Persistent rumors are prevalent that a local citizen is seriously considering announcing his candidacy for County Commissioner. These rumors single out J. Norman Flax. Mr. Flax does not state that he will run but answers with a tongue-incheek attitude. It has been over half a century since Emmitsburg was represented on the County Commissioners Board in Frederick and little or no beneficial representation for the northern section of the county has been evident. When asked leading questions directly, Mr. Flax will tell you emphatically that "I have no axe to grind with anybody." If elected, should I run, he goes on, I will represent all of the citizens of the County, not just a chosen few, and see that the taxpayers' money is wisely spent. He abhors financial waste and extravagance and says that his paramount interest in the office is to see that the tax dollar is wisely spent. This sort of talk would lead one to believe that perhaps, Mr. Flax is after all, interested in the coming election. While he is playing cat and mouse, I am sure friends will rally around him with support long before the deadline for filing for the office which is

Mr. Groundhog's prediction that we would have six more weeks of winter weather appear to be bearing out his well-know legend. Since he saw his shadow on Feb. 2 we certainly have had our share of that type of weather and now that the six weeks have about expired we should start looking forward to some of that delightful weather we have been yearning for these past six months.

The State Roads Commission is wasting no time in carrying out Governor Tawes' order to "safetyize" the by - pass. All week long work crews have been busy digging holes for light poles, painting white and yellow lines, erecting signs, etc. wasn't forthcoming sooner and perhaps some of those 20 lives lost there might have been spared, but then that's the way things go with so much bureaucy in operation. It takes a real loud scream these days to accomplish these things . But, I do hope we are on the

Million Mothers in 'Protest March' To Support March of Dimes Drive

EMMITSBURG, MARYLAND

A million American mothers will stage a "protest march" during January. They are protesting that birth defects have been too long neglected. Even more, they are demonstrating their hope of assuring a Happy Birth Day for 11,000 American babies born each day, 700 of whom come into this world with birth defects that disfigure, disable or kill.

During the traditional Mothers' March for the March of Dimes, the women will enlist their neighbors' support and contributions for the 1966 March of Dimes fight against birth defects which strike 250, 000 American babies each year.

On their house calls, the Mothers' Marchers will distribute a new leaflet, entitled "Happy Birth Day," telling members of their communities what they can do in this important battle. The leaflet explains what to do "If you are about to be married, if you are expecting a baby, if a birth defect occurs in your family, if you have friends with a defec-have spoken frequently of our need there for creating a "will to win" on the part of the South Vietnamese. A recent study made there by the U.S. Army has showed that the most essential ingredient in bringing the war to an end is confidence on the part of the Vietnamese peasant that freedom's way, rather than the way of the Communists, is the way for him. Not every peasant has chosen, although our increasing military and civilian aid is providing encouragement. An Old Problem

But is this not the same problem, in fuller scale, that the world faces? Not all have chos-Some in Europe, some in South America, and even some in the U.S., have failed to place sufficient confidence in the escendent desire of men everywhere to confront tyranny and win their struggles for freedom. We were confused and intimidated at a time when we could have helped the Cuban people remain free.

It was perhaps the success of Red propaganda in America that required President Johnson to meet Premier Ky in Hawaii for reassurance. And the mileage that the Reds get out of their gimmick of sending a Yale professor to see Ho Chi Minh! One can expect some sentiment from poorly informed persons who call for an end to the war by negotiation when there is nothing to negotiate. Among the draft-card burners and street demonstrators one discerns the Soviet and Peking influence. But the fuzzy focus of 15 senators who asked President Johnson not to resume military pressure on North Vietnam is most amaz-

BABSON

Writes . . .

BY ROGER W. BABSON Babson's Point Of View On:

The Need For Safer Cars BABSON PARK, Mass., Mar. 3-Traffic deaths and injuries are climbing steadily. This, despite the fact that auto makers are installing new and more effective safety equipment on their cars and despite the more rigid and frequent state car inspections. The death toll on our highways - which President Johnson has termed our gravest national problem next to Vietnam-poses economic as well as moral and legal questions . . for which we must find answers.

The Problem Is Acute

We are concentrating, in this column, on the topic of safety equipment for cars, because rising public concern about highway deaths and injuries has centered on the question of just how safe the cars themselves

The problem is acute, and in the absence of swift, decisive action by agencies of the federal government, state governments are beginning to take more of a hand in probing this field. Only a few weeks ago the Attorney General of Iowa conducted hearings to determine "whether or not traffic fatalities and serious injuries can be sharply reduced" even it the number of accidents is not lowered. The Iowa hearings, held at the State Capitol in Des Moines, centered on car safety equipment or the lack of it. What The Car Makers Say

