Meet At St. Joseph's

Most Anything At A Glance - By Abigail -

Danny Harris of E. Main St. celebrated his 13th birthday on Aug. 9 enjoying his new bike and sharing ice cream and cake with his family and friends -- Doug and Duane Vaughn, Doug Myers and Doug Hollinger, he was surprised when as his final gift, he received a banana cream pie in his face! What ensued was a sight to behold; everyone got into the act and the pie fairly flew...no one escaped. While one and all pitched in to re-move the evidence of the pie fight, Danny's was heard to say ... "Boy, Mom, I'll never forget this birthday.

I rather imagine he won't. I've always thought it would be fun to be hit in the face with a pie. Unfortunately, all those who would like to hit me in the face, never want to do it with a pie.

As you are probably aware by now, the town sure could use another pavillion for the park. It seems all the present pavillions are booked up through September. Reservations have had to be turned down, so we know there is definitely a need for another pavillion.

If anyone would like to make a donation, please send your donation to Eugene Myers, Chairman of Parks and Recreation in care of the town office. Any and all donations will be greatly appreciated. The goal is to reach $5,000.

I personally want to thank everyone who made this past baseball season a success. Sports are really popular around here and many many people turned out to cheer their favorites on. What with the Babe Ruth 13 year olds going to the semi-finals and really surprising all the other teams with their ability, I'm really proud of them.

Mayor Proclaims Nat. Adult Educ. Week

Frederick County will be observing National Adult Education Week from August 22-28, according to an announ-cement by Dr. Robert G. Smith of the Frederick County Board of Education

Continuing education classes, which will begin at centers around Frederick County the week of September 13, include fun and hobby courses as well as self-improvement classes. A schedule of all adult courses offered by the Frederick County Board of Education will be published toward the end of August. There will be something for everyone from instruction in crocheting and welding to physical fitness classes. Any adult interested in preparing for the high school diploma examination (GED) or improving basic reading, spelling, and arithmetic skills (ABE) can join one of the 20 free classes which will be located in schools and community centers in Frederick City and throughout the county

Instruction, books, and supplies for the ABE/GED classes are all provided free by the adult education program. Classes are informal and friendly. Each student starts at his own level and works at his own pace. Students register in an ABE/GED class, simply by showing up for a scheduled session. There is no age limit. The classes are open to any out-of-school adult. Past academic records are not transferred and there is no hassle about why anyone left school Further information may be obtained by calling the Board of Education 662-9200 Ext. 281 or 270 or by calling the ABE/GED recruiter for local area. The Emmitsburg vour area recruiter is Linda Myers, 447-6439

Spiers, CEF, (Citizens for Educational Freedom), Catholic University of America, traced the historical development and efforts of CEF to obtain funds for non-public schools and brought the participants up-to-date on the present status of legislation. As chairperson for the panel on NAEP)national Association of Educational Progress) Sister Vincentia Goeb, principal of Elizabeth Seton High School in Bladensburg, Maryland urged the principals to "continue to assess the curriculum in your own schools," adding that the what of the course must be balanced with the how, the creative part of the course Symposium leaders, Sister Ethelreda Flanagan, principal of Saint Joseph's High School in Emmitsburg and Sister Marie Yetter. principal of Seton High School in Baltimore, directed a special session on "The Reform Movement in Secondary Education.

In a "Communications Spin-Off," Sister Mary Augusta Von Drehle, Public Relations Director for the Schools of the Daughters of Charity and Maryland State Coordinator for NSPRA (National School Public Relations Association) told the participants: "We need to stress again the idea that a consciousness of public relations outcomes is an integral part of every school task and every school contact." Sister offered techniques for developing an educational/com-munications program that would create an ever-increasing circle of people who would be well-informed and involved in their schools.

Summarizing the two-day sessions, Sister Jerome Nossell, Councillor for Education for the Daughters of Charity, Emmitsburg Province and vicethe Baltimore president of Archdiocesan School Board, encouraged the principals to "Go forward at whatever risk." Using this motto of Elizabeth Ann Seton, foundress of the parochial school system in the United States, Sister Jerome challenged the administrators to appraise and develop their efforts in organizing and conducting a total school communications program that would reflect the Catholic philosophy of education

Hospices, New Concept In Care

Hospices, homes for dying patients that emphasize care of the person over treatment of an incurable disease, are gaining increasing recogni-tion and acceptance in the United States.

According to Constance Holden, writing in the 30 July 1976 issue of Science, the weekly journal of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, the National Cancer Institute (NCI) has sent out requests for proposals from groups interested in forming hospices.

