Dodgers Take Top Spot In Playoffs

The Dodgers Little League team, who held last place during the 1972 season, came out on top in this year's playoffs as they won the best of three series against the Red Sox, regular season champs, on Tuesday evening.

On Sunday evening the Dodgers played a game against the Giants to enter Monday's playoff. In an all around good ball game, with good hitting, the Dodgers won the contest 7-3.

Matt Reaver pitched to Steve Lingg's catching while Kenny Orndorff and Bob Leonard contributed several good defensive plays to help save the game. Chris Byard received the loss with Larry Martinez catching for the losing Giants.

Monday evening's game saw pitcher Danny Reaver heading into the 6th inning for the Dodgers with a shut-out. To help Reaver along the way, Tony Brown hit a three-run homer in the third and Gordon Strawsburg homered in the 4th inning. Tom Leonard was credited with several saves in the 8-3 game. Steve Lingg caught for the Dodgers, and helped increase the lead with a double which brought in 2 runs. Mike Wivell took the loss for the Red Sox, with Dennis Ott catching. Regular starting pitcher and the leading home run hitter in the league, Mike Ott, of the Red Sox, was unable to play due to a hand injury.

On Tuesday evening it was Matt Reaver pitching for the Dodgers against Archie Graff of the Red Sox. Dodger Steve Lingg and Red Sox Mike Wivell completed the battery. Both Matt and Danny Reaver contributed several hits for the winners, as Strawsburg, Josh Bollinger and John Miller hit safely to aid the 10-6 victory for the Dodgers.

Danny Reavers' spectacular catch when Dennis Ott hit a potential grand slam homerun deep into centerfield against the fence, helped keep the Red Sox from scoring in the 5th.

The Red Sox tried to come back in the top of the sixth by scoring 4 runs when Joe Enright, John Enright, Bob Rosensteel and Archie Graff came across the plate on an error by the Dodgers infield. A hit to the pitcher and a pop fly to center, ended the Red Sox threat, thus giving the Dodgers the series at the end of two games.

Opponents Of Sixes Bridge Dam Meet

The Army Corps of Engineers will not release a list of names of those persons affected by the Sixes Bridge Dam until condemnation proceedings begin, the president of the Save the Monocacy Association said last Tuesday evening.

"There're a lot of people living in a little dream world right now who don't know their land will be affected by this thing," Charles Fisher told 30 opponents of the dam last Tuesday night at the Emmitsburg Fire Hall.

"There's a possibility the Corps is understating their case to Congress. Later, if they get the dam approved, they may say 11,000 acres isn't enough. They might want 15, 18, 20,000 acres," Fisher said.

The lack of a list of families to be affected by the dam was confirmed recently by David Cohen of the Army Corps in an interview with Save the Monocacy's Vice President John Howes.

The Corps has estimated that only 70 families will lose property to the dam. The estimate applies only to property owners whose land will be inundated by the floodwaters of the dam. The Corps has no estimate for property owners to be affected by park lands around the dam.

The Save the Monocacy group moved at the meeting to initiate state legislation that would preserve the flood plain along the dam site as a scenic, historic and agricultural reserve.

If passed by the General Assembly, the proposal would prohibit the use of state funds in any project such as the Sixes dam.

"That would pretty well kill it because the Army Corps expects two-thirds of the cost of this dam to be paid by the taxpayers of Maryland," Mr. Fisher said.

The Association also agreed to print up bumper stickers opposing the dam and to hold a picnic for opponents of the dam and government representatives on September 30.

Dr. Nakhleh Returns From Year's Study Of Nations On Persian Gulf

After a year of research in Bahrain, Dr. Emile A. Nakhleh, associate professor of political science at Mount St. Marys' College, has returned brimming with observations on the problems of newly independent countries, the status of the "Ugly American" image, and the special difficulties of information-gathering in a developing nation.

