100 YEARS AGO

LINCOLN, WIFE VISIT VIRGINIA WAR FRONT

By Lon K. Savage

A little steamer, the "Carrie Martin," headed out of the Washington Navy Yard and down the Potomac River 100 years ago this week with a most important party aboard: President Abraham Lincoln, his wife, Mary; their 10-year-old son "Tad," and the President's good friends, Dr. A. G. Henry and Noah Brooks, the California newspaperman.

Hardly had the trip got under way when a blinding snowstorm blew up, and the little vessel had to put into a cove for the night. But next day, the boat arrived at Aquia about 30 miles down the Potomac, and the group debarked amid cheering from soldiers who lined the waterfront. From there, they rode a freight car—furnished with benches and decorated with flags and bunting, but still a freight car—to the Virginia front just north of Fredericksburg.

Well Reported

With one newspaperman in the party and others at the front, the Lincolns' visit was well reported from beginning to end. First, they went to the headquarters of "Fighting Joe" Hooker, commander of the Army of the Potomac, who provided them with three large hospital tents, with the luxury of floors and bedsteads. Then they began reviewing troops.

It was a time of color and pageantry throughout, but the cavalry review of April 6, perhaps, outdid the others. Lincoln, Hooker and a long line of generals and colonels rode out to the reviewing field on horseback, mud flying from their horses' hoofs, Lincoln sitting tall in the saddle with his high hat pointing skyward. To one side, Brooks noted, young "Tad" rode along, "his gray cloak flying in the gusty wind like the plume of Henry of Navarre."

Once on the field, Lincoln watched the cavalry pass in review. "It was a grand sight to look upon," Brooks wrote, "this immense body of cavalry, with banners waving, music crashing, and horses prancing, as the vast column came winding like a huge serpent over the hills past the reviewing party, and then stretching far away out of sight." Hooker, looking at the 17,000 horsemen before him, told the President it was the largest army of men on horses ever seen in history.

The Infantry

The infantry, too, got its chance. Sixty-thousand men, their rifles and bayonets so thick they resembled a forest, passed by the President in one review. Brooks noticed that the President "merely touched his hat in return salute to the officers, but uncovered to the men in the ranks."

Lincoln also called on the wounded in the hospital tents, and Brooks watched the men and reported "tears of gladness stealing down their pale faces."

"Tad" wanted to see some real, live Confederates, and one day, the President, "Tad" and several staff officers rode down to the picket line and looked across the Rappahannock River to the war-ravaged city of Fredericksburg. They saw smoke from Confederate campfires in the hills beyond and a Confederate flag flying from a house.

Some day soon, Lincoln knew, Hooker's army must cross that river and attack those Confederates.

Next week: Fort Sumter attacked.

BABSON

Writes . . .

BY ROGER W. BABSON

Babson Concludes Series On Inflation Hedges
BABSON PARK, Mass., Apr. 4—Let me repeat: Inflation is a very tricky word. Most natural resources which I have mentioned in this column the past few weeks are helped by inflation. However, most railroads, public utilities, and corporations whose income is largely fixed by government and state commissions are handicapped by inflation. Therefore, wise investors should balance their portfolios so they will not be hurt—whether inflation comes or not. Personally, with the constantly growing government debt, I think the U. S. is headed for inflation; but it will come about gradually. If, however, speculators temporarily run up stock prices too soon in advance, beware of a market collapse to follow. Also, readers should remember cost of taxes when buying timber or other real estate.

Timberland Is A Good Investment
The primary asset of the paper industry is the millions of acres of land and growing timber they own. Most of the timber properties lie in remote regions of the U. S. and Canada. Timber growth is not circumscribed by union regulations with regard to productivity and length of work week. The trees do not require holidays, vacations, coffee breaks, and the myriad of other fringe benefits. Labor costs are a relatively small proportion of total costs. Book values of these companies are generally understated in relation to realistic timber values.

