Most Anything At A Glance - By Abigail -

Thanksgiving is here again, bringing with it as opportunity to celebrate our blessings as many generations have before us. As we begin to close up many of the summer's activities and get ready for winter, the custom of taking a short break to give thanks for the events of the past year is well received everywhere in our country where more than 350 years since the custom started, I venture to say the feelings in people's hearts has remained pretty much the same. In the hustle and bustle of day to day living it is easy to lose sight of the real values in life and forget about the many blessings each of us share. When the sorrows exceed the joys on a given day, it is easy to forget about the many good things in life for which we should all

One can not fail to note the arrival of Christmas decorations in the square and some of the stores. The turkey hardly will be cold before we are right in the middle of the mad year-end rush. Much as we enjoy the festivities, the feverish activity makes many of us glad that it comes only once each year.