Sponsored by the Fulbright Senior Research Fellowship, Dr. Nakhleh went to Bahrain to develop a model of urban tribalism that can be applied as a descriptive norm to all the newly emerging nations along the Persian Gulf. These tiny Emirates include such countries as Kuwait, Bahrain, Abu Dhabi, Dubai, Qatar, and Oman, most of which gained their independence from Britain in 1971 and are in the difficult process of transition from classical tribalism to modern statehood.

In his book, "Bahrain: Political Development in a Modernizing Society," which should be published next year, Dr. Nakhleh explores the relationships between that country's political development and the development of education, socialization, labor and the media. Although typical of the neighboring Emirates in these respects, Bahrain does have its unique characteristics.

Lions Club Holds Picnic At Kump's

Thirty-seven members and guests were present at the annual picnic hosted by the Emmitsburg Lions Club at Kump's Dam Park, near Emmitsburg, on Monday evening, August 27. Also enjoying the picnic and attention was Dr. Cadle's dog, Duke.

Horseshoes, fishing and other entertainment was enjoyed by those attending. A delicious meal was catered by Dot and Allen Davis.

A thank you is extended to all those who have contributed and hope that those who have not sent in their donation will do so soon.

The double ring ceremony was performed by Rev. Raymond Kingsborough in the Wellers Methodist Church, Thurmont, Aug. 8 at 8:15 p.m.

Their attendants were Mr. and Mrs. Robert E. Black of Thurmont. The couple is residing at Sanders Trailer Ct., DePaul St., Emmitsburg.

A veteran interested in obtaining a GI loan should request an application from the nearest VA regional office, fill it out and return it. The VA will promptly issue a certificate of eligibility if the veteran is eligible.

At the same time, Bahrain's problems of development are similar to those of her neighbors, one primary problem being the development of a post-oil economy which would give the country a more stable economic base. Many are now turning to "satellite industries," or those related to natural gas and oil. The final step in the process will be the establishment of non-related industries. Dr. Nakhleh will deliver a paper on this topic in September at the annual conference on the Gulf by the Middle East Institute.

Dr. Nakhleh's research roids not only academic importance but could help considerably to erase the ignorance about the area that has caused the Ugly American image to persist at some levels. He believes it is important to dispell our ignorance, especially since the area is a major source of oil as well as a major trouble spot in the world today.

"We must develop intelligent long-range planning on our Middle East policy," he asserts. "We cannot make policy in reaction to events, but in anticipation of events." An interesting sidelight to Dr. Nakhleh's study were the difficulties he encountered in gathering information. Success in large part was contingent upon developing a sense of trust in those with whom he had to deal.

"In a developing country, there is no room for dissent, making it very hard to get a non-government viewpoint," he says. "The search for truth is a sensitive process, since truth is viewed as being the private property of the rulers. The government has no form of serious popular participation, so the people are informed only on a 'need to know' basis. The difficulty, thus, is two-fold: to discover where the information lies and to get at the information."

Another roadblock was the prevailing attitude toward research. "They are not used to the whole concept of high-powered research. They don't know what it is," he explains. "They think anyone who is writing is a journalist looking at things from a superficial standpoint."

"On a practical basis, the government has no archives and there are no decent well-stocked libraries," he says. "I had to rely on personal contacts, which meant I had to spend a great deal of time developing the necessary trust."

"It is an art to get information in a situation like that," he concludes. "A field researcher must combine diplomacy with intellectual hunchmanship."

Nakhleh is currently working on a separate study of Bahrain's Constitutional Assembly. He attended all the sessions of the Assembly in which the country's constitution was being developed. Next summer Dr. Nakhleh hopes to return to the Gulf on an extension of his Fulbright Fellowship. The purpose of his return visit will be to apply the model developed in Bahrain to another Gulf Emirate, Abu Dhabi.

Instructor for the course is J. Rolfe Castleman, Assistant Director of Community Services at FCC, formerly Chief Photographer of the Frederick News-Post.

