying improved status in most farm and suburban homes," says Miss Spader. "It no longer rates among the least-liked chores—and with up-to-date equipment doing the job, it no longer requires dedicating a whole day and a great amount of energy to keeping the family in fresh clothes and linens."

The GAMA consultant points out that rural homes generally enjoy a space advantage in setting up a laundry area. This enables them to set up an ideal "assembly line" for sorting, washing, drying and hanging laundry on a handy shelf arrangement for soaps, detergents, bleaches, irons, direction books and stain removal charts.

The "heart" of the modern laundry, says Miss Spader, is a trio of appliances: an adequate-size gas water heater, an automatic washing machine and a gas clothes dryer (or a combination washer-dryer). There's no need these days to have pipes, ugly faucets or plumbing protruding from laundry area walls. The new appliances fit so close to walls that they have a neat built-in look.

Incidentally, many homemakers now are installing their laundries in bathrooms. After all, they say, the bathroom is where a good deal of the family wash originates. Furthermore, it has the necessary water source, and a gas line is simple to install, particularly in a home supplied with LP (bottled) gas.

Decision Time Is Now

As these comments are being put together, the Cuban crisis is far from being resolved. But military action appeared less likely as the Russians backed away from a confrontation and agreed to haul their missiles out of Cuba. Most citizens, with lots of help being offered by professional analysts from government, politics, and the press, were asking plenty of questions about Soviet intentions and wanting to know why it was that the Reds armed Cuba with the missiles and thus precipitated such a crisis.

It cannot now be known whether this was a tactic meant to force withdrawal of American bases close to Russia (which were set up openly), or to provide cover for a new barrage against Berlin, or even something else less noticeable. What we can be sure, however, is that even if it failed it was some part of their program for world conquest and the overthrow of American capitalism. Nothing now has been revealed about the Communists in the whole Cuban experience.

The Action Was New

It is possible that this trip to the brink could have been a Red experiment to see how far America would allow herself to be pushed. The whole world was beginning to ask, and so were our citizens, whether our leadership would cover before each demand of the Soviet conspiracy. If it was such a test to discover American determination and resolve, then we can be thankful that Mr. Khrushchev got his assurances in actions as well as words that the nation will oppose his colonialism in Cuba or anywhere else. There was something new in this.

After all, this is the answer the Russians have been needing for many months—yes, for several years. It is an answer, in general, that our liberals have not been willing to give. And it is an answer, we believe, that would never have come from the appeasers and accommodators that have floated with ease in and out of the government for nearly a generation. It was an answer, we presume, that could not have come from the builders of the new Socialistic America, nor could have been developed by that expert on Latin American affairs, Presidential Advisor Arthur Schlesinger, Jr. Disarming Warmth

A genial note from Mr. Khrushchev informed Mr. Kennedy that the missiles would be dismantled and removed. The President's reply was conciliatory. Apparently thinking of the many frustrations experienced with the Reds in weeks of disarmament talks, Mr. Kennedy wrote that "as we step back from danger perhaps now . . . we can together make real progress." It has developed, however, that Mr. Khrushchev is the one who receives the compliments of Bertrand Russell, who thanked him and called him a man of peace.

Mr. Khrushchev's "disarming" geniality may win him propaganda victories in some areas of the world, but he appears to have overplayed his hand this time with regard to Latin America. However, whatever unrest remains in Latin America will still attract the infiltrators and incendiaries of Communism. If we revert to our usual blindness with regard to the international menace of Communism, Khrushchev will resume his imperialistic drive in Latin America in no time at all.

The Essential Question
The question is not likely to be whether the Reds will now, in a new spirit of meekness, compete with us in disarmament. More than likely this withdrawal is merely a staged retreat, entirely tactical, until another opportunity is presented for the brand of aggressiveness the Russians are so well known for. They attach no ignominy to a retreat of this sort following a big thrust forward, for they are still ahead of the position that they might have occupied if they had undertaken no action.

