With the spring rains about over and the streams and reservoirs running full, now is the time to take safeguards against any repetition of the drastic water shortage that hit this community last summer and fall. The rainy season has climaxed and from now on through the summer months rainfall undoubtedly will diminish sharply. Preparations by the Town to tap Tom's Creek last fall are currently at a standstill. A temporary set-up was arranged during the emergency but some installation of a permanent nature should be made and made as rapidly as possible. An option has been obtained on an acre of ground for a permanent installation but the matter now rests there. We are interested in seeing action on this matter in the near future.

Comes a little note in the mailbag concerning out - of - town newspaper coverage of some of the activities of our Town Council.

Dear Abigail:

Could you explain to a relocated resident why the Frederick newspapers are in such a tizzy about the problems with certain phases of the town water supply system and the Emmitsburg Chronicle says noth ing?

I. M. Worried

Last year seemed to be the year of the big wind and popoffs emanated from some members of the Town Council had the general public confused. Certain individuals blasted off about the water situation to outside reporters and the confusion was general. We reported only the facts we learned by being on the local scene and all along we steadfastly stood by our Public Works Director when he announced an imminent water shortage. Other individuals avowed there was plenty of water when in reality a blind man could see the emergency in the offing. That is the reason this mn did not enter into the confusing stories. We had faith in our Water Commissioner and urged strict conserout-of-town newspapers. I feel our action was justified after seeing the final outcome. All this may be avoided in the future as the new Mayor and Council has passed a resolution ents. that no more such stories will emenate from the Town Office unless authorized by the proper authorities. This should avoid confusion that ran rampant last summer when the pop-offs were in business.

ers has recorded a single serious, out the streamlined type of modern family operation has been moving triumphantly ahead. Naturally, this kind of farming takes plenty of outlay for mechanization, and far greater technical skill. But, where the management is competent and well informed, the profits more than make up for the costs of machinery and the study required to develop more advanced technical know-how.

Over the past five years, net income per farm has pushed upward 40% to a new all-time height of $4,150. Perhaps even more significant is the fact that. in the same period, per capita income of farmers has advanced 35% while income for the remainder of the population has risen only 20%. Farm labor costs have, of course, been drifting downward for years because of agricultural mechanization, and acreage has been climbing steadily for the individual farms. These latter trends are bound to continue. Strong Supports

ed reasons for the healthier demand for agricultural products and for rising profits. The most elementary but important cause is the enormously broader spending for foods of all sorts, due to large increases in popula-tion, soaring spendable income, and richer eating habits. Exports of farm produce have been on the upward path for a long while. Markets have been particularly well sustained in the countries of Western Europe, in Japan, and in many other free nations. Higher living standards in such places favor continuing brisk demand for our agricultural exports for an indefinite period.

As long as our own people are adequately supplied with native foodstuffs, there will continue to be heavy shipments to needy nations that lack sufficient growing operations of their own. This entire export situation, along with the gov-ernment's cutting back of our planting acreage over the years and our own booming markets, has succeeded in bringing surpluses down to manageable levels. Since over-supplies always mean downward pressure on prices, present conditions are more conclusive to good returns for farmers. Income per farm will, of course, be steadily greater as the number of farms dwindles and the greater prosperity is divided among fewer establishments. Harvests Could Be great numbers of marginal farms, the strong nucleus of dramatically step up agricultural production. Total harvests during 1965 smashed all previous records. Experts feel that even these highs could be upped some 20% in a couple of years if federal acreage controls were done away with. Some interested parties are suggesting that 55 million idle crop acres be replanted, especially in view of the number of countries where starvation actually threatens. What would be the effect of sudden removal of acreage restrictions? Prices would tend to fall unless demand could be kept in line with outturn. Since world markets are a strong part of the success-key for American farmers, exports would have to be maintained — and even increased-if price softening were to be prevented. However, we feel that-under present conditions and with this dire world need-there may be dangers of shortages, at least in some grains and other basic farm products. Certainly, if underdeveloped customer-countries on a wide scale could be brought up to the economic level of Canada or Japan, our farmers could whistle a happy tune for a long time.

