The setback on the school issue given Emmitsburg several weeks ago was just a respite to give us a chance to catch our breath. This week it was learned that the Town and Jaycees plan to take an additional step to the solution of the problem and these plans call for a hearing before the State Board of Education, now headed by Dr. Sensenbaugh, the gentleman who started the ball rolling in the first place. It is generally felt that the battle is by no means over as yet and there are several other avenues to be explored before all hope is exhausted. It'll be a drawn out piece of business but then we understand it'll be close to three years before the new school can be built anyway. So don't give up folks, the fight isn't over yet.

The announcement that the National Shrine Grotto is planning to erect a 100-foot bell-tower on the site is indeed good news to the citizens of this district. It is another indication that people here have confidence that Emmitsburg isn't a dead town and that it has a great potential. The tower will be a mighty impressive one and will prove to be one of the landmarks of this area. Lighted at night it will be visible on the mountainside from almost anywhere in the county and will beam a friendly invitation to citizens of all faiths to stop in Emmitsburg and see the oldest Grotto, an exact replica of that of Lourdes, France, in this Nation. At the same time visitors and pilgrims here will have the opportunity to see the final resting place of Blessed Elizabeth Ann Seton, the foundress of the American parochial school system, and perhaps the first American-born Saint.

With our two local colleges on the expansion move and fast gaining national prestige which is beneficial to our little valley village, we can't help wondering why the Town hasn't erected some sort of marker or sign indicating their location. Almost daily motorists stop on the streets, on the Square or near town, asking directions to the colleges. When they reach here there is no indication the colleges even exist. There are no signs, markers or information booth. They must obtain their directions and information by word of mouth. It has been suggested to me, and to this paper on many occasions, that the Town should do something about this condition. We should be mighty proud of our local institutions of education and there should be directional signs placed near the Square indicating their whereabouts. The project wouldn't be an expensive one, as a matter of fact a few signs would cost only a couple of dollars. We think it would be money prudently spent.

Another short communication from Jack Reifsnider, an old friend and contributor to this column for many years. Jack says things are fine down there and the fishing is just out of this world. Says several Emmitsburg people live there and several have visited recently. He extends a cordial invitation to anyone from Emmitsburg visiting the Jacksonville area to stop in and see him. In his exact words: If anyone from up there comes to or through Jacksonville, stop over with us. Whoever it may be shall receive the best.

PROCLAMATION

I, Ralph F. Irelan, Burgess of Emmitsburg, Md., herewith proclaim the days of May 23 to 30th, inclusive, as Poppy Days.

These Poppies will be sold by the Auxiliary of the Francis X. Elder Post 121 of the American Legion, who will present the Poppies to the people of the community.

I sincerely hope that each and every one will contribute liberally to this worthy cause.

The making of the Poppies will give the disabled soldiers at Perry Point Hospital beneficial employment, and the funds realized will be used to help wounded soldiers of the Nation.

Please give all you can spare!

Primary Tuesday; Expect Light Vote

Maryland's Primary Election will get under way Tuesday morning early and it is expected to be a relatively light one due to lack of interest.

Only five offices are to be filled and in the race for these some are unopposed. Governor Wallace has injected some interest with his fanfare and belligerent talks but is expected to fall by the wayside when the smoke of the battle has cleared. He is being opposed by incumbent Senator Daniel Brewster for the Presidency.

Other offices at stake are that of U. S. Senator. In this race four candidates are on the Democratic ballot and three on the Republican. Striving for the office are Democrats Louis L. Goldstein, Morgan L. Amamo, John J. Harbaugh and Joseph D. Tydings; Republicans, J. Glenn Beall, the incumbent; James P. Gleason, and Harry J. Laque, Jr.

Candidates for Representative in Congress from Maryland at large, Democrats, Carlton R. Sickles and Wilsie H. Adams; Republicans, Louise Gore, Roland I. Perusse and David Scull.

Intense interest is being shown in the race for Representative in Congress from the Sixth Congressional District. Charles Mc. Mathias, a native Frederick Countian and incumbent Congressman is being challenged by three Democrats and two Republicans. On the ballot for this office are Democrats Samuel Dillon, Jr., John Vincent Gaughan, Royce Hanson and John P. Moore; Republicans, Charles McC. Mathias, Brent Bozell and Harry Sims.