What NCI is looking for is up to half a dozen such facilities in various

The hospice is designed to accommodate patients with very short prognoses for survival. There is no 'heroic'' attempt to prolong life when the disease is hopelessly out of control, although this does not mean that a life-prolonging therapy cannot be applied if the patient wants it. Patients are not usually fed intravenously, nor are antibiotics automatically given for the pneumonia of a terminal patient. "When an ulcerated artery begins hemorrhaging," according to Holden, "the patient is not given transfusions when the end is in sight anyway. instead he is covered with a blanket so he won't be frightened by the sight of his blood and administered a strong sedative while someone sits close by clasping his hand. Still, the hospices concept appears to be gaining momentum. NCI is prepared to fund successful grant applicants for up to three years each. The Vince Lombardi Cancer Center at Washington, D.C.'s Georgetown University, which has operated a home care program for the terminally ill for years, is planning a new facility, and has applied for NCI money. Hospice, Inc., of New Haven Connecticut, the United States' only existing facility, is receiving $800,000 a year from NCI, while trying to raise $3 million to open a new center that will house 44 patients, or 700 a year. And, perhaps, more physicians will come to find satisfaction, as one St. Christopher's trainee is quoted in Science, "from helping to transform a patient in severe pain into one pain free and at peace." After all, concludes writer Holden, "the hospice movement does not represent a new approach toward dying, but simply an attempt to establish as standard those principles that have always guided the best practitioners.

parts of the country, modeled after the prototypical St. Christopher's Hospice in London, founded 10 years ago by Cicely Saunders, which has become, says Holden, "Something of a mecca for health professionals interested in terminal care ... The ground rules of the hospice philosophy are that pain must be controlled and that isolation must be eliminated. Spurning the traditional hospital reluctance to routinely use large quantities of addictive painkillers, Dr. Saunders' staff administers continuous doses of analgesics, sometimes using what is known as Brompton mix, a cocktail made up of diamorphine (heroin), cocaine, gin, sugar syrup, and chlorpromazine syrup. At St. Christopher's, there is no such thing as giving "too much" analgesic there is only that amount which is sufficient for continuous pain control.

"Pain control is only part of what makes the hospice unusual," ob-serves Holden. "The rest comes from the atmosphere created by constant attention by the staff and volunteers who spend much time just listening and hand-holding and by the presence of friends and family members who can drop by almost any time ...

Mountain Foods Featured At Folk Craft Center

The Craft Center Kitchen, one of the most popular exhibits at Round Meadow in Catoctin Mountain Park, will be the scene of some traditional late summer food preparation, with many activities taking place this Saturday and Sunday, August 14 and 15, from 12 noon to 5 p.m. August brings harvest time for many of the fruits and vegetables that grow so abundantly in the Catoc-tin Mountain area. For the past two centuries, mountain folk have tended gardens and orchards similar to those on display at Round Meadow. Traditionally, when the vegetables began to ripen, many busy hours were spent harvesting and pre-serving them for the long cold winter months while the garden would lie barren under a blanket of snow.

Service No Longer A Dirty Word

In the dawn of the 'grease monkey'' on mechanics.

He did the profession no favor. For years afterward, the phrase conjured up the image of a guy forever condemned to busting his knuckles on a rusty bolt in some dimly-lit, damp, draughty garage.

Not any more. Today a highly-skilled mechanic (make that "service technician'') at an auto dealership may pull down $20,000 a year or more. Oh, he's still plagued by frozen fittings, but more often he's monitoring an oscilloscope or some other exotic piece of diagnostic equipment.

The industry in general has taken a new attitude toward the service department. The backshop is no longer regarded as a necessary evil, but as a profit center and the best way to bring back customers at trade-in time. At least one automaker and its dealers are putting service before sales. When Datsun introduced its F-10

It was only after the technicians had completed their training that the first F-10 customer was allowed to take delivery on his new car. Thus, if a problem did develop shortly afterward. the customer could return, confident that the dealership had the knowledge to diagnose the trouble and the tools and parts to remedy it. And long before the F-10s were unveiled, Datsun engineers took a coupe and a wagon to Canada for extended cold-weather performance tests.

It didn't matter that more than 250,000 frontwheel-drive Datsuns already had been proven and sold in Europe. These new models had enough new features to justify an expensive double-check to make sure than they would letter-perfect before be their U.S. debut.