By a similar token, we are still short of the international position we might have claimed, if we had not so belatedly read out the score. We could have been making a more determined effort to halt the international thievery. The Reds are not idealists. They are practical men, dedicated to conquest. The essential question remains, and it no doubt puzzles the Russians when they look at us as much as it mystifies this writer when he examines the wavering patterns shown by American leadership through the years. That question is: Will we now, at long last, become firmly united at home and abroad for firm action against the Communist menace?

SPORTS AFIELD

By Ted Kestner

The outer Bahama Islands are attracting more and more anglers, who are ever on the alert for the unusual in the sport of fishing. The friendliness of the people, the warm, mild climate, the cooling trade winds, the sparkling waters with unlimited fishing possibilities all make this group of British-owned islands a paradise.

There is a wide variety of fishing that can be enjoyed in the waters of the Out Islands and, for the light-tackle enthusiast, bonefishing is one of the most fascinating branches of salt-water fishing. The tremendous speed at which bonefish can travel when hooked and their wariness on a clear, shallow-water flat puts them in a class by themselves when compared with other fish of equal size. They can be taken on artificial lures or natural bait, with a fly rod or fresh-water spinning gear.

The bonefish flats cover a very extensive area to the west at the southern end of Great Exuma, which is the largest island in the Exuma group, being about 40 miles long with an area of almost 100 square miles. There, miles and miles of shallow waters are crisscrossed with channels that are excellent exits to deep water. When the tide starts coming in, great schools of bonefish slowly move in to feed on these flats and will usually inhabit the flats until the outgoing tide makes it unsafe for them to linger in water that barely covers their backs. As they move off the shallow areas, they seek the protection of the deeper water of the channels, where they are often found muddying the water. Wherever the transparent waters of the thoroughfares are found discolored by feeding fish stirring up the bottom, you can

Tips on car care

MODERN MOTORIST

by W. A. "Red" HALL . . . Automotive Specialist

Do you know what can go wrong if too much air gets into your car's brake system or the brake fluid becomes contaminated? Perhaps not — and maybe that's why so many motorists neglect brake maintenance.

Actually, it may be a matter of life or death. Air in the system, which may enter because of leaks or because the fluid level in the reservoir is low, can cause unexpected — perhaps fatal — brake failure!

What happens? When you push the brake pedal, it compresses air bubbles instead of fluid. It may go all the way to the floor without stopping the car.

Changing fluid occasionally is recommended because it's the only sure way to keep water and dirt from building up in the system, possibly causing faulty operation of the master cylinder or wheel cylinders.

How do water and dirt get there? Water may be absorbed by the brake fluid as a result of condensation in the master cylinder, or it may enter the system through worn boots in wheel cylinders. Dust particles enter through the air vent in the reservoir.

While all this may sound alarming, a little care prevents real danger. Have your service station check the brake system on a regular basis. In addition, watch for trouble signs, such as a brake pedal that feels spongy. When you have the brakes re-lined, have the system bled and fluid drained at the same time.

Two more precautions are wise: (1) don't allow old fluid to be reused, and (2) look for "SAE 70R-1" or "SAE 70R-3" on the brake fluid label. This guarantees a quality of fluid that meets specifications of the Society of Automotive Engineers.

FeedAnd Grain Program Different

Feed grain producers in Maryland will be notified this fall about general provisions of the 1963 feed grain program, according to William L. Dudley, Chairman, Maryland Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation State Committee. Unlike the 1962 program, only one sign-up will be held for the 1963 feed grain program, and that will be early next year. Additional information, including the base acreages, yields, and payment rates established for farms, will be mailed to growers prior to the sign-up period. Farmers who have already planted their 1963 barley will be able to participate in the program provided they reduce their 1963 feed grain acreage by at least the minimum. The chairman explained that the 1963 program will be a voluntary program, under which a farmer may divert an acreage of barley, corn, or grain sorghums to a conservation use and receive a diversion payment and a price-support payment, he will also qualify for a price-support loan on his crop. Base acreages for each of the three grains will be combined into total feed grain base for the farm, and the farmer may divert from one or more of the feed grains represented in his total base. The minimum diversion will be 20 per cent of the farm's total feed grain base, and the maximum will be 50 per cent or up to a total of 25 acres, whichever is higher, but not in excess of the total base for the farm. As under the 1963 wheat stabilization program, a farmer will have to comply with the intentions shown on his agreement; if he does not comply fully with provisions of the program, he will not be eligible for any payments or price support on any of the three feed grains. Also, to be eligible for a diversion payment and price support on one farm, a grower taking part in the 1963 feed grain program must not exceed the total feed grain base acreage on any other farm in which he has an interest. Advance payments will again be available at the time of sign-up. Final payments will be made after compliance has been determined.