In the Democratic race for Delegates to the State Convention there is no contest. There are seven to be elected and there are just seven running. They are Samuel W. Barrick, Edward D. Storm, George F. Abrecht, James P. Mause, Austin C. Powell, Maurice J. Schroyer and M. Austin Young. In this race the Republicans show a field of 13 for the seven jobs available. Candidates are: Barbara B. Crum, Sally B. Hedstrom, Richard J. Hudson, Marianne G. Hughes, Miriam Y. Kelly, Barbara J. Kolb, Glenn A. Main, Jr., Lois Hill Remsburg, William A. Rollins, Jr., Harry F. Rhoderick, Harriett E. Schindel, Paul K. Shafer, Royd R. Smith, Grace R. Stickle and Ellen C. Winzer.

Polls will be open from seven o'clock in the morning Tuesday, May 19, until seven o'clock that night.

In Emmitsburg Precincts 1 and 2 will vote in the Fire Hall and Precinct 3 in St. Anthony's Parish Hall.

Our Library

Books you may have missed: "Gabriela, Clove and Cinnamon," by Jorge Amado. The enchanting heroine, Gabriela, moves serenely through the sly political machinations, that contest the life of the Brazilian town that she makes her own in this humorous novel that shows a genuine understanding of place, and time, and individual character.

"The Wind in the Willows," by Kenneth Grahame. No adult should miss the magic, beauty and friendly humor to be found in these unforgettable stories of Toad and his friends. First told by the author to his little son, this is a book of rare artistry perfect for reading aloud to all ages.

"Spinster," by Sylvia Ashton-Warner. Set in an outpost schoolhouse in New Zealand, this is the story of a brilliant, compassionate, impulsive woman who is a genius with her touching Maori pupils. No one will forget their struggling spirits of either teacher or pupils in their subtle and intricately linked lives.

"An American Tragedy," by Theodore Dreiser. The unconquerable La Farge has done for meant combine to destroy a young man just on the brink of wealth and social prestige.

"Laughing Boy," by Oliver LaFarge. "La Farge has done for the Indians in this book what 'Porgy' did for the Negro. His prose approaches the level of poetry. There is hardly a cliché in the entire volume. There isn't a trite situation in the plot."

"A Separate Peace," by John Knowles. "Mr. Knowles has something to say about youth and war that few contemporary novelists have attempted to say and none has said better. He deals with youth's special friendships with great delicacy and understanding; what is more, he writes with wit and style, those two qualities so rare these days we sometimes think they have been lost forever."

The Emmitsburg Library circulated 28 non-fiction and 82 fiction in the adult section, and 44 fiction in the young adult section. The juvenile section circulated 71 non-fiction and 281 fiction for a total circulation of 588 books for the month of April. Also 17 books were obtained through county services from C. Burr Artz or Enoch Pratt Libraries through April.

If you don't see it on the shelf, request it through County Services.

Fire Co. Fund Drive To Start

The Vigilant Hose Co. will kick off its annual financial drive with the mailing of form letters, financial statements and return envelopes sometime next week, Guy R. McGlaughlin, drive chairman, announced this week.

The firemen have set as their goal this year, $5,000, in the hope of increasing their building fund.

For some time now the fund has been in existence and it is hoped that the building program can get under way in the very near future. Two years ago the Fire Co. purchased the property adjacent the hall and since then the existing building that was on the lot has been razed. It is on this lot that the Company plans to erect a new and modern addition which will afford a permanent location for the VFW ambulance and other company equipment.

It was announced by President John S. Hollinger that the Emmitsburg VFW had pledged $2500 to the building fund in an effort to get the plan under way. It is estimated that the new edition will cost approximately $10,000. Following the mailing of form letters asking for donations, the Firemen plan to personally canvass the town on June 10 in an effort to contact those who haven't yet contributed by that date.

With new housing going up in the town every year, the two colleges undergoing expansion, the Fire Co. must keep abreast of the times and make every effort to modernize itself. It is public knowledge that the present hall is entirely too small thereby necessitating the erection of an additional building on the premises. It is hoped that every citizen will contribute generously to the drive and since the building fund has been inaugurated it is hoped that perhaps each contribution can be made a little larger this year.

Mount Gets Grant

Mount Saint Mary's College has been awarded a $15,000 matching grant by the National Science Foundation. The money is to be used for the support of an "Undergraduate Instructional Scientific Equipment Program." The grant was made in conjunction with the college's construction and equipping of its new million-dollar science hall facility.

More than 64,000 orphans of deceased U. S. servicemen and women have entered training in the War Orphans Educational Assistance program.

Mount Science Bldg. Named Coad Hall

The President and Council of Mount Saint Mary's College and Seminary have announced that the new million dollar Science Hall now under construction at the college will be named Coad Hall, honoring Rev. Peter A. Coad, M.A., dean of the faculties of the College and Seminary.