In this new year let's get out of the old grooves of useless and obsolete thoughts. Let new ideas and new viewpoints have full sway. The Christ Mind will inspire us with new, fresh, stimulating and powerful ideas. Let's rejoice that not only our minds, but our bodies and our work are renewed because of the vitality and power of new ideas.

All over the country inlets are the personal happy fishing grounds of salt-water pros.

Their boats are able and fast. The flatties are definitely favored. Their great beam sits in an inlet chop like a Texas tower. And they can handle huge horsepower. Not just to get where the skipper wants to be, but to beat it fast when necessary. Bu any stable, well-put-togeth er outboard or stern-drive will do for this work. The deep-V boats are nifty. Small, fast inboards are nifty. You don't need a cabin. A shelter canvas will do fine. Inlets are never far from harbors. (Or maybe it's that harbors are never far from inlets.)

Auto toppers in the 12- and 14foot lengths make excellent inlet boats despite their small size. For one thing, their lightness makes them easy to launch across the beach when that's required. Or to run up on to the beach and haul to safety when prudence dictates.

The trouble with inlets is that they can be lambs one minute and lions the next. "A turn of the tide, a shift of the wind, a building ground swell can turn a calm inlet into a mass of breaking

Today some influential voices in Washington are being raised to encourage a withdrawal of American troops from South Viet Nam, a "peace" conference and a "coalition" government in South Viet Nam, with the Communists in it.

As the New York Times records, General Marshall on January 7, 1947, told the American people that the "salvation of China" would be "the assumption of leadership by the liberals in the Government and in the minority parties." (A few days later, the Reds in Hungary took over the "Coalition" Government in which they had controlled the Interior Ministry—The Police. Hungary became another east European victim of "Coalition" Government.) Marshall's "Liberal"

Communists

Marshall called the "liberals" a "splendid group of men, but who as yet lack the political power to exercise a controlling influence . . . It appeared to me that there is a definite liberal group among the Communists, especially of young men, who have turned to the Communists in disgust at the corruption evident in the local governments." The statement followed one made by Marshall as he departed China the day before, in which he declared that in Chiang Kai-shek's government were a "dominant group of reactionaries who have been opposed. In my opinion, to almost every effort I have made to influence the formation of a genuine coalition government." These two statements from one of our most highly respected Military-Statesmen, together with the embargo which Mar-shall and Mr. Truman clamped on shipments of arms to the Chiang forces, spelled the doom of free China. The event immeasurably boosted the strength and power and world prestige of Communism, and it unquestionably led to the North Korean and Chinese Communist invasion of South Korea, again at a ghastly cost in American lives and resources.

Sudden emergencies can be annoying—and embarrassing—on an automobile trip. One of the most embarrassing is a strident, stuck horn. If it's ever your problem, you can solve it the moment it starts. First push or tap the horn ring sharply. If nothing happens, open the hood and operate on the horn itself. You'll find it by sound and conspicuous location (usually between the radiator and the grill). Disconnect the wire entering the horn, and then . . . glorious silence. Next stop: the service station.

Chapped lips aren't just a winter affliction. Brisk winds and warm dry weather can produce the same painful effect. You're particularly susceptible when you're driving and traveling in the spring and summer. Be prepared with lipstick and other cosmetics that contain extra moisturizers. For the men in the family there are many chap-preventing lip pomades that are clear, non-greasy, and also quite effective.

When you're traveling, finding restaurants and menus that please the whole family can be a problem. The new restaurant/ service-station combinations springing up on Interstate highways and other major routes are a popular solution. At Harvam locations, for example, you can get coffee, a snack, or a full meal while your car is being serviced nextdoor. Many restaurants like this have special children's menus, bottle-warming service, and commissaries where the youngsters can choose new games and books for the next leg of the trip.

One of the handiest traveling companions is a purse-size toothbrush kit-sold at most drug stores and notions counters. Most versions have a collapsible or two-piece brush that extends to full size, a miniature tube of toothpaste, and a small vial of mouthwash. Refills of paste and mouthwash are available.