After running the vehicles for more than 5.500 miles - often on allbut-impassable roads — the experts could find but a single flaw: They recommended that one wire in the engine compartment be repositioned to guard against moisture.

Fred. Memorial Participates In Home-Care Program

The West Baltimore Community Health Care Corporation (WBCHCC) has become the latest community-based facility to join the Blue Cross and Blue Shield of Maryland HomeCare Program, it was announced. The facility is located at 1850 West Baltimore Street.

Through its participation in HomeCare, WBCHCC will provide skilled nursing, medical social services, home health aide and physicians services to eligible Blue Cross and Blue Shield members in their homes. Physical therapy services will be provided through a contract with the Visiting Nurse Association of Baltimore.

WBCHCC, which has a patient referral and dissotial also will provide pharmaceuticals, medical equipment, routine laboratory services and emergency ambulance service. HomeCare, which was added to Blue Cross and Blue Shield members' contracts at no additional cost, provides benefits for medically necessary care received in a patient's home which normally would be provided on a hospital inpatient basis.

"What should I do when my date tries to get me drunk?"

The first thing you might do is try to find out why he wants you drunk. Maybe he wants you to get drunk so he will feel free to get drunk himself. After all, if you're sober and he's drunk, you have the advantage of having all your faculties while he is drugged.

Or perhaps he wants to get you drunk in the hope that you might say yes to something you say no to while you're sober. What should you do?

That's up to you. You can just keep saying no firmly, and refuse to drink, or refuse to drink much. There's no reason for you to make excuses, either. If anyone owes an explanation, it isn't you. And if he finds out you know why he wants moderately...social drinkers...usually learn a few tricks to keep control. For instance:

- They drink only when they're relaxed and feeling well They eat before and while drinking, to slow the rate at which alcohol enters the bloodstream. They sip drinks slowly, rather than gulping them down and jolting the brain with sudden rushes of alcohol - They know how to keep, their blood alcohol level low. For example, a man who has three drinks per hour will have a blood alcohol level of about 0.10% after 2 hours (which is legally drunk in most states.) But if he has only one drink per hour, his blood alcohol level will stay around 0.02% all evening. It's not quite that simple; because there are a few variables that can change

The Woman Said Yes Encounters with Life and Death Memoirs by Jessamyn West

Reviewed by Shirley F. Topper

Actually there were two women, possibly three. One woman, however, was the mother of the other two and it is intimated that her yes lay behind all the subsequent affirmations.

There can be no doubt that the latter part of this book deals with a very controversial matter that is difficult to reconcile with what has gone before. The first part sends forth such a strong message of faith and courage that the conclusion can only be that it has been misinterpreted by the sisters or twisted by them into another meaning From the picture given of Grace, the mother, it appears more probable that she, in a like situation, (the younger sister's terminal illness) would have preferred to go down battling to the very end, never relinquishing her hope and illness, some years earlier? Given this view of the mother's indomitable spirit, it seems unbelievable that she would have reversed her position in such a matter, with the memory of that victory still in mind. It may well be that this book was written as a sort of catharsis; the burden of this knowledge having given in the older sister's become too heavy to bear alone. Perhaps, too, as a plea for compassionate understanding, to ease the questions of the mind.

Jessamyn West is the author of sixteen books, including novels, memoirs, short stories and poetry. Her book and screen-play, 'The Friendly Persuasions" received wide acclaim. This book is available at the Emmitsburg Public Library.

A Death With Dignity When the Chinese

Came By Lois Wheeler Snow

trust and hope; gifts to support the human spirit that were not accepted blindly but rather with intelligent thoughtfulness and full ap-preciation. The final and most valid proof of genuine love must surely be a willingness and desire to share with the loved one every moment that is allotted, however painful those moments might be.

Lois Snow's husband, Edgar Snow, journalist and author, had a tremendous capacity for understanding and compassion for his fellow man. Consequently, he attracted to himself the lasting friendship and love of others. This account, by his wife, of the final test of these true and loving relationships is one of the finest examples of the rich reward such a great gift can bring into the world. Clearly, it is a demonstration of how these enobling effects sets a special mark upon mankind that uplifts and inspires. The calm and confident acceptance of Edgar's approaching death was shared, warmly and lovingly, by Edgar, his family and the Chinese Medical team who came to help. Through the dedicated

It also provides classes in everything from karate to TOPS (Take Off Pounds Sensibly).

Seton Center is equipped with a permanent staff of five Daughters of Charity and thirty-one full and part-

Besides being a day care center for some 80 preschool youngsters, the center also provides proschool grams for about 45 school age children of working parents. Parents drop the youngsters off at the center when they go to work. The school-age children then are bused to and from school and then returned to the center where they are involved in various activities.