Long May They Wave

On Flag Day (June 14th) and Independence Day, patriotic citizens fly the Stars and Stripes. Alongside waves the state flag, bearing a symbol historic in meaning. The two dates on the North Carolina flag signify early bids for independence.

The Great Seal of New York—another of the original 13 colonies which gave men and arms during the War for Independence—appears on its flag... little changed since its design in 1777.

On National holidays, all 50 state flags are displayed at the Mall of the State Mutual Life Assurance Company of America, one of the few places in the country where they may be seen. For free leaflet about our state flags, illustrated in color, write to their Public Relations Branch, Worcester 5, Mass.

Globe-Trotting Novelist Describes A "Point of Impact" at Sea

In the dead of night, a deeply laden gas tanker, wallowing through a sou'wester off the coast of Italy, rams herself deep into a huge luxury liner. The panic and the bravery that ensues among the people on board both ships is the smashing climax of a new novel called "Point of Impact," written by Robert F. Mirvish, released by William Sloane Associates.

Although he's never been directly involved in any collision, Mirvish is a man who knows the sea as well as any writer since Jack London. Like London, he too is a sailor. For the past twenty years, the burly six-footer has been shipping out to the world's most exciting and exotic ports as a radio officer on all kinds of liners and tankers. And, in that time, he's published a dozen novels, the latest of which is "Point of Impact." He'll have another out in the Fall, and is already working on three other books.

Mirvish's action-packed novels have a solid basis in his colorful career. He's sailed from the North Pole to the steaming Persian Gulf ("When the temperature there dropped below 120 degrees, we called it a cold snap," he recalls), from the ice-bound fastness of wartime Murmansk to the shell-torn beaches of Salerno. He took part in three invasions, from North Africa to Italy. He watched the Italian fleet surrender at Malta, and dodged U-boat torpedoes all across the Atlantic. "We never did get sunk," he says. "We ran into a lot of action, but our ship was very lucky."

Although he claims that the sea was his classroom, Bob actually did have time to work in a formal education. He put in eighteen months at Central Tech High School in Toronto and, after World War II, took studies in literature, writing and psychology at the University of Toronto. "And after that, you could say I took the rest of my courses out at sea, of my own devising."

Robert F. Mirvish, merchant seaman and author of twelve novels.

The result of all this "education" is readily apparent in "Point of Impact," Mirvish feels. "And the best of it all is this—I can continue shipping out around the world and keep on writing as I please. It's a great life!"

They Reached The Top

GORDON PATTERSON, PRESIDENT OF YALE & TOWNE

Steel Millhand
Born in China of American missionary parents, Gordon Patterson began his climb to the top of the industrial world as a second helper at an open hearth furnace in a Youngstown, O., steel mill.

Night School
Putting great value in education and self-development, he attended night classes at the University of Pittsburgh* while holding down a full-time job at a bank... Earned his degree, magna cum laude, in 1929.

President
Unusual imagination and administrative talents assured Patterson's steady rise. In 1960, he was named president of Yale & Towne, manufacturer of locks since 1868 and materials handling equipment since 1875.

*Recently, Pitt awarded Patterson the honorary degree of Doctor of Commercial Science.

OUTDOOR SPORTING TIPS

Fire Starter
Here's another quick fire starter to add to your collection. Soak pieces of turkish towel in kerosene and seal in plastic bags.

Quick Bullet Identification
A dab of paint on the end of the shell case lets you tell at a glance what load is going into your rifle.

Jingle Bell Rabbit Hound
Use several brass tags on your rabbit dog's collar to jingle as he runs along. You can follow his course through woods or high grass by the merry sound and the noise will start more game.