ST. REGIS PAPER COMPANY owns or controls over 5 million acres of timberland in the U. S. and Canada. It is a highly integrated producer of many products, including kraft and wrapping papers, containers, printing paper, pulp, lumber, and even packaging machinery.

KIMBERLY-CLARK CORPORATION is the largest producer of cellulose wadding, and is a leading manufacturer of book and printing paper, napkins and towels, and cigarette and other specialty paper. Its affiliated companies produce newsprint. Kimberly is a highly integrated organization and controls some 11 million acres of timberland in the U. S. and Canada.

Favorites Among The Papers
The largest American manufacturer of newsprint is GREAT NORTHERN PAPER COMPANY. Company's mills and some 2 1/2 million acres of timberland are concentrated in the state of Maine. While worldwide excess capacity in newsprint production has created problems, company has expanded modernized facilities and is placing increasing emphasis on specialty papers.

PLYWOOD INDUSTRY IS GROWING
Despite intense competition in the plywood field, the growth of U. S. PLYWOOD CORPORATION has been remarkable. Because of its wide distributing facilities throughout the U. S. and Canada, company is considered to be more of a seller than a manufacturer. In addition to distributing plywood, it sells doors and other timber products to the building trades. It maintains extensive timber stands on the West Coast, in New England, various South Atlantic states, and Canada.

The largest expense in house building today is labor. Plywood manufacturers are doing much to reduce labor costs. Another development to accomplish the same end is the building of "shell" homes, which my friend Jim Walters of Tampa originated.

4-H MEMBERS FOCUS ON CITIZENSHIP

Spur Drive For Informed Young Citizens

In an open letter to 4-H Club members throughout the nation, President Kennedy said, ". . . today, a citizenry of all ages—informed and in action—is more important than ever to the strength and welfare of our nation."

And to be well informed and active citizens of the U.S. is the prime objective of 2.3 million 4-H Club boys and girls. Their theme for the year, "Citizenship in Action" was launched last November during the National 4-H Club Congress at Chicago.

Nearly an entire day was given to a general discussion of what constitutes citizenship in this age of cold wars, exploration of outer space, communication satellites and the like.

Being well informed on social, political and economic issues was the foremost qualification for citizenship stated during the session. Education, understanding and a willingness to assume responsibility also were considered prime requisites for intelligent and effective citizenship.

The two young people shown in the photograph are examples of vigorous, purposeful American citizens. Jacky Strickland, 20, is a student at the University of Florida and 1962 winner of a national 4-H leadership award. Miss Emily Jean Thomas, 19, is a national winner of the 4-H achievement award and a student at Radford College, Virginia. Both received $400 scholarships.

These 4-H Club members have a long record of initiative, service and dependability. They are well informed citizens active in school, community and public affairs. They have thousands of counterparts in their home states—products of 4-H training and environment.

At a recent 4-H meeting, citizenship was defined as "the unending process of education." This concept ties in to the "learn-by-doing" method applied to all 4-H projects and activities. During a 4-H Club membership that could span as much as 11 years, members steadily add to their knowledge and improve their skills.

Along the way, individual enterprise is recognized and rewarded. Educational trips, special training courses and college scholarships are among the awards.

These 4-H extras have been provided for more than four decades by leading business firms through arrangements made with the National 4-H Service Committee and the Cooperative Extension Service.

This year nearly $150,000 in scholarships will be awarded to current and former 4-H Club members by some 50 donors. Among these private business and educational enterprises are:

Ford Motor Co. Fund, International Harvester Co., Firestone Tire & Rubber Co., E. I. du Pont de Nemours & Co., Inc., Standard Brands Incorporated, Kerr Glass Mfg. Corp., Coats & Clark Inc., Oliver Corporation, Carnation Company, Simplicity Pattern Co. Inc., Westinghouse Educational Foundation, Hercules Powder Co.