Father Coad, who celebrated his 94th birthday last December, will celebrate his 70th year of ordination to the holy priesthood on June 23. Still very active and alert, he celebrates daily Mass, takes his daily walks, reads the newspapers and the Congressional Record, and walks to the Seminary three days a week to teach a class of Patristic Latin.

Father Coad, son of John Coad and Mary Ryan, was born in Johnstown, Pa., December 23, 1869. He obtained his elementary schooling under the direction of the Sisters of Charity at Saint John Gualbert Parochial School there. He next entered Mount Saint Mary's Preparatory School in the fall of 1885 and continued on into the college where he received his bachelor of arts degree in 1890.

One month before his graduation, he lost his parents, a brother and sister and a grandmother in the Johnstown flood.

He continued his studies at the Mount receiving his Master's Degree in 1892 and his priestly studies in 1894. He was ordained for the Diocese of Pittsburgh in the college chapel by Bishop McGovern of Harrisburg in June of 1894.

He was assigned to the Church of Saint Mary, Sharpsburg, Pa., where he served until February 22, 1896, when he was recalled to the faculty of Mount Saint Mary's. He was elected to membership on the College Council in 1897.

With the exception of the years, 1898-1901, Father Coad has spent his adult life on the campus of the Mount. During this three year period, he studied in Athens, Greece. He is a scholar of varied interests. He has specialized in classical languages, ancient history, and church history. He also served for a time as professor of moral theology in the seminary.

Although recognized as a master of the teaching profession with a wealth of wisdom, illustration and anecdote, he has declined all honors. He is loved by his students and has become a legend on the campus of the college and seminary.

Two new members were added to the roster as follows: Clyde Eyer (active) and Thomas Shorb (active). It was announced that a fruit basket had been sent to sick member, Edgar Ashbaugh. Fire Destroys Over 50 Acres Strong winds hindered fire fighting efforts Sunday as two major fires occurred in the county, the worst of which bared up to 50 acres of timberland along the Mink Farm Road in the Catoclin Mountains west of Thurmont. In the other, the Frederick City watershed was endangered when picnickers started a blaze at Lone Pine Lookout near the Western Union tower.

The Thurmont, Emmitsburg and Graceham Volunteer firemen responded to the north county fire at 11:58 a.m. which Herman D. Toms, Frederick County Forestry Supervisor said was not unlike the fire which smoldered for three weeks in the same area last October. Between 40 and 50 acres of timberland, owned by Montgomery County realtor Charles H. Jamison, was destroyed and the blaze was brought under control about 4:30, he said.

BACK MAC MATHIAS For Congress

VOTE TUESDAY, MAY 19th

To Keep Frederick County's Voice In Washington

MAC MATHIAS SAYS:

When you elected me to Congress in 1960, a Native Son of Frederick County entered the House of Representatives for the first time in 80 years. It is not enough, however, that a Frederick Countian should sit in Congress, for it is necessary that he should serve there in such a manner as to reflect honor upon his friends and neighbors who supported him.

On the basis of my record, I am asking for your support, your help, and your vote on May 19th. In this year, as in the past, the encouragement of my own neighbors and friends is particularly appreciated.

100 YEARS AGO

GRANT, LEE CONTINUE FIGHT IN SPOTTSYLVANIA

By Lon K. Savage

"We have now ended the sixth day of very heavy fighting . . . We have lost to this time eleven general officers killed, wounded or missing, and probably twenty thousand men . . . I am now sending back . . . all my wagons for a fresh supply of provisions and ammunition and propose to fight it out on this line if it takes all summer."

So wrote Gen. Ulysses S. Grant 100 years ago this week in a report that carried the horror and the spirit of the war that he was fighting. He wrote it on the morning of May 11 near Spottsylvania Courthouse in east-central Virginia, and within hours after writing it, Grant could add still more thousands to his casualty list of 20,000.

Grant had moved his army to Spottsylvania on the 8th and 9th of May, immediately after fighting the bloody Battle of the Wilderness against Robert E. Lee. He had moved to Lee's left, hoping to interpose his army between Lee and Richmond. But Lee had moved too, and the two armies had raced for Spottsylvania, 15 miles away. Lee arrived first, and again the two armies faced each other, ready to fight.

Grant Attacks

Lee took a V-shaped position with Spottsylvania Courthouse in the apex, and Grant's army circled around the point of the V. May 9, Grant sent W. S. Hancock's II Corps crashing into the west leg of the V, but that attack failed. "Good Uncle John" Sedgewick then started to attack the point of the V but was shot dead by a Confederate sharpshooter. Next day, another Grant attack broke the line but then was smothered, and nothing was gained.