Except for an appearance by a spokesman for their Automobile Manufacturers Association, the leading car makers boycotted the Iowa hearings. Their position is that hearings at the state level place too great a burden on the industry. Also, that "there is not and never will be a completely safe auto.' They point, further, to an impressive list of safety devices which have become standard equipment on U.S. cars in recent years. For example: The wrap-around windshield, designed to increase visibility; the use of safety glass in windshields, to resist shattering; lowering the center of gravity for car frames; safetly locks; self-adjusting brakes; and seat

In addition, car makers contend that in general the public has been slow to purchase "optional" safety devices available for additional fees - devices which often cost manufacturers large sums to develop and per-

An Economic Drag

Probably no one would seriously argue that the car makers have not tried to make cars safer. The record amply supports their efforts. But today's slaughter on the highways has become truly massive; and it has become also a definite drag on the economy; hence, it is certainly in order to ask whether the car makers are trying hard enough to make their cars

Over the past few years, deaths on U.S. highways have risen to a scandalously large total, greater than all our casualties in Vietnam. The rapidly climbing claims against auto casualty insurance companies and the mounting costs of such insurance settlements are appalling. And no computer could accurately assess just how much brainpower and manpower the nation has lost through these traffic deaths and accidents.

Right now, a congressional investigating subcommittee is studying the relationship between safety equipment on cars and the accident toll. Crash-injury research projects at Cornell and Harvard suggest that safer cars could be made. The industry must, then, take its rethe manufacturers are already doing their best, perhaps they should seek the help of outside engineers and researchers.

This is a grave national problem . . . not merely an industry problem. If the auto makers do not solve it, they will be inviting federal and state controls. And such controls-both troublesome and costly - would be bound to eat deep into industry

High Meat Prices To Continue

You'll be paying high prices for beef, pork, and lamb in the months ahead, so poultry once again will be the best buy of the year, according to the February, 1966 issue of Changing Times, the Kiplinger Magazine.

Beef prices hit their highest point since 1962 last year. And even though future supplies will increase, they will not outstrip population growth. So prices are likely to go up-and the upward trend of beef prices may well continue through the rest of this

Premium prices for pork will prevail through the summer months. Why? Farmers slaughtered fewer hogs in 1965 because of low pork prices in 1963 and 1964. Low prices also caused a drop in hog breeding in 1964, with a small 1965 pig crop as a result. Sheep raisers are trying to build up their flocks restricting ship- will also help. They're just as nu- be equally appetizing with a litments to market. Thus, the odds tritious as the fancy cuts and can the culinary effort. are that prices will stay high.

Despite recent price rises, poultry costs about 28% less than it did 15 years ago. Both chicken and turkey production have been expanding and prices are likely to decline.

Changing Times points out that with smart shopping and wise menu planning, the budget hazards of high prices can be avoided. Using cheaper cuts of meat

Here are some guidelines that will enable you to do the best job in the joint.

First, selection of the glue. In assembly gluing—this includes everything but laminating—there are four types of glue normally used. These are resorcinol (also called water-proof) essein polyginyl and proof), casein, polyvinyl and plastic resin. Each of these ma-terials has specific properties that make it particularly suitable for certain types of gluing jobs. Choose the right one, and half your problem is solved.

Resorcinol Glues

Resorcinol or waterproof glues should be used when there is water contact. For example, lawn furniture.

If heat is a threat, a resor-in heat is a threat, a resor-cinol or a casein glue can be used. Radiator covers should be mended with either of these materials. If only high water resistance is required, either casein or plastic resin glue will do the If you especially need gapfilling or craze-resistance properties, select a resorcinol or casein glue.

If you are going to glue the object at low temperatures—say in a cold attic or cellar use Elmer's casein glue. The other glues require room temperature—at least 70 degrees Fr.—to set.

If speed of set is important, use a polyvinyl glue. Around the house, most assembly gluing jobs can be successfully done with this type glue. El-mer's Glue-All is an example.

Now that you've determined your needs and purchased the glue that matches them, you're ready to go to work. Let's say you're gluing rungs in a chair. Your first job, then, is to check all joints, so that no weak member is overlooked. ber is overlooked.

Second, remove the old glue. Hot water will do the trick if either animal or polyvinyl glue was used. You may use a knife to scrape out the glue, but take care that you remove no wood fiber with the glue. If you do, you will have a bigger hole and consequently a loose fit.
Third, following cleaning, let the wood dry. Generally, allow a week to elapse before resuming the operation. Four, apply glue to both surfaces to be joined. Make sure you apply enough to get Pressure Is Important Five, apply pressure for the period recommended on the glue container. This is extremely important, and if not done, will lead to more sticky problems.

Six, once pressure is applied, be sure to wipe off excess squeeze-out immediately with damp cloth.

Do not try to avoid squeeze-out by being stingy with your glue. Squeeze-out indicates intimate contact of the surfaces to be joined as well as sufficient pressure and sufficient glue.

Though the application of pressure is extremely important, what you use isn't. For example, in gluing chair rungs, pressure could be in the form of a door spring attached to a piece of cord and tied around the four legs. Or, you might use a piece of rubber from an old