Undenting Gun Stock
It's an old furniture trick but it works as well on your gun stock as on the piano. To remove a dent, wet a cloth and place it over the dent. Now sizzle the whole thing with hot iron. Repeat until dent comes out. Steam causes wood fibers to swell, filling back to their original positions.

How To Tell A Coral Snake
The deadly tropic coral snake has a harmless twin that looks exactly alike except the bands on the coral snake are in sequence red-yellow-black, red-yellow-black. The non-poisonous snake has bands that go red-black-yellow, red-black-yellow. To remember which is which, memorize this rhyme: "Red and yellow will kill a fellow; red and black are okay, Jack." Yellow color is often more like orange, but try to make a poem with orange in it.

Easy Hot Lunch
Outdoorsmen have been holler-ing: "Go light!" since Nessmuck, first writer to see and praise the call of the wild. Take their advice with this hot lunch tip: Wrap chicken, slice of onion, carrot, potato, all salted and peppered, in aluminum foil. Bury in the field and build a fire over it. A half hour or so and you've got a fine hot meal. For variety substitute fish filet for chicken.

Balky Outboard
If your outboard won't start in cold weather, put a few drops of lighter fluid on the spark ends of the plug and try it.

Seat Belts a "Must" for Rural Driving

DID YOU KNOW that driving on country roads is much more dangerous than driving on city streets? Last year 74 per cent of all accidents occurred on rural roads, killing 24,500 persons in contrast to 10,500 who were killed in urban traffic. If you do even the smallest amount of rural driving, you should use safety equipment that can save your life in case of an accident.

At least 5,000 lives a year could be saved if all cars were equipped with seat belts, according to the American Medical Association and California Oil Company, which is currently conducting a "Seat Belts for Safety" drive through its Chevron dealers. Safety engineers at California Oil say that the man pictured above never would have been thrown from his car if he had been using a seat belt. You are five times safer staying in the car during an accident, safety experts agree, and a seat belt will help keep you securely in your seat.

If you don't have seat belts, get them. If you have them, use them. They can save your life.

SCOUT LEADERS

HOLD MEETING

Neighborhood V held their meeting on Monday evening at 8 p.m. in St. Euphemia's Hall. Mrs. Chatlos presided. The regular business meeting was shortened to a few important announcements. It was decided that now is the time to be planning for your cookie chairman. Also that each troop will decorate a window in girl scout week and that a prize will be given for most attractive display. New registration forms are being mailed to troops being registered in January. Adults and scouts are being registered separately to simplify registration.

This meeting was a farewell party held in honor of Mrs. Dorothy Good. Mrs. Good was presented with a gift certificate from the Colonial Music Store in Frederick as a memento of all her efforts in getting scouting started in Emmitsburg. The group enjoyed games, singing and refreshments. The next meeting of the group will be held in Thurmont at the home of Mrs. Curry on Jan. 15, 1963. This meeting will be set aside as a vocabulary study meeting and the new area director will be present. The meeting will start at 8 p.m.

Hunting Safety

Another small game season is under way and the Game and Inland Fish Commission wishes to remind all hunters to use extreme caution in handling guns before, during, and after the day's hunting.

It is not only illegal but very dangerous to carry loaded guns in cars since many accidents have resulted and many hunters fined for this violation. Load your gun only when ready to enter the fields or woods for actual hunting. Another cardinal rule is to never point your gun toward another person, even if it is unloaded. Watch that muzzle!

Before firing at game, be certain that another person is not in your line of fire. This goes also for a building, or livestock such as cows and horses.

When returning to the car or house at the end of a hunting day, double check your gun to see that it is unloaded before putting it away.

Safe hunting and good luck.

Leaflets Available

Three leaflets, which have been reprinted from the "Maryland Conservationist", are now available. Two of these are on wildlife management areas, namely, Indian Springs Wildlife Management Area and Dan's Mountain Wildlife Area. These leaflets give pertinent information on the areas and also contain a map showing the refuge area and public shooting grounds.

The third leaflet is "Homes and Shelters for Wildlife" and contains dimensions and drawings for nesting and den boxes for wood ducks and squirrels, houses for songbirds, bird feeding stations and shelters for rabbits.