The new academic course in photography is planned around a new concept: it is a mini-course, taught over a six-week period and offers one credit. Course content includes learning how to handle adjustable cameras, how types of lighting affect pictures, the control of lighting situations in both artificial and natural light, what makes a good picture, evaluation of pictures taken by students, elementary rules of composition and an introduction to darkroom technique.

The Basic Photo course contains a 2-hour lecture period meeting each Tuesday at 2:00 over a six week period with a lab period scheduled on alternate Thursdays (2nd, 4th and 6th weeks) from 2:00 to 5:00 p.m.

It will be possible for students taking all three courses in photography to obtain a total of four credits. Basic Photo Darkroom and Advanced Photography will be scheduled by the time the Basic Photo course is completed.

Basic Photo Darkroom is also a mini-course taught over a six-week period, offering one credit, and it will contain the techniques of developing black and white negatives, contact printing, enlarging, mounting and other photo lab techniques. Advanced Photography will be taught over a 12-week period, offers two credits, and takes up the advanced concepts of exposure, lighting, composition, adds the techniques of

As an instructor of photography, J. Rolfe Castleman introduced photo courses into FCC's Continuing Education programs in February of 1971. A graduate of Virginia Polytechnic Institute, Mr. Castleman brings over 25 years of newspaper experience to Frederick Community College. He has been a professional photographer for 20 years and has won over 50 regional, state, and local awards for his photography.

He continues to be associated with the media in that he continues to be a contributing writer for several national photo trade magazines.

WASHINGTON REPORT FROM SENATOR J. GLENN BEALL JR.

Gas Leaks and Explosions

Within the past 16 months, five residential areas of Maryland and Virginia have been shattered by natural gas explosions.

One of those explosions occurred in Bowie, Md., a few weeks ago, and it took the lives of two young children and their mother. Another explosion last year in Annandale, Va., also left three persons dead.

Leaks in natural gas pipelines and hookups turned these homes into deadly time bombs, just waiting for a spark to set them off.

The increasing frequency of these explosions has been of great concern to me, because it appears that we may not be taking the proper precautions to minimize the risk of these tragic accidents.

Twice within the past month, I have asked the Senate to finance a thorough study of gas explosions in residential areas, and I am glad to report that my proposal has been accepted.

The study which I proposed will be carried out by the U.S. Office of Pipeline Safety (OPS), which will receive a special appropriation of $275,000 for the project.

The recent explosions speak for themselves, but there is other evidence that our gas distribution system needs a safety analysis.

A survey by OPS found out, for instance, that 28 states are not fully enforcing the standards of the Natural Gas Pipeline Safety Act of 1968. They depend on federal enforcement in areas where they do not assume jurisdiction, and this increases the workload of an already overburdened agency.

In Maryland the Public

Service Commission has only two employees working on a part-time basis in its pipeline safety program, and only 22 inspections were made last year.

What this shows is that we are fighting a fire with an eyedropper, and that's just not going to do the job.

Before turning loose an army of pipeline inspectors, however, we should be looking for ways to improve the distribution system—and that is the object of the study which I proposed.

For instance, we ought to find out more about the strength and endurance of plastic pipes that are used as gas lines.

We also should examine the chemical odors that are used to give natural gas a distinctive smell. The gas is odorless by itself, and persons may not be able to detect its presence sometimes because the aromatic ingredients were filtered out as the gas seeped through the soil from an underground leak.

Actually, our whole approach to pipeline safety ought to be reviewed with the idea of designing a safer system instead of just patching up the leaks in the present one.

If we are to prevent the disaster of gas explosions from repeating themselves over and over, we must make certain that adequate safeguards and standards are provided and adhered to in the design, construction and maintenance to gas pipeline and residential service lines.

I believe that the study I proposed will be a great help in directing our effort against this hidden danger in our homes and neighborhood.

Large Crowd Bids Farewell To Father Joseph Sannino

A month-long series of farewell parties was climaxed last Thursday evening when St. Joseph's Parish held a party for Father Joseph A. Sannino. More familiarly known as "Father Joe" to residents of the Emmitsburg area, he had served as associate pastor of St. Joseph's Church for the past two years.