With a yearly budget of $130,000, the center is partially supported by the United Givers Fund and a grant from the Bishop's Campaign for Human Development, Parents' fees, and donations. Since most families who use the facilities have low incomes, fees are minimal, based on a sliding scale. A Thrift Shop was opened in 1970 to aid area families by providing used, serviceable clothing at reasonable prices, and is open Monday through Saturday, from 1 to 4 p.m.

Letters To The Editor

The Supreme Court recently upheld the legality of a Massachusetts statute calling for mandatory retirement of a state police officer at the age of 50. I feel this decision has no rational or scientific basis although a constitutional basis for arbitrary limitation of the opportunity for constructive work can be fabricated.

Part of my opposition to this decision lies with the Supreme Court's reasoning. Their statement is as follows: "Since physical ability generally declines with age, mandatory retirement at age 50 serves to remove from police service those whose fitness for uniformed work presumptively has diminished with age." The words "generaland "presumptively" have been applied where in fact no individual basis of truth may exist.

At about the same time as the Supreme Court ruling, President Ford exempted Arthur Flemming, Commissioner of the Administration on Aging and Chairman of the Civil Rights Commission, from compulsory retirement provisions of civil service laws. I find no fault with the President's decision to revoke mandatory retirement at age 70 in Mr. Flemming's case. It does, however, point to the system of double standards by which we are governed. If government at its highest level recognizes the value of keeping a senior citizen in a job with such demanding requirements, then how can a branch of that same government say any individual or group of individuals, by virtue of age alone, does not possess an equal degree of proficiency in meeting the demands of another vocation?

America's future population will be made up of a higher percentage of older persons while the younger age group will decline. If persons are forced to retire at a given age, the remaining labor force will have to accept a higher degree of taxation to meet the responsibility of caring for those put out to pasture. I can accept voluntary retirement or retirement through inability to meet the physical or mental requirements of a particular job. However, retirement on demand at a pre-determined age, based on nothing but age, is something I believe to be beyond a constitutional exercise of authority. The Supreme Court, sworn to uphold and enforce the rights of all Americans, in its recent ruling has actually denied a growing segment of our country's population a basic right...the right of independence through continued employment. The Supreme Court did question the wisdom of the Massachusetts state law upon which it ruled, and for that I applaud its foresight. I would like to add that such a law, in my opinion, is not only unwise but unjust.

I urge legislators in all 50 states and in county governments to examine similar laws, and related rules and regulations on their own books and to take corrective action if any are found.

Sincerely, Matthew Tayback, Sc.Dl

Dear Sir: Unfortunately, although the local laundromat is convenient and useful for me — as I am sure it is for others of the town and nearby areas - I find it necessary to comment on an incident to warn all those who patronize the laundromat.

On Wednesday, August 11, at approximately 2:30 p.m. my clothes were distributed in three washers. Upon returning to the laundromat for the purpose of removing the clothes, I found certain items had been taken. In the first washer one blue floral sheet was missing; in the second load everything remained; and in the third washer a yellow floral sheet was gone. I think it is a shame that one can't leave the premises for a few minutes without wondering whether someone is stealing some of the laundry. However, I plan to "sit guard" on my laundry from now on. As it happened, the loss was not too great, but what if the thief decided to take more?

Other citizens may wish to be more watchful in the future.

Dear Editor

This is in rebuttal to the letter concerning the pool in last week's issue of the Chronicle. A group of us feel it is about time we spoke up in praise of the pool, and the enjoyment it has given us and our families.

First of all, we appreciate all the hard work and planning done by the town and especially the State Director on Aging pool committee, to give us such a nice pool at such reasonable rates.

Secondly, we are grateful to the dedicated life guards for the manner in which the pool is run. Also for the swimming lessons they give so that our children may become better swimmers, at a reasonable fee. It may not be common knowledge, but our guards take turns coming in early in the morning on their own time to watch the little children from Seton Center, so that they too might enjoy the pool. Has that fact ever been published?

As for the adult swims, they not only afford the adults 15 minutes enjoyment in the water, they also give the children time to rest and warm-up, otherwise they would never get out of the water from the time they arrive until the time they leave. So, it is actually a safety feature, and the children for the most part accept this without complaint.