Also, Allied Chemical Corp., Arcadian Products Dept., General Foods Corporation, Allis-Chalmers Mfg. CAPITOL COMMENT

by Charles "Mac" Mathias
Congressman, 6th District, Maryland

There is now pending in the House Rules Committee a bill to provide assistance to medical education. This bill has been temporarily tabled for future action. This Committee action focuses anew our attention on the growing shortage of medical personnel in America. While the nation today is short of adequate numbers of health personnel, the situation will become acute in a few short years as our population continues to expand. The problem is emphasized when we realize that to maintain the present ratio of physicians and dentists to our population, it is necessary to increase the number of new members of these professions from the present total of 12,000 to 19,000 a year. This means expanding total medical and dental school enrollments from 46,000 today to 75,000 by 1970. In less than a decade we must increase by almost 50% the number of medical and dental students in this country, and to do this we must secure a sizeable expansion of present facilities — facilities that required nearly 200 years of private and local effort to establish! It is interesting to note that in 1950, there were 1300 people in the United States for each family physician (general practitioner, internist, pediatrician). By 1960, the ratio had fallen to 1700 per family physician. The present outlook is for close to 2,000 per family physician by 1975!

A shortage of medical personnel is already appearing in such specialized fields as optometry, where the number of graduates has declined fairly steadily from over 900 in 1951 to about 300 in 1961. And in the field of podiatry, a branch of medicine concerned with the study and treatment of disorders of the foot, enrollment dropped from over 1600 in 1952 to less than 500 in 1960. Overall student applications to medical school reflect a similar trend. In 1956-57, there were 16,000 applicants to medical schools while in 1960-61, the number had dropped (by 1500 to 14,397) to about 14,000.

There is a note of irony to the discussion of medical care for the aged. Any plan becomes specious if there simply are not enough doctors, dentists, nurses, and other health personnel to meet the challenging need for medical services.

Thus, three conclusions are apparent from this analysis of the medical profession and its education.

1. There is a shortage of doctors in this country and this shortage will be acute by 1975.

2. Present medical school facilities are totally inadequate to cope with the 50% student increase needed within the next few years.

3. Fewer students are today seeking careers in the medical profession. (This fact assumes added significance in light of the increase in the general student enrollment in American higher education).

These conclusions graphically emphasize the need for sound and constructive legislation at this Session of Congress that will recognize the needs of medical education in this country and accord speedy action to improvement and expression of that education. For these reasons, I have co-sponsored legislation that will provide for assistance to medical

It's Time For... EYE CARE

Dr. Newton K. Wesley
BLINDNESS

All is not lost when one is blind. Of course everything should be done to prevent blindness, and if there is a pronounced lessening of vision, every possible means should be employed before the condition is certified by competent eye specialists. When it is certain that vision is gone and cannot be retrieved, it seems that all is lost and life is over. This need not be so. Many people have adapted to this new condition and have surmounted impossible handicaps. In working with the blind, we find the first and most difficult problem is to get the newly blind person to accept his condition. They must be made to feel they can do almost anything that anyone else can do—and this is practically true. Blind people operate lathes, teach, become doctors and lawyers. Many jobs in offices and factories are today filled by blind people and the records prove that the work is done, in many cases, more accurately and efficiently, than with sighted workers.

The greatest obstacle, by far, in getting people to accept the blind person as a normal worker is the sighted public themselves. They do not understand the problems and handicaps of the blind and, they tell themselves there is "nothing I can do about it."

The blind want understanding, not sympathy. They want an opportunity, not charity. They want an education is as normal an environment as possible, and not a white cane. I have seen many transitions from the world of the discarded blind to the life of usefulness and independence. According to the National Eye Research Foundation, a great number of potentially useful citizens are lost each year because we do not recognize and face this problem as we should.

Wesley

The thrust of my bill will be twofold. First, it will seek to increase student enrollment in American medical and dental schools by means of liberal, long term loan provisions. It would provide for loans of up to $2,000 a year to qualified student applicants, and at the low interest rate of 3% per year. That such loans are sorely needed and desired by medical students is evidenced in figures recently released by the American Medical Association, which pertain to its own student loan program. In the period between February and December 31, 1962, almost $10 million had been committed by the AMA for loans by 2,890 medical students and 1,768 interns and residents.