It was then that Grant filed his famous dispatch promising to "fight it out . . . if it takes all summer." The very next morning he resumed the job of attacking Lee.

Bloody Angle

Hancock again was picked to lead the charge, and his corps was up and moving early on the rainy morning of May 12. As the day dawned, they moved, strangely silent, through the misty woods toward the point of Lee's "V" formation. Suddenly, they were on top of Lee's line, and they charged as the day exploded in violence. Quickly, they broke Lee's line, and a full division of Lee's army was captured, with two Confederate generals.

Lee, himself, wanted to lead the counter-charge, but his men would not let him. Instead, Jubal Early sent a division of men into the "bloody angle," other Confederates rallied, and the two armies suddenly were on top of each other, shooting, screaming, stabbing, hitting with fists and rocks. Men shot men at point blank range; bayonets were used extensively. At times, the fighting had to stop so the men could push away the dead. Lee, it is estimated, lost a fifth of his army that day, and Grant lost one-tenth of his.

Meantime, Grant had sent his cavalry, 10,000 horsemen under Phil Sheridan, in a bold raid toward Richmond. As the fighting at Spottsylvania progressed, Sheridan's 13-mile-long column moved behind Lee's lines, tore up railroad tracks and telegraph wires. Lee responded by sending his cavalry under "Jeb" Stuart after Sheridan. The two cavalries met at Yellow Tavern, just north of Richmond, and Stuart was shot in the lung. Dashing "Jeb" Stuart, the "eyes of Lee's army," was dead.

New Program For Peace Corps

The Peace Corps is launching a major international self-help program, School-to-School, in cooperation with local school and civic organizations, Director Sargent Shriver has announced.

"We hope to build 3,000 schools around the world within the next three years," Shriver said. "School-to-School is a program that is uniquely suited to the Peace Corps idea of self-help."

School-to-School is a program in which a U. S. school sponsors the building of a school overseas. The school in this country raises $1,000. This is used to buy the construction materials. Villagers in the host country, working with Peace Corps Volunteers, build the schools.

"From the beginning to end, there will be no paid labor," Shriver emphasized. "This program could be a major breakthrough in solving the lack of classrooms in developing countries."

A pilot project is already in the final stages in Casa Blanca, Colombia; the supporting group is the Rosendale Elementary School PTA in Schenectady, New York. The three-room schoolhouse is scheduled to be completed on June 1.

In Colombia alone, there is a shortage of 40,000 classrooms. The new Casa Blanca School will be the first school in the area that is able to accommodate students through the fourth grade. It will also be co-educational rather than the male only classes common in many developing nations.

"School-to-School will have a dual effect," Shriver explained. "It will, of course, give the host country needed classrooms. But it will also give the children of this country a chance to become better acquainted with the people of the world in which they will live as adults."

President Johnson, on hearing about School-to-School, expressed his interest in the program's founders.

"Through the efforts of the Rosendale School, the people of Colombia will soon see the power of American ideals at work," the President said. "I am confident that the project will stimulate similar programs by hundreds of school groups throughout our country."

Miss Laura Enders, principal of the Rosendale School, said her students are already showing a greatly increased awareness of international news.

"We are finding the project filled with possibilities for arousing interest in letter writing, penmanship and geography," Miss Enders said. "This is one of the few projects undertaken by a PTA which directly involves the children. They are truly proud of it."

Rosendale has already gotten letters of appreciation from students whom they are assisting in Colombia. An active pen-pal club has also started.

When the school opens in Casa Blanca, Rosendale will also hold a corresponding ceremony. Each school will exhibit articles made by the other.

The School-to-School program was suggested to the Peace Corps by Gene Bradley, the Rosendale PTA president and editor of the General Electric Forum, during a business meeting with government officials overseas.

"Our PTA raised $750 last year. What could you have done with that money?"

"Build a school," replied the officials.

When Bradley expressed his surprise that a school could be built with so little money, the official explained that he didn't mean sending in construction crews.

"I mean buying the cement and the block-making machines and letting the people do the work—self help," said the official.

On the basis of this, the Rosendale School started the pilot project in Casa Blanca. The Colombian townspeople agreed to furnish the additional money required to complete the school. Through the pilot project, officials found a small school could be built for as little as $1,000, depending on local conditions and materials available.

School-to-School will only operate in sites where the Volunteer shows a need for the class rooms. The choice will be approved by the Ambassador and the Peace Corps Representative in that country.

"The beauty of School-to-School is in its simplicity," Shriver said. "As we have a volunteer on the spot in each location, we can be assured that the money will not be wasted."

"The benefits of this program will not only accrue to the host country."