Among those attending were Mr. and Mrs. James Sannino, Philadelphia, parents of Fr. Sannino; Reverend and Mrs. John Chatlos and Reverend Ronald Fearer.

George Danner acted as emcee for the evening's social and introduced the Sunrise Singers, who sang a variety of songs for the occasion. Mrs. Charles Dillon presented Mrs. Sannino with a corsage. Others making presentations to Father Sannino were: Mr. Charles Dillon, President of the Parish Council; Tom Topper, Guy Baker Circle, Columbian Squires; Rev. Fearer, Emmitsburg Council of Churches; Mrs. George Danner, Ladies Sodality; Eddie Siedel, CYO representative; and George Danner, Knights of Columbus. Father John King, pastor, also thanked Fr. Sannino for his work and effort during his time here.

Mr. George Danner served as chairman for the dessert and beverages during the party, with serving being done by the men of the parish.

Father Joe left Friday and will study at the Mexican-American Cultural Center in San Antonio, Texas, before assuming new duties at a Vincentian Mission in Panama. His address for the next few months will be: Father Joseph A. Sannino, C.M., Mexican-American Cultural Center, 3000 W. French Place, P. O. Box 28185, San Antonio, Texas 78284.

During fiscal year 1972, 39,359 veterans and other eligible persons pursued training in health-related programs with the aid of VA educational benefits.

THE WORD is SILENCE

By Ralph Rhea

Have you ever walked through the woods in some remote place when a breeze rustled the tree leaves, when there were no sounds? If so, you have known an indescribable experience. Some people fear silence, and others make no effort to seek quiet moments; but these times help us to develop into whole beings. This is especially true when you are trying to get in touch with yourself, and to attune yourself to the rest of the universe. In the words of a poet, "Silence alone is great enough to hold a thing so real it never can be told." THE WORD is BEING

By Ralph Rhea

Sometimes when we listen to people discussing the theories of art, literature, music, or religion, we get the impression that they think talking about something is really the same as accomplishing something. The reality of life is being and doing. Our values, our ideals, our whole philosophy of life is revealed in what we are. If we want to tell the world what our real values are, we are required to live, act, react, and become that which we would like to be.

VFW TO MEET

The regular meeting of VFW Post 6658, will be held Wednesday, Sept. 5 at Kump's Dam Park, beginning at 8:30 p.m., weather permitting.

Understanding Economic Facts

Nobody can deny that our nation's economic situation is today in a mess. It is my opinion that two factors got us into the mess: (1) Politicians making the decisions on fiscal, budgetary and monetary matters for the nation; and (2) pressure groups exercising an abnormal power in government and the economy. This begs the question of how the two factors could have been averted; and the answer is: by a citizenry with knowledge of economics and enough far-sightedness to see that if they did not participate in national affairs they'd come up some day holding the bag.

It is not too late to bring inflation under control and set up rigid rules in Washington for controlling deficit spending, and leap-frogging wages and prices; for holding the line on the national debt and rectifying the imbalance in our export-import equation. The first step is to learn some of the economic truths. One of America's best known industrialists, Lemuel R. Boulware, has just published a little easy-to-read book: "What You Can Do About Inflation, Unemployment, Productivity, Profit, and Collective Bargaining." It is a masterpiece of simplicity in economics, and that's saying a lot. The author is a long-time friend of mine. He was Vice President of General Electric Company; served in World War II as Operations Vice Chairman of the War Production Board. With GE, one of his jobs was to represent the company in bargaining relations with the unions.

Policies he established became the pattern for many of our great industries.

Covers Economic Questions

Now in retirement, Mr. Boulware has become a professor, teacher, writer and active citizen. His book contains many of the lectures he has been delivering to classes at Florida Atlantic University's School of Business Administration. It can be ordered ($1.85) from Loeffler & Company, Box 9622, San Diego, Calif. 92169.