As the Journal of Medical Education recently commented, "This far exceeds the anticipated demand for funds."

Second, the Medical Education Assistance Bill will provide funds for medical school construction to meet the increase in student enrollments. In recent weeks, I have talked with medical school officials and medical organization executives. The consensus is that first priority in our national effort to provide an adequate number of physicians should be the availability of Federal Funds on a matching basis for construction of medical school teaching facilities.

The desired effect of this bill will be to facilitate a proportionate increase in the annual number of graduate medical practitioners to meet the overall population increase in America.

The Administration and the Congress have a clear and manifest duty to secure passage of such legislation at an early date in this first Session of the 88th Congress. I can only emphasize that planning new medical facilities takes from two to four years, and then another four to six years passes before the first class graduates and is available for the actual practice of medicine. Thus the adequacy of our country's supply of physicians from 1970 on depends on the actions the Congress takes now. Indeed, we are already behind schedule if we are to meet the demonstrable needs of the nation in the early 1970's. I will do all I can to secure a Congressional awareness of those needs and the enactment of a constructive and beneficial Medical Education Assistance Act by the 88th Congress.

SPECIAL WASHINGTON REPORT

Mental Illness Hits Every Neighborhood

By U.S. Sen. Philip A. Hart (D-Mich.)

Do you know 126,000 mentally handicapped children are born each year in America? Do you know we can halve this number?

Puzzled, perhaps even a little angry, you may ask: "Why don't we?" Mental retardation is a serious personal matter to one out of every 12 people, and it is difficult to believe we can change the statistics and haven't.

But a program recommended by President Kennedy February 5 would change them. It would face up to two critical health problems—mental retardation and mental health.

The program would prevent thousands of cases of mental retardation, and halve the number of people in the nation's mental hospitals. It would give new hope for a more useful life to each of the 5.4 million mentally retarded Americans.

President Kennedy has said what many of us have been putting out of our consciences for too many years—that mental illness and mental retardation affect more people in our country than any other single condition, and must be faced as a national problem.

There are about 800,000 patients in our institutions, 600,000 of them for mental illness and 200,000 for mental retardation. In addition, 1,500,000 people are treated each year for mental problems.

Each year, the total cost to the taxpayers for services to the mentally ill or retarded is $2.4 billion.

Indirect costs, in welfare for and waste of human resources, soar even higher. The cost in heartache and hardship to the families affected cannot be measured.

Clearly, it is time for a forceful new approach.

At the core of the President's recommendations is a comprehensive preventative program.

Philip A. Hart

Very nearly one-half of all mental retardation cases could have been prevented by adequate pre-natal care. And in cities larger than 100,000, about 35 per cent of all pregnant women are too poor to seek medical attention.

To meet this, the President's program gives highest priority to aiding state and local governments in setting up maternity and child care units.

The President's plan would also set about bringing mentally ill and retarded persons back to a useful life. It proposes Community Health Centers that would be open around the clock for both in and out-patients.

Construction on the centers would begin late in 1964, and the government would pay for from 45 to 75 per cent of the cost. It would also give short term grants for initial staffing. This phase of the program, combined with our growing medical knowledge, could reduce mental hospital loads by 50 per cent in the next decade or two.

Strong emphasis is placed on research in both aspects of the program. Federal assistance would be offered for the establishment of research centers and for training personnel.

We have neglected the mentally retarded and the mentally ill for too many years. We can help them. We can do it by adopting the President's proposals.

Foreign Aid Fallacy

Although the U. S. finds satisfaction in having partially financed the recovery of Western Europe, it does not follow that any kind of an "emerging" or "revolutionary" country also will develop a sound economy and a stable government just because Uncle Sam agrees to pay the bills. Mr. Walter Harnischfeger, of the Citizens Foreign Aid Committee, calls this the Foreign Aid Fallacy. When aid flows into such a country, its economy may show temporary improvements. But he insists that in the long run there must be honesty in government, a promise of political stability, and hope of sustaining its own economy with its own resources.