Groups interested in the program should write School-to-School Peace Corps, Washington, D.C. 20525.

BABSON

Writes . . .

BY ROGER W. BABSON
 Babson Discusses The World's Greatest Miracle

BABSON PARK, Mass., May 14—The greatest miracle, of course, is the conception and birth of a helpless baby with its unparalleled opportunities. It is said that one reason the Chinese nation has had such a long & matchless history is because the Chinese figure their children's age from 9 months earlier than we do. Hence the mothers also give much more attention to what they do and think during those nine months.

Importance Of Seeds

The next-wondrous miracle to the birth of babies is the 'birth' of seeds. This will be the real subject of this week's column. I have just returned from the Evers Flower Farm at Lakeland, Florida—run and operated by Orris R. Evers who raises over 275,000 plants every spring and 100,000 more every fall. He is a graduate of the University of Florida and has a Master's Degree from Ohio State University. I mention this to show the importance of an education to a 'farmer'. This should be an inspiration to those college graduates who think that they must be doctors, lawyers, or insurance agents in order to build a large business and make a better, happier, more beautiful world. This my friend Evers is now doing. God bless him. He knows that every seed contains a miracle.

Each Seed A Little Computer

Two facts about seeds interest me intensely; the first is the billions of seeds—both vegetable and flower—going to waste every year. The head of one company which raises and sells only vegetable seeds sells over 1 hundred billion (100,000,000,000) live and active seeds each year. The second fact is that each seed is a complete factory. Had I the space I would prove this to every reader. Moreover, each 'factory' knows exactly when to commence operating without the need for any labor union or any legislation. Each seed is a most marvelous automated device—far more extraordinary than any computer.

What Computers Are Now Seeking

FOR COOL CLIMATES ONLY

Calendulas of Pacific Beauty strain are heat-resistant, but even so they grow better where weather is cool during summer.

There are two times during the growing season when calendulas may be planted—early in spring and in mid-summer for fall bloom. For these flowers prefer cool weather and bloom best when the sun is not too hot.

The finest type of calendula today is that called Pacific Beauty. This calendula group stands heat better, has larger, longer stemmed flowers for cutting, richer colors in the blossoms, and a longer season of bloom than the calendulas of yesterday.

It is possible to buy Pacific Beauty seed in a mixture or in separate colors. The varieties are called for their colors: Apricot Beauty, Cream Beauty, Lemon Beauty, Flame Beauty and Perimmon Beauty. The mixture, of course, includes all of these shades.

In addition to these calendulas with their big 5 inch blooms, there is also a unique development—crested calendulas. These were originally bred by a German breeder, but perfected by one in California.

Each flower has a crested center, composed of little quills. Some of these are tipped with brown, others are self-colored. This center crest is framed by a single row, but more often two rows of guard petals which overlap one another.

Available only in mixed colors, these crested calendulas are as easy to grow as Pacific Beauty and add a conversation piece to your garden.

Computers are a very wonderful invention; but they give out only what has been fed into them. This is probably true also of seeds; but nature 'programs' the seed. As yet, computers do not think; but seeds apparently 'think'—at least they know when to sprout or burst their shell and grow into a vegetable or into a flower or into a magnificent oak tree. You say this is merely done by the seed 'listening' to the sun. Or to put it another way, the sun 'programs' the seed to send a sprout upward to form leaves, and a fiber downward to form roots. Truly it all is very wonderful.

Possibilities Of Computers

Computers also are wonderful; but none of the five leading computer manufacturing companies (a list will be sent gratis on request) will claim that their computers will work by doing their own thinking. They need to be 'programmed', which means that the information must be fed into them by some human brain. Psychologists tell me that the time is coming when brain waves—in leaving our heads—will operate computers. I feel sure, too, that the day is coming when the computer will secure its knowledge from the rays of the sun, from the direction of the wind, or from other invisible data fed to it by nature.

Every Seed Is A Thinker

Now let me get back to my favorite subject of 'seeds'. Each seed is a miniature computer already being 'programmed' by nature. It, however, depends greatly upon environment and almost wholly upon what has happened before. Let me again refer to the writings of Dr. Rufus Cole of Mt. Kisco, N. Y. Every seed proves his basic claim: That there is nothing new under the sun, and that what happens today is dependent upon all that has happened for generations before. Furthermore, seeds will someday become real economic forces, though this possibility is now almost entirely ignored. I wish I were a young man and could enjoy the great changes ahead of us; we have only tapped the great computer era! Even Edison once said to me: "Give me a few more years, and I would have seeds perform wonders such as the incandescent light and the electric motor have done for the industrial era."