Here are some chapter titles: My thesis; Political Sophistication Requirements; The Moral Requirement; The Economic Competency Requirement; Inflation; Profits and You; What is Business; How Big are Profits; How the Sales Dollar is Divided; Who Gets The Corporate Income; Taxes On A Loaf of Bread; The Collective Bargaining Requirement; Monopoly; Compulsion; What To Do About Prices; Let's Cooperate In Our Own Interest. Solid Thesis.

Mr. Boulware's Thesis is set forth: "In the fact of Today's complexities—some of which baffle the experts—the average citizen is not going to attain competency (in economics) fast enough to meet the decisions required of him by his freedom. Yet there is plenty of experience to prove he can go a surprisingly long way toward doing so when he gets enough able and honorable help. It is the opportunity and obligation of responsible thought-leaders both to help the individual get as far as he can go himself—and then to persuade him to accept sound advice from there on. . . . The most ominous question right now is really not who should do what, but how much time we have left to do it?"

Mr. Boulware's book contains a table showing one of the major reasons for unemployment of skilled labor in the United States:

Factors In Unemployment
Nine out of every 10 home radios being sold in America today are foreign products. Japan and Germany are the biggest exporters of radios.

One out of every six new cars sold in America today is foreign built.

Seven out of 10 sweaters sold here are imported. Nineteen out of every 20 motorcycles sold in America come from Japan and other countries.

Fifty per cent of all the nails and staples sold in America are manufactured abroad. Nine out of 10 baseball gloves are shipped in from foreign countries.

And the list goes on. Japanese industrial workers make just about one fourth as much as American workers, and West Germany about half as much. And yet in both West Germany and Japan productivity per man hour is going up much faster than in our industries. So the foreign products are closing down industrial jobs in America.

These are highlights of the hundreds of economic facts presented in Lem Boulware's little book. I wish 10-million people could read it next week. The resultant citizen pressure on Washington would have a greatly beneficial result. We had better get busy, as informed citizens, or we will lose our nation by default.

According to an extensive study on Vietnam era veterans by the American Council on Education, veterans are more likely than nonveterans to plan a career in business or technical fields.

Over the past several months I have received many letters relating to consumer product information and problems. As a result, the next two weeks of this column will be devoted exclusively to some of the consumer questions that have been raised. Letters should be sent to me, c/o U. S. House of Representatives, Washington, D. C. 20515.

I am writing to tell you that you just can't get service anymore. Both my refrigerator and washer went on the blink in the past three months and I had a devil of a time getting a repair man out to "the house. Can't something be done?"

Here's a possible solution—why not contact the Major Appliance Consumer Action Panel (MACAP). MACAP was founded two years ago by several trade associations to resolve difficulties between consumers and manufacturers of freezers, stoves, ovens, refrigerators, washers, dryers, dishwashers and air conditioners. According to the Office of Consumer Affairs, "MACAP is an important organization capable of making authoritative recommendations toward equitable resolutions of problems arising between the consumer and the home-appliance industry. The panel has been open handed and fair in its dealings with the consumer and the industry." The organization apparently wants to help more consumers, so if you have an appliance problem, such as repair service, drop them a line at 20 North Wacker Drive, Chicago, Illinois 60606. Remember though, it is usually better to discuss your complaint first with the dealer from whom you bought the appliance.

I am a 68-year-old veteran with a $10,000 National Service Life Insurance term policy. Recently I suffered a disability which kept me from working for six months. Can't I qualify for a waiver of premiums on my insurance?

The VA informs me that your disability must have been incurred before your 65th birthday in order to qualify for such a waiver.

Does the National Park Service have any films available to showing to junior high school students?

Sale and rental of some 33 National Park Service films covering a wide range of scenic, natural history, historic site preservation and other subjects, are handled by the Harpers Ferry Historical Association. A catalog describing each title and detailing ordering procedures is available on request by writing to: Film Librarian, Harpers Ferry Historical Association, P. O. Box 147, Harpers Ferry, West Virginia 25424.

My husband and I receive monthly social security benefits on my husband's earnings record. I have been told that if I should die my husband would not receive a death payment from Social Security. Is this true?