Now that signs of life have been heard in France, we should rejoice. General de Gaulle's bluntness may disturb our quantity, but we have not spent our billions there to create a dependency. It would seem that some of our internationalists fear French independence and patriotic sentiment more than they fear Russian imperialism. It is well to recall that we could have moved in on Western Europe to stay, as the Russians did in Eastern Europe. But the American view does not include imperialistic ambitions toward other lands. If the French now wish to carve out their destiny among nations of the free world and can pay their bills, let them do it. On Their Own

In his statement before a Congressional committee last August, Mr. Harnischfeger suggested that prosperous Europe needs our aid no longer. He also observed that Europe, with a population half again as large as ours, should be able to garner itself with its own troops and at its own expense. Except for unfortunate and imperiled West Berlin, Europe should stand on its own resources. It must stand with Western alliance firmly against the menace of communism.

And so should the rest of the free nations stand, as soon as they are able. But the foreign aid fallacy to which Mr. Harnischfeger referred does not particularly encourage this. Our foreign aiders, having given away more than $100 billion around the world, want to go on supporting shaky governments and remaking "liberated" colonies with dollars. None of the emerging nations wants to be influenced politically but they all will take the dollars. Mr. Harnischfeger suggests that if they are perfectly happy living under a coconut tree we should recognize that it may be a century before they can earn a standard of living equal to ours, or before they even work to earn it.

Lending Is Better

Mr. Harnischfeger reminds us that there are eight major agencies with lending power totaling billions. Most of these can continue to lend on very reasonable terms, whenever a country needs help. In view of the funds available from lending agencies and because of a large foreign aid carry over from the previous fiscal year, it was Mr. Harnischfeger view that new appropriations could be kept below $1 billion. When the foreign aiders start promotion for the increases recommended in the new budget, the citizens should go into action to trim it down.

Export Enterprise

Our gold problem is directly related to foreign aid, in that foreign holdings redeemable in gold dangerously exceed our gold reserves. The approximately $5 billion or so that our foreign policy has been costing us annually would have gone a long way toward restoring our international payments balance. As long as we continue heavy foreign aid spending it can mean an unbalanced budget with a deficit in our balance of payments, and the continued loss of our gold. "The U. S. is broke but our leaders refuse to face it," Mr. Harnischfeger said.

The "fallacy" includes also the view that only handouts from taxpayers will do the job. Our program of foreign aid has largely overlooked the possibility of stimulating private industry to its maximum capability in foreign areas. Private enterprise indeed does possess the know-how for industrial development. It can construct modern towns and put up hospitals and schools. If needy countries would stabilize their governments and stop expropriating foreign investments, private capital would flow in to work for them. What so many of them need to learn is that freedom of enterprise, when the climate is favorable, will tend to do the job for them that it has done for us.

ALL ABOUT BABIES

A Public Service of the National Baby Care Council

Diaper Rash And Diaper Services
By Richard H. Williams, Chairman
Diaper Service Information Bureau
Diaper rash is the painful irritation or inflammation of a baby's sensitive skin. The two most common causes are bacterial breakdown of the urine in a wet diaper into irritating ammonia, and soap or detergent residue that is retained in an improperly rinsed diaper.

The nation's professional diaper service industry, aware of its responsibility to the health and welfare of the baby has, with the help of research scientists, developed processing formulas for the prevention of these and other types of rash.

After years of laboratory research, the industry has found a scientific way of impregnating the finished diaper with special diaper antiseptics that dry into the fibers of the diaper cloth. Here, the antiseptics remain dormant as long as the diaper is dry. Once baby wets or soils the diaper, the antiseptics become active to help prevent bacteria from forming ammonia and to destroy germs.

A typical process in the industry includes four separate soft-water hot suds baths, six after-rinses, plus controlling bleaching, special treatment for neutralizing water alkalinity, and a special cotton softening agent that makes the diaper cloth extra soft.