Would you say a half hour is a reasonable average of the time it takes a woman to get out after she has announced to her hostess that she must leave?

Wheat Allotment Program Explained

Winter wheat producers who kept their 1964-crop wheat acreage within the farm's allotment have already qualified for a price support loan or purchase for this year's crop, George B. Reeves, Chairman, Maryland Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation State Committee, said this week.

Eligibility for price support loans and purchases on the 1964 wheat crop will be determined only on the basis of the wheat acreage on each individual farm, the Chairman explained, and not—as previously announced—on the basis of wheat acreage on other farms in which the producer has an interest.

The adjustment of program provisions in connection with administration or price supports for 1964-crop wheat followed discussions at mid-April meetings which were held throughout production areas to get the new wheat program under way. (The new 1964 voluntary wheat program, under which diversion payments and marketing certificates may be made available to participating growers, was authorized by legislation enacted April 11.)

As now provided, wheat produced on any farm on which the 1964 wheat acreage is within the farm allotment will be eligible for a price support loan or purchase, based on a national average of $1.30 a bushel.

Thus, a wheat producer who was eligible for a price support loan (or purchase) for his 1964 crop before enactment of the new legislation is still eligible for the new higher support.

Chairman Reeves pointed out that the deadline date for adjusting wheat acreage in order to meet allotment provisions remains as previously announced in each county. The deadline date in the Eastern Shore and Southern Maryland counties is May 31; the Western Maryland counties is June 9, except Allegany and Garrett which have a date of June 20.

Read Luke 24:45-53.
He led them out as far as Bethany, and lifting up his hands he blessed them. (Luke 24:50. RSV.)
The good Shepherd led the disciples out to Bethany, and His final visible act of love before His ascension was to lift His hands to bless them.

It was expedient that Jesus go away. As He said to His disciples.
"If I do not go, your Advocate will not come, whereas if I go, I will send him to you." Christ fulfilled His promise ten days after His ascension.

The Holy Spirit is our companion along life's way. When members of a family are committed to Christ, He draws them closer together in divine love, regardless of the miles that may separate them from one another. To those of the household of faith, He extends their outlook beyond provincialism, instills love divine that conquers prejudices, and challenges to purposeful living.

Jesus Christ is ever leading us out to new experiences in the faith, ever lifting His hands to bless us when we live in obedience to God.
Prayer

O God, we thank Thee for knowledge of Thee which we have through Christ, Thy Son. Forgive us our sins, shortcomings, and neglect. Through the Holy Spirit, strengthen us for discipleship that counts. In Christ's name. Amen.

SPORTS AFIELD

By Ted Kesting

The most spectacular and sensational species of fish to catch are undoubtedly the ones that do the majority of their fighting on the surface. To see a giant marlin, tarpon or mako shark clear the water, throwing spray high into the air, is an exciting experience. However, there are numerous smaller species that, when taken on light tackle, give just as much fun as the giant fish that roam the open seas or play in the passes of southern waters. The catching of a ladyfish on freshwater tackle or a medium-size tarpon on spinning gear offers many exciting moments.

With the approach of the late spring months, a certain group of light-tackle anglers hit the trail to the southwestern shores of Florida in search of redfish, sea trout, snook and tarpon in the Everglades. The main attractions are the concentration of snook that feed along the edge and in between the roots of the mangrove trees, and the schools of tarpon that move in from the Gulf to play and search for food in the open waters. The general method of fishing for snook in this particular area is to cast a semisurface plug back into the densely rooted section of the mangroves.

When the tide starts to drop off, the snook will move out into deeper water.

Casting for snook can be difficult when they are in the mangrove roots according to Robert D.
Hall, Salt-Water Fishing Editor of Sports Afield Magazine. It is often necessary to place your plug on that small target and at the same time dodge the aerial roots of the trees that hang down in places like a picket fence. When we consider the conditions that anglers must face while fishing the mangrove area of Florida we can readily understand their preference for a plug that floats when it is not in action. There are times when it is necessary to fish fairly deep, and then a weighted buck-tail lure is often successful. This is especially true in trolling the very deep holes where most of the large snook are found. A four-or five-pound snook will strike a lure with savage determination, churning the water white in an attempt to free itself. When such fish are taken on lightweight fresh-water spinning gear, you will have many desperate moments.

ALL ABOUT BABIES

A Public Service of the National Baby Care Council

Toilet Training

By Aline B. Auerbach
Director, Parent Group Education
Child Study Assn. of America Doctors advise against starting bowel training before the baby's muscular and nervous system is able to meet this demand from adults.