Yes, because you received retirement benefits on your husband's record but were not yourself insured under social security. If your husband dies, however, a lump-sum death payment would be made to you because he was insured under social security.

In 1874, California had no native bass. . . . In 1959 the state's fishery specialists decided that Florida's "all-year bass" might do well in San Diego's lake areas because of a similarity in habitat, temperature range and forage fish. A successful cooperative program was launched involving the city of Can Diego, San Diego County and the Fish and Game Departments of California and Florida. — Sports Afeld

Labor Day
September 3, 1973

Labor Day is a unique holiday, observed as a national holiday only in the United States. The day was established by national law as a salute to the working person, and to Americans the holiday heralds a change in life style as it usually marks the end of vacation season, the start of another school year, and a seasonal change. These words from The Living Bible refer to work.

"What does one really get from hard work? I have thought about this in connection with all the various kinds of work God has given to mankind. Everything is appropriate in its own time. But though God has planted eternity in the hearts of men, even so, man cannot see the whole scope of God's work from beginning to end. So I conclude that, first, there is nothing better for a man than to be happy and to enjoy himself as long as he can; and second, that he should eat and drink and enjoy the fruits of his labors, for these are gifts from God. . . .

The man who works hard sleeps well whether he eats little or much, but the rich must worry and suffer insomnia. . . .

A lazy man is brother to the saboteur. . . .

Remember to observe the Sabbath as a holy day. Six days a week are for your daily duties and your regular work, but the seventh day is a day of Sabbath rest before the Lord your God."

BUSINESS AND THE STOCK MARKET

New Four-Channel Stereo Sound

By Babson's Reports Inc., Wellesley Hills, Mass., Aug. 30, 1973—Producers of high-fidelity music components, manufacturers of records (discs) and tapes, and broadcasters view the development of quadraphonic (four channels-four speakers) sound as the most significant breakthrough in the last two decades in the field of recording and playing music. Stereo was introduced in the early 1950s but it took about 18 years to become a multi-billion - dollar industry. Currently, however, about 80% of U. S. homes have some type of record-player, and most of them can play a stereo record. Quadraphonics—literally surrounding the listener with music thus creating a concert-hall effect—has now arrived and its future appears bright. Various Competitive Systems

As in the initial stages of other new technologies such as color television and cartilage video, there are several types of quadraphonic systems. But two principal methods are predominant at this time. There is one developed by RCA called the "discrete" or "true" stereo whereby four distinct and separate sound resources are individually recorded and played back. The second competing and leading technology is the "matrix" type pioneered and brought out by the Columbia Broadcasting System (CBS). Under this method the music is originally recorded on four channels and then electronically blended into two channels which can be played on conventional stereo equipment. In order to give a true quadraphonic effect under matrix, a decoder must be used. Another type, termed "derived" quadraphonics, produces simulated four-channel effects from ordinary two-channel recordings or broadcasts.

Need For A Standard
Because of the differences between the systems, the records produced by RCA cannot be played on CBS equipment and vice versa. At the present time, though, the majority of the equipment producers are manufacturing the kind of systems which play the CBS matrix records. It is not surprising that both RCA and CBS claim superiority in their respective recording techniques, but the quest is still on for compatibility or a universally accepted system.

One significant factor which is complicating the situation is the fact that a decision has to be made by the Federal Communications Commission on which system is to be chosen for broadcasting. Although many experts agree that the four-channel sound of RCA is technically superior, there is the additional consideration that selection of the RCA system would require changes in the existing FM standards of transmission over the air waves.

Buy Recommendations For Growth Market
At the present time, U. S. producers of audio components have about 65% of the total market. Annual sales of such equipment have been increasing steadily. Five years ago they amounted to only $150 million, but today annual sales are approximately $500 million. Insiders look for the market to expand even more markedly over the years just ahead, reaching a billion dollars by 1975 or 1976.