Concerning the closing of the pool in bad weather, one of the first things we are taught in water safety, is to get out of the water when a thunderstorm is approaching. I am sure none of the parents would want their child swimming during a thunder and lightning storm. I might add, that many times after a storm has passed, the pool has been re-opened until 8 p.m.

In summary, I am sick and tired of the petty complaints concerning our pool, and feel it is about time some compliments were given. Therefore, I would like to say thank you to the V.F.W. for their generosity, the Pool Committee for their hard work, Debbie Abplanalp and the life guards for their devotion to their duties, the maintenance crew for keeping it clean, and everyone else who has had a role in giving our town this lovely facility. It's been a wonderful summer, and we've enjoyed it thoroughly.

30th Anniversary Celebration

Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence E. Kepner of 270 Mountain View Road, Emmitsburg, Maryland recently were entertained at a surprise Anniversary Celebration given by their children.

Mr. Kepner is formerly from the Fairfield, Pa. area and Mrs. Kepner is the former Hazel Rice from Kyser, W.Va. The Kepners have lived in the Emmitsburg area for many years, at one time owning the Blue Duck Tavern in Emmitsburg.

The guests of honour were recipients of gifts and a money tree. The Kepners

The Fourth Amendment to the Constitution reads: 'The right of the people to be secure in their persons, houses, papers, and effects, against unreasonable searches and seizures, shall not be violated and no warrants shall issue, but upon probable cause, supported by oath or affirmation, and particularly describing the place to be searched, and the person or things to be seized."

To procure this right was one of the overriding aims of the American Revolution. It is a right no despotism can accommodate. It is a right no free society can be without.

But the Founding Fathers could not foresee the electronic. They could not foresee telephones, wiretaps, bugging devices, computers, and data banks. Technology has cluttered tronic prying has outrun the restraints of the Fourth Amendment.

Representatives,

Today, a new test of the Fourth Amendment appears to be pending, brought along in the stealthy evolution of the computer.

The computer has become indispensable in commerce, industry, and government. Increasingly, information is shared from computer to computer, covering vast distances in seconds.

Law enforcement has become automated. Business and commerce hum to computer rhythms. The bank, credit, medical, and business records of almost every one of us are stored away in some electronic memory.

Computers do not discard information unless ordered to. They do not forget it. They amass it, they retain it, they produce it indiscriminately at the touch of a button.

Computers have only begun to demonstrate their potential. Men and computers, in collaboration.

"With the high rate of inflation our country has been suffering, a full year is far too long for Social Security beneficiaries to wait for these catch up adjustments in their pensions," Congressman Sarbanes said. "The effects of inflation on those who must live on fixed incomes will be far less damaging if we make these adjustments as the increases in the cost of living actually happen."

Both proposals contained in the legislation Congressman Sarbanes is co-sponsoring have been endorsed by the National Council of Senior Citizens and are also included in a report issued by the Senate Special Committee On Aging. Good Showing For All Stars

The Mason-Dixon 13 year old All Stars made a commendable showing at the State Tournament in White Plains, Charles County, Md.

Though they did not go to the finals, for a first year team in the all State competition, it was surprising to everyone, except us, that the team won three games and then lost to the semifinals of the winners bracket.

The Mason-Dixon Coach Lynn Wasley figured the boys would do fairly well in the tournament. Boys playing on the team were Tom Deardorff, Rod Myers, Brett Wasley, Larry Martinez, Matt Reaver, John Weikert, Jeff Poulson, Steve Warthen, Joe Petcher, Wayne Strube, and Dave Morningstar, and Josh Bollinger. Mason-Dixon downed Charles American/14-4 and Southern Prince George's 9-2.

Tom Deardorff pitched a three-hitter to beat Prince George's. He fanned five and walked seven.

Mason-Dixon jumped on Prince George's for four runs in the third inning, two in the fourth and three in the fifth.

In the game with Charles American, Mason-Dixon scored 11 runs in the final four innings on just seven hits to break a close game open.

The locals held a 3-1 lead after three innings, but runscoring hits by Tom Deardorff and Matt Reaver highlighted a three-run fourth that put Mason-Dixon in front 6-1.

Five walks and two Charles errors helped Mason-Dixon to five runs in the sixth. In the seventh a two-run single by Reaver led Mason-Dixon to it's final three runs in the seventh.

Brett Wasley turned in a complete game win for Mason-Dixon, scattering seven hits and four runs, only two of which were earned. He walked five and fanned four.