If you begin training too early, your child is more likely to go back to soiling later on. Also, if you start too early, you are likely to become tense and angry with your child. He may become confused and resist you. You may find out also, that you waste more time putting him on the pot than it takes to wash the extra diapers.
Wait until he can show you that he is ready to have a movement and can get himself there under his own steam. Probably this will be somewhat between a year and a year and a half.

If you are patient, you will probably find that he has his own regular time and rhythm. Put him on the pot or toilet at his time and not when you think he ought to go. Don't make it all too important, but be pleased when he performs. Then he will be pleased

Fun In Salt Water

ANY FRESH WATER FISHER-MAN who visits the ocean should take his tackle along. Salt water scrappers such as stripers, bluefish, bonito, mackerel and a host of others can be taken on ordinary fly fishing, spinning or bait casting tackle, and they'll all hand you a terrific battle when hung on any of these rigs.

Fortunately, it's not always necessary to go offshore to tangle with these game fish. Schools of bait fish follow the shorelines and move into bays and inlets. Predatory game fish move right in with them and you can reach them with only a small boat, or even by wading.

Locate the bait, and the rest should be easy. Game fish are usually present and feeding and when they're slashing away like crazy, they tend to nail anything you toss at them.

Probably the surest and easiest way to locate a school of bait is to watch for terns. When you see these small, graceful birds hovering over an area, and repeatedly diving into the water, you can be sure they're working a school of bait. If swirls and splashes indicate feeding fish, you're in for some new thrills.

These surface feeders can be taken on plugs, spoons and big streamers. Cast to the action, then retrieve faster than in fresh water.
Salt water species are lightning fast and a lure which zips through the water, or skitters along the surface, will come in for the most attention.

While fresh water tackle will do the job, reels should be filled to maximum capacity—with at least 200 yards of running line if possible. Although this is more than needed in most cases, you never can tell. You may hang a striper or bluefish that will clean your reel if it's less than full.

It should be remembered that salt water is highly corrosive and will quickly ruin tackle that is neglected. Rods, reels, lines and the contents of tackle boxes should be thoroughly washed in fresh water as soon after use as possible. Wipe all items dry and give reels a good oiling.

This may seem a bit of a bother —but not after you've taken your first strip-er on light tackle. It's a small price to pay for one of the top thrills in light tackle fishing.

too, and more ready to do what you want.

Don't be surprised, though, if he lapses occasionally. Take it casually, change his pants without any scolding, and remind him to tell you the next time.

The time to begin to train a baby to be dry is difficult to set at a fixed age that would apply to all children. They vary considerably in the point at which they seem to be ready to take this step.
When your baby begins to understand what you want him to do, it's time enough to start. Then, take him to the toilet when he seems to need it. Soon he will begin to tell you when he wants to go.

Slowly he will learn that it is more comfortable to be dry, and more satisfying too, since he knows you want him that way.
Scolding or punishment won't teach him to stay dry. It will only make him less anxious to please you. At the same time, he can't be expected to learn by himself. He needs you to show him the way.

He may still be wet at night and perhaps during his nap for some time to come. He may be between three and four before he really stays dry all night. Only if your child wets his bed well past this age should you be concerned.
If he does, talk it over with your doctor.

(For a fuller discussion of this subject and of other problems that face mothers of young children, to Give Your Child a Good Start,' sociation of America, 9 East 89th

EARLY IN-HOME TRAINING FOR HUNTING DOGS

By Bob Bartos, Manager
Friskies Pet Food Research Center

Hunters take note. Two old beliefs long associated with hunting dogs have just bitten the dust. It's not true that you run a dog for hunting by either making a pet of him or by training him when he's too young.

Studies conducted at the Animal Behavior Laboratory at the Hamilton Station of the Roscoe Memorial Laboratory, Mount Desert Island, Maine, have proved that you should take your puppy home and start training him when he's 49 days old. From that exact date until he's four months old is the period during which he's most responsive to training and forms the man-dog relationship.

Winning your puppy's love, trust and confidence and teaching him the basic do's and don'ts of dogdom during this very formative time in his life are all important forerunners of field training. They're more easily instilled in the pup if he lives under the same roof as you, and you're on hand to give out with affection and correction. By the time he's ready for elementary field training, which can start as soon as he's mastered the basic commands, you'll find that his understanding of the commands, together with his well developed will to please, makes training progress at a surprisingly fast pace.

Your control of the mature dog that has been raised and trained along these lines will be far greater than the dog

So Great A Cause

Edwin P. Neilan, president of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, that plain talking, hard hitting, straight shooting former Texas banker who went East and made good, brought to Freedom Forum XXV his own version of the battle against poverty. It can be won all over the world, Mr. Neilan said, if our free system is allowed to get on with the job it is already so well prepared to undertake: "The free enterprise system has always been engaged in that historic war in a manner becoming to a great cause."