The entire process takes more than an hour and requires 1400 gallons of soft, pure water. To produce sterilized diapers, water temperatures exceed the required 180 degrees. Quality standards are maintained by continual and compulsory laboratory tests to check sample diapers.

While it is possible to do diapers properly at home, it is difficult and time consuming to duplicate the scientific process of a modern diaper service. Home laundry equipment does not easily lend itself to the continuous one-hour multi-washing, multi-rinsing and special drying process of the modern diaper service required for rash-preventing diapers.

Many families today recognize diaper service as much more than a convenience in our modern way of life. Experience has taught them that the clean, sterilized, antiseptic-treated diapers they receive from their modern diaper service provide medically approved protection against diaper rash.

A U. S. Department of Agriculture study stated: "Newspapers are the best medium for food advertising and for marketing information on food. The printed word can be read, reread, clipped and filed."

About Your Health

by Dr. R. I. Schattner
THE ASIAN FLU
Asian flu epidemics usually occur in the U. S. in 2 or 3 year cycles. And most competent medical authorities agree that we are scheduled to have another one this year.

In 1960, over 26,000 people lost their lives due to the Asian flu. Two years earlier, it accounted for more than 60,000 deaths.

Clearly, the Asian flu shouldn't be considered as a minor cold.

According to Current Therapy, the signs in an uncomplicated case may be headache, fatigue, muscle and back pains and chest soreness (particularly coughing). The throat may be sore, also.

Symptomatic treatment is indicated for these signs. This treatment includes bed rest during the fever stage (2-3 days) in a warm, well ventilated room. Aspirin may be taken for the headache and aching.

Steam inhalations (Compound Benzoin Tincture) may be used to relieve coughs associated with laryngitis. An anesthetic, non prescription, medicated solution (trade name: Chloraseptic mouthwash) may be used as an antiseptic besides relieving throat soreness.

In all cases where any of the above symptoms appear, you should consult your physician.

Dr. Schattner

Rose Planting Steps Are Easy

No magic is needed to obtain beautiful roses in your garden. Select quality bushes and then follow these simple and easy planting steps recommended by All-America Rose Selections.

1. Dig a hole 18" wide and about 15" deep. Replace several inches of loose, prepared soil (soil mixed well with a cup of balanced rose food and several spadeful of peat moss, leaf mold, compost). Form a mound in center.

2. Place rosebush on mound and spread its roots naturally down slope. Position plant on mound so that bud union (knotlike, swollen area) is at about ground level.

3. Cover the roots with soil, working in the soil around roots to eliminate air pockets. Fill hole 3/4 full and tamp down firmly. Pour several pailsful of water into hole and allow to drain.

4. After water has completely settled, fill in remainder of hole with soil and mound up around canes to a height of about 8 inches. Remove protective mound after a week or ten days.

WHY YOU ARE HERE?

FORT SHAFTER, HAWAII (ANF)—WHY YOU ARE HERE is a program developed by the U. S. Army, Pacific, to remind Army soldiers of the need for their presence in a foreign land.

Through the use of all media available, the message is being carried to the soldier wherever he may be—in a tent in Vietnam, a mess hall in Thailand, a dayroom in Korea, an orderly room in Okinawa, or just plain relaxing in an Army barracks.

Colorful posters, messages in unit newspapers from General James F. Collins, Commander-in-Chief, U. S. Army Pacific, and spot announcements aired through the Armed Forces Radio and Television Service facilities in the Pacific area all help to keep the soldier aware of the important job he has to do, regardless of rank or position, as a representative of the United States government and the people of America.

Based on the theme of maintaining freedom and as a deterrent to communist aggression, the "Why You Are Here" program will be continued throughout the coming year by U. S. Army, Pacific, as one of its major Troop Information Projects.