On Tuesday, Mason-Dixon faced the winner of Upper Montgomery County. In the next game, Frederick rallied to down Mason-Dixon 17-1, and

Mason-Dixon lost it's first game Frederick appeared to be coasting along with a 6-0 lead after $2\frac{1}{2}$ innings. But Mason-Dixon, the surprise team of the tournament, scored six times in the bottom of the third to tie the game

Mason-Dixon only had two hits in the inning, but five Frederick walks, two errors and a hit batsman aided the Mason-Dixon cause. But the tie didn't last long as Frederick scored four times in the fourth, once in the fifth. five times in the sixth and once in the seventh.

Tom Deardorff was the only Mason-Dixon player with two hits.

Singles by Deardorff and John Weikert highlighted the Mason-Dixon third inning. Mason-Dixon blew a 9-0 first inning lead and dropped a 16-12 decision to Charles National that eliminated the local team from the state 13 year old Babe Ruth tournament. It was Mason-Dixon's second loss in as many days after winning their first three games in the double elimination tournament

Mason-Dixon looked ahead for an easy win with a nine-run top of the first, but Charles came right back with six in the bottom half of the inning and the game was nip-and-tuck the rest of the way.

Mason-Dixon had just two hits in the top of the first, but took advantage of five walks by the Charles starter and four Charles errors to score.

Matt Reaver came in to finish up for Mason-Dixon, but was tagged for two more runs in the sixth as Charles completed the comeback win.

We are grateful to the players, the coaches, and Mr. Lynn Wasley, the team manager. Well done, boys!

According to Bar-Tal and Saxe, their most important finding was that attractiveness operates differentially for males and females. Thus, "the evaluation of males on most dimensions depended on the attractiveness of their female spouses." They explain the difference in terms of the need to explain the relationship - partners in a marriage must offer each other enough rewards to make each other remain in the relationship. > Annual Colorfest

It is so easy to drift into daydreams on a sultry summer afternoon. What better time to conjure up visions of brilliantly colored mountains and wisps of smoke from a wood fire under a steaming kettle of apple butter. It's Colorfest time again!

The area around Thurmont in northern Frederick County, Maryland goes all out to share the beauty of the Catoctin Mountains with all comers at this fall festival October 8 thru 10.

There is a treat for everyone. A cider press will be turning out a golden stream of tasty cider from nearby orchards. Watch the blacksmith as he fashions useful items from pieces of iron. See the cows milked on a nearby dairy farm. Crafts that vary from toleware to leather goods may be found at several areas. A puppet show will offer entertainment at another booth. And food! How about a chicken fry, homemade bread, candy apples or homemade ice cream!

These are just a few of the treats of Colorfest. For further information contact Catoctin Colorfest, Inc., P.O. Box 33, Thurmont, Md. 21788.

Flu Clinic Training Well Advanced

Program (IVC), gearing up for a mass immunization effort this Fall, has already trained more than 485 clinic personnel from 22 counties and Baltimore City

Dr. Kathleen Acree, State Epidemiologist, said the training covers five specific areas in clinic operation where expertise will keep the expected long lines moving when the State's several hundred planned clinic sites are in operation.

Vaccine handling, jet injector operation techniques, data handling, clinic management and public registrar courses were all taught in intensive training sessions in four areawide Training Conferences conducted in Baltimore and Anne Arundel Counties, Salisbury and Cumberland during the past 5 weeks.

The primary purpose of our training program at the State level, said Dr. Acree, is to supplement and assist counties in training their own personnel who in turn will instruct others in the myriad operational details associated with giving a possible 2 million shots to Marylanders over age 18 before the Winter season.

Department officials plan to certify county jet injector operators who have successfully completed the course of training offered by State and County instructors. Already, IVC

Maryland's Influenza Vaccination instructors and health service specialists have been assigned to various districts of the State and many county health officers have monitored the training of their selected personnel.

Nurses and technicians are being trained in the use of the jet injector, the main medical instrument used in mass immunization programs. Vaccination by jet injector is approximately 10 times as fast as immunization by needle, according to public health officers.

The efficiency of jet injectors are demonstrated many times in recent years, notably with the Salk vaccine program in the 1950's, where one operator did 1,440 shots in one hour. In November of 1975, during an outbreak of diptheria in Atlanta, over 220,000 persons received jet injections during a 30-day period.

In order to assure strict and accurate control of the large amount of flu vaccine to be used in the Influenza Vaccination Campaign, a uniform system of handling, inventory and data control has been developed by the IVC Program Coordinators. A central Advisory Committee composed of 15 subcommittees representing public and private health officials and volunteer agency personnel supplied input into the drafting of all policy guidelines.