In addressing himself to the task of defining the public's role in expanding markets, Mr.

Neilan recognized public opinion and free market selection as the most powerful tools wielded by any people. But knowledge and brainpower are of importance first. Our nation, he said, has areas pocked by economic distress which no amount of pump priming or stimulation will relieve. These are the under-educated, and there is no appeal from the doom of decay upon those who do not value the trained intellect.

Markets Fight Poverty

Mr. Neilan noted the similar objectives of a "war against poverty" and the "expansion of markets." He then undertook to examine some steps in such programs that would require public understanding. As to tax problems, he said, the public is capable of more than the two-dimensional thinking being fed to it. But misinformation and demagoguery are being used to give false impressions about the tax picture, so that, for example, people conclude that the top of the tax bracket produces most of the revenue. Yet that 1 billion from brackets above 50 per cent would, if released for investment, produce jobs and more federal revenue.

Ignorance about profits, he said, is both frightening and widespread. People apparently have not been told that the wages of invested capital, profits, are a major public benefit. "The saver, the investor, the risk-taker, seems to be the forgotten man in our system," he said. "Labor union leaders tell their members that when a firm increases its productivity, the benefits should go mostly, if not entirely, into wage hikes and fringe benefits, and that this will boost the economy by increasing the union members' purchasing power."

All Should Share

But if the investor doesn't get his share there's no incentive to invest and no expansion. The consumer also needs to have his share of the increased productivity in the form of lower prices. Only better education and understanding will permit our citizenry to realize, Mr. Neilan said, that "Just as we can lower taxes and get more revenue, so we can hold the line against excessive wage increases and still gain more benefits, to more people, by a more fair division of profits."

Better understanding of tariffs and other restrictions can also become a factor in market expansion, he said. "The short-sighted view is that protection for our domestic markets and local jobs will automatically serve our self-interest. But this is to ignore the benefits of world trade. Given these things—education and training, tax reform, reduced federal spending, the incentive to invest, the good sense to achieve lower unit costs—we can continue to expand our world market. We can only do this, of course, if we become buyers in the same market."

Winning The Battle

Mr. Neilan concluded: "The organizing genius of the free enterprise system has combined the talents of free-thinking scientists and engineers with the risk-taking boldness of capitalists and managers who freely compete in the market to provide the goods and services for individuals free to spend their incomes as they choose. This tripartite freedom of thought, of enterprise, and of consumer choice has been the greatest force in the modern world leading on to net increases in the world's wealth. And it is increasing wealth faster than the increase in populations, so our free system can win the battle against poverty all over the world.

"Business, government and labor can unite in this war while preserving our cherished freedoms. For this is a war in which everybody can be the victor and nobody need be the loser. It is a competition in which we use the arts and science, the enlightenment of education, the skills of technology, and the energies of individual workers, to make things better for us all. If each member of the public understands and does his or her share in improving the operation of our enterprise economy, there is no limit to the expansion of the American market."

Mason-Dixon Line

'Moved Northward'

The famous Mason-Dixon Line, for 200 years the dividing line between North and South, has been moved northward.

The shift, however, is only temporary. It involved just a single marker stone of the historic boundary between Maryland and Pennsylvania. One of the original hand carved limestone markers has gone to the Maryland Pavilion, New York World's Fair. It was moved from its original site, in Caroline County, Maryland, but will be returned to that spot when the Fair closes in 1965.

The Line was established by a survey made by Charles Mason and Jeremiah Dixon, between 1763-1767, to settle a dispute between the proprietors of the then colonies of Maryland and Pennsylvania. The Mason-Dixon Line has since become one of the world's most famous geographic dividing lines.

The world's largest permanent magnet, in a research laboratory at Oxford, England, is made of a nickel, cobalt, aluminum and titanium alloy. Weighing almost four tons, this magnet is capable of picking up 1,000 tons of steel.

Taking a trip by auto, train, bus, plane or boat? Don't leave without protecting your family and yourself against the financial shock of possible accidental injuries during your trip.

Hartford's Tripguard Accident Policy will give you 24-hour-a-day protection against accidental injury expense during your entire trip . . . while you're going, while you're there, on your way back. You can buy this low-cost insurance to cover you and your family for as little as three days or as long as six months, depending upon how long you'll be traveling. It's wonderful protection for hunting, fishing or other sports trips, too.

Either call us or come in and we will explain this necessary and inexpensive protection to you.