LONG WAY FROM HOME—Pfc Ernest Gaviria, U.S. Army, formerly from Medellin, Columbia, South America, finds the weather slightly different in Alaska during the recent Exercise TIMBER LINE. Pfc. Gaviria is assigned to the 1st Battle Group, 12th Infantry, 4th Infantry Division, which acted as friendly forces in the maneuver. TIMBER LINE provided valuable training for approximately 8,000 men in cold weather combat techniques.

"OPINIONS FROM THE FIELD"

"Fishing Can Be Fun"

Fishing like so many sports can be fun if one doesn't get too serious. When this happens the enjoyment is gone and then it becomes work. Looking back over quite a few years spent in the pursuit of the wily fish, I recall happy days, such as:

The day Jim and I trudged out from town and caught our limit of Trout from Turkey Run. We fished every little nook and pool from Annandale to the reservoir with amazing results. Our equipment? Heavy steel telescope rods, bait casting line, 50c reels, and ever dependable Fish Worms. Our age? Maybe 15, but seemed a lot older when we walked back to town.

Or the day Big Gene and I sang hymns (pretty good harmony too) while we fished for Suckers near Red Rock one warm Spring day. The sun was hot, the birds were chirping, and we came home with a stringer full of F. O. B's. (Gene's name for large Suckers meaning Fat Old Babies).

Then there was the day that Mac, Jimmy C., and I spent at Fisherman's Paradise near Bellefonte. Jimmy and I were fortunate in landing a large fish apiece which is the daily limit. Poor old Mac was still flailing the water at 7:30 p.m. trying for one that was large enough to be worth keeping. He not only developed a sore arm from casting but had his morale reduced considerably by Jim and me needing him. It was a good day, though...

Last, but not least, I recall the day I took my wife Troutfishing on opening day. I had done a real good "selling" job in assuring her how easy it would be to reel a limit of fish. We arose long before daylight, pulled on our boots, and with tackle in hand hurried to Hunting Creek. It was cold that morning and we stamped our feet for warmth as we waited for the opening hour. Finally, the time arrived and my wife took one step forward to make the first cast into a promising pool. What she didn't know was that the overhanging bank had water beneath some roots, and instead of solid ground it gave way and pitched her headlong into the icy water. I'll never forget the look on her face resulting from the sudden shock and I'm not too sure that she didn't lose some of her keenness for Trout fishing at that instant. However, dry clothes and a warm drink put us back on the stream and the day ended happily.

These were happy days—others were not so happy, but they all recall moments spent on the stream

Holsteins Mentioned

Registered Holstein cows from this area are prominently mentioned in an official production testing report received this week from Holstein-Frisian Association of America headquarters at Brattleboro, Vermont.

Crumland Curtiss Candy De Kol 4271438, a five-year-old, owned by Mr. and Mrs. James R. Hill, Emmitsburg, produced 14,852 lbs. milk and 511 lbs. butterfat in 292 days.

Posch Oak Fobes 4010099, a seven-year-old, owned by Janice Palmer Nicholson, Taneytown, produced 18,370 lbs. milk and 602 lbs. butterfat in 305 days.

According to the national Holstein organization, the new production figures compare to an annual output of 7,211 lbs. of milk and 270 lbs. of butterfat by the average U. S. dairy cow.

The University of Maryland supervised the weighing and testing of the Holstein records as part of the breed's nation-wide herd testing programs.

received over $48 millions in refunds on their Federal income tax returns, Irving Machiz, District Director of Internal Revenue said this week. He urged those still to file to do it now, and avoid the last minute rush, reduce costly errors and hasten refunds, if due.

Of the 1,650,000 returns expected to be filed by April 15, over 900,000 will be entitled to refunds amounting to over $120 million.

To avoid costly errors, Mr. Machiz urged taxpayers to check the following list before mailing tax returns:
Print name, address, city and state on the form. List Social Security number and occupation. Give proper dependents. List all places of employment and attach all W-2 withholding statements. Study instructions on dependents and deductions, then check all arithmetic. Sign the return. If a joint return, have wife sign it also. Make check payable to Internal Revenue Service.