With such prospects, there is reason to anticipate some good investment opportunities in the field. The Research Department of Babson's Reports is at present recommending participation in this promising and expansive market through either Zenith Radio or General Electric. We advise purchase of Zenith common stock for those investors in search if an in-depth commitment covering all sections of the home entertainment field. Adding General Electric to a portfolio would provide an interest in all feature of electrical equipment and electronic, including the rapidly growing quadraphonics. There are additional companies producing high-fidelity stereo and quadraphonic components that the Babson Staff supervises and currently considers worth holding: Admiral, Avnet, CBS, Emerson Electric, General Telephone, Gulton, Magnavox, RCA and Teledyne.

FREDERICK COUNTY BACKGROUNDS

BY SAMUEL CARRICK
Colonel Ridgely Brown, C.S.A. August—
"is a golden haze above the sea;
The yellow butterflies begin to drift
To their far harboring.
There is no rift
In earth or air in Nature's symphony."

September—
"The flowers now take color from the sun
In final glory ere their work is done."

—Edith Tatum
The data pertaining to Colonel Ridgely Brown, son of Amos and Sarah Ridgely (Griffith) Brown, is continued at this time.

The Civil War, or the War between the States, is fought over and over again—in the spoken as well as the written word. However, the individual soldier, officer or enlisted man, receives comparatively little attention. No matter what feats of bravery, over and above the call of duty, he performed, history, in the main has no place for the individual—unless he or she is unusually outstanding. So it was and is with Colonel Ridgely Brown, who died in the 30th year of his age, leading his Cavalry troop, the First Maryland, in battle.

The grave of Colonel Ridgely Brown in the family burial ground at Elton is forgotten except by a few. It might be a good thing if some of the Civil War adherents would combine action with words and do a bit of exploring—seek out the hidden and difficult to find historical sites and give them some much needed attention.

Elton, the estate called home by Colonel Brown and his immediate family, is located about a mile north of the little village of Unity, in Montgomery County, Maryland. It is a sturdy rough stone manor house. It is known as the Gaither-Brown house locally, but it is not known whether it was built by a Griffith or a Gaither. Sarah Ridgely Griffith, a daughter of Nicholas and Ann (Ridgely) Griffith, married Amos Brown, of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, in January of 1808. Soon after their marriage they came to live at Elton. Amos Brown died about 1845 and if he is interred in the family burial ground, which is unlikely, his grave is unmarked. Miss Annie Brown, the last surviving child of Amos and Sarah Ridgely (Griffith) Brown, died in 1892 and after her death the estate passed into other hands.

It would appear that the Brown family set aside the plot of ground to be used as a place of burial for the immediate relationship. If grave-stones tell a story—and they often do—the first interment here took place in 1816. The inscription follows:
1. In memory of Alice B. Brown, died May 28, 1816, aged 17 years.
The burial ground, located a short distance west of the manor house, is, roughly, fifty by thirty feet in size and is enclosed by a stone wall some three feet in height. This wall is in a bad state of repair, particularly at the south end. Weeds and underbrush are no respecter of persons or heroes and the graveyard could stand some help in the way of "clearing out". Students of the Civil War could help in this respect.

Mrs. George E. Simms, Sr., the present owner of the estate, has endeavored to keep the burial ground in good condition, but with advancing years, the job is a bit too much. How about lending a hand?
A study of the burial ground reveals the following list of interments:
2. In memory of Mary E. Brown, died May 21, 1836, aged 35 years and 11 days.
3. In memory of Annie Brown, born October 10, 1811, died April 29, 1892, aged 80 years, 6 months and 19 days.
Note: The last child of Amos and Sarah Ridgely (Griffith) to die and it was after her death that Elton passed out of the family.
4. In memory of Sally R. Brown, died January 16, 1899, aged 20 years.
Note: Apparently the last burial in the graveyard. It would appear that Sally R. Brown was a granddaughter of Amos and Sarah Ridgely (Griffith) Brown.
5. In memory of Ridgely Brown, died June 1, 1864, aged

30 years, 9 months, and 19 days.
Note: There is a "Confederate States Army" marker at Colonel Brown's grave.
Ridgely Brown entered the Confederate Army in the First Maryland Cavalry when it was organized in 1862. Later, when it was reorganized, he became a Major. In the campaign of 1864, his Cavalry was given credit for saving Richmond from capture. In June of that same year the young Maryland leader was killed in a battle at Dabney's Ferry on the South Anna River. By a vote of his battalion he was given the rank of Lieutenant Colonel.