Copies may be obtained by writing to the Maryland Game and Inland Fish Commission, State Office Building, Annapolis, Md. News Items From Central Md. By R. Abraham, Reg. Fish Cult.

The Potomac River is still producing large stringers of small-mouth bass. Mr. Wilbur Poffenberger of Boonsboro, Md., who was fishing at Lander, reported he and a friend took 13 smallmouths on a sonic plug. These fish ranged from one half to 3 1/4 pounds and the bass only hit at dusk.

Reports from Edwards Ferry on the Potomac indicate limits of large smallmouths are still being caught. These fish are 2 to 3 pounds and most have been taken on large minnows.

Tip of the week: With cooler weather here many persons cook a hot meal along the streams while fishing. Before starting to cook put a coat of soap on the outside of the pan, as this will keep the black deposit from a wood fire from getting on the pan. When finished cooking just wash the pan as usual. The dirt will wash away with the soap, leaving a clean pan without much work. Remember, if you are cooking or camping out, to clean up picnic or camp sites. Don't be a litter-bug!

YOUR PERSONAL HEALTH

Trash Disposal

In the crowded cities and towns in which most of us live in America today, one of the genuine big health problems is safe disposal of trash and garbage. A surprising amount of garbage piles up in even a small community in a few days, and garbage is a well known source of trouble from flies and other insects and rats, mice and other vermin.

Most cities and towns have reasonably efficient pickup and disposal services for garbage, but the householder must do his part, too. Sanitary storage of refuse requires observance of a few simple rules:

Providing and using properly covered containers.

Maintaining the containers in a clean sanitary condition.

Placing the containers in the right place at the right time for the pickup trucks.

Draining garbage and bundling bulky rubbish.

Where required, separating garbage, ashes and rubbish.

Observance of these precautions is a small price to pay for the protection you will receive against disease, accident, fires and vermin. Disease-bearing insects and animals are attracted to an unsanitary environment and may cause typhoid, dysentery, diarrhea, typhus, rat-bite fever, plague, food poisoning or some other insect or animal-borne disease.

Metal or plastic containers of about 10-gallon capacity are about right for storing garbage until it is carted away. The containers should have tight-fitting lids. It is advisable to keep the containers on stands so that the ground underneath can be kept clean and so they will not be easily upset by stray animals.

It's easy for a busy housewife to become careless about garbage and rubbish disposal. Improperly stored garbage is unsightly as well as unsanitary. The American Medical Association urges everyone to examine his trash and garbage disposal facilities and make certain they are sanitary.

Tips on car care

MODERN MOTORIST

by W. A. "Red" HALL ... Automotive Specialist

As sure as the earth is round, many facts concerning good car care do not confirm cherished popular opinion. I'm no Columbus, but let me cite some of today's common misconceptions:

Fallacy: On a cold morning, it's a good idea to warm up the engine for a while before driving.
Fact: Modern oils remain fluid enough for lubrication down to minus 40 degrees Fahrenheit. Idling a cold engine only aids sludging, because moisture from combustion and from air passing through the carburetor condenses to form water in the crankcase. The car should be driven to bring the motor up to proper temperature as quickly as possible.

Fallacy: Since oil never wears out, there's no need to change it, if the filter is changed occasionally.
Fact: Both oil and filter should be changed regularly. Many materials that cause engine wear—acids, certain types of sludge, and fine, abrasive dust and metal particles—pass through the filter.

Fallacy: Additives are not needed with premium oils. They only waste money.
Fact: It's true that some oil additives have little value and may even be harmful. But others definitely benefit. An example is Du Pont's M.O.A., a patented chemical compound that keeps contaminants from forming sludge. Most premium oils contain detergents, but these should be supplemented by a good additive for extra protection against moisture resulting from severe conditions, such as stop-and-go city and suburban driving.

Fallacy: A second-hand car formerly owned by an elderly lady is a better buy than one turned in by a salesman.
Fact: That nice little old lady probably drove at low speeds and seldom went more than five miles per trip. Sweet though she may be, the engine of her car is more slugged and worn than the one in the salesman's car, driven city-to-city on turnpikes at top legal speeds.