In some way or other the body of Colonel Brown was returned to his home and interred in the family burial ground. On the wall, inside St. John's Church, at Olney, a bronze plaque has been placed to his memory. It gives the year of his birth as 1833 and the date of his death as June 1, 1864. In addition it lists his rank in Company A, First Maryland Cavalry, C.S.A.
6. In memory of Louise M. Brown, died February 19, 1857, aged 40 years and 18 days.
7. In memory of Elizabeth Ridgely Brown, died January 15, 1882, aged 86 years.
8. In memory of Sarah Ridgely Brown, died March 31, 1866, aged 73 years, 6 months and 12 days.

Perspectives In Learning By Hazel Brown, President Harry Lundeberg School Vocational Training Is Gain Favor The trend is growing for students to demand tangible results from educational experiences and the responses to these demands are being met by the development of improved vocational programs. It is unrealistic for young people to graduate from high school without saleable skills for employment or plans for furthering their education. The future must hold some recognizable direction and meaningful opportunity for achievement and success. Industrial arts and vocational programs for high school students are being evaluated and restructured so that more students can participate. The school systems must recognize that many students are not going to be attending college and will need other experiences which will help them in the world of work. It is very satisfying to read of the trend toward vocational training as a respectable and honorable alternative to an academic education. Not every person needs or should desire a college education. Being a successful craftsman is both desirable and financially rewarding. The myth of assured success accompanying a college degree is gradually being destroyed. Educators must begin teaching vocational courses with the goals of future employment opportunities in mind. Students deserve to receive adequate orientation and training for vocational and industrial jobs. The course offerings should emphasize work habits and attitudes as well as specific skill training. When the schools begin to offer courses which meet the needs of the students, the attitudes of student will change, too. The belief that vocational training is only for the dropout will gradually disappear and be replaced by a healthy recognition of the need for both vocational and academic programs.

Keeping The FAITH

"Like a religious ugly duckling I find myself a Swedenborgian. It is an unusual situation, and whether a blessing or a complaint it is certainly a condition with which one must sooner or later come to terms."

A Swedenborgian, says G. Roland Smith, in his book MY SIDE OF THE GRAVE, is one who embraces the religious concepts of Emanuel Swedenborg, 18th century scientist, philosopher, and theologian. Recognized as one of the great geniuses of Western culture, Swedenborg's works have had a profound influence on such diverse figures as Helen Keller, William Butler Yeats, Henry James Sr., William Blake, and Ralph Waldo Emerson.

Mr. Smith, a British artist, relates in a candid and amusing manner "... the assorted experiences of an individual caught up in the bewildering business of living." He discusses how the distinctive religious philosophy of Swedenborg affected his life as a student, soldier, and professional artist.

Those not acquainted with Swedenborg's theology will find this book stimulating as well as informative. Other "religious ugly ducklings" will readily identify with the author's insights.

MY SIDE OF THE GRAVE is available for only $1.50 (postpaid) at the Swedenborg Foundation, Dept. MS, 139 E. 23rd St., N.Y., N.Y. 10010.

THE WORD is BALANCE
By Ralph Rhea

There is always strength in balance. This is particularly true when thinking of withdrawing from life and identifying with life. We need a time to withdraw from activity, to restore inspiration, and to listen for intuitive nudges that keep us on the right path. We need a time of strongly identifying with life so that we may put into practice the intuitive messages we have received. Balance in this area brings harmony and wholeness to our mind, body, and affairs. For a free copy of "The Word" series for this month write: Unity Newspaper, Unity Village, Missouri 64063.
