Most Anything At A Glance - By Abigail ..

The only good thing that came out of the past weekend was the water ban in Emmitsburg was lifted.

No, I shouldn't say that's the only because all residents of our area pulled together and helped one another. I saw the joining together of a lot of fragmented groups and together they put a mighty dent in the clean-up operations.

I think by now we all realize that the extensive damage that happened in Emmit Gardens could have been almost completely averted if only the bridge would let the water through. When the water approached the holes through the bridge, it found the holes were too small to let the larger volumn of water through, and so consequently the water took the sides of the creek, pushed over route 97 at the east end of town, and flooded every home in its path.

After the damage of Tropical Storm Agnes in 1972, letters were sent to the State Highway Administration, Congressmen, and Senators, and anyone else who would listen, stating our problem with the bridge.

Engineers were then sent here to see exactly what could be done about it. Well, they looked the bridge over (this was after the flood, of course,) and examined it from all sides. They then decided to drag the creek. Needless to say, that didn't solve the problem. The holes under the bridge are simply too small to accommodate a large volume of water.

Now, we have to once again get the state engineers to come to Emmitsburg, and convince them of our

You know, I've been thinking about it, and I really don't know why residents of Emmit Gardens can't get together and sue the state engineers. I've seen court cases won by private citizens on less important matters.

It isn't as if we didn't have sufficient grounds for a suit. Just look at all the damage people suffered. And whose fault is it? I would say the State Highway Administration; those who didn't allow for more flooding. Well, it's a thought, anyhow.

Even if the residents of Emmit Gardens get Federal and state aid in the way of loans, they'll still have to go into debt for the amount of the loan. It's still money out of their

I only hope we have no rain for a while. If we do, we can once again look for more flooding in the East

Well, I'm always saying what a terrific job our fire department does, but they outdid themselves over the weekend. These men worked for over 24 hours straight. They do this without pay, and without a thought to themselves. Several men, at the risk to their own lives went into raging waters Saturday to rescue people clinging to shrubs and trees. This is dedication.

There's really no adequate way to thank these men. But still....THANK and Thank You, Friends and neighbors...all who helped.

Town Damaged By Flood Waters You name it and it was forecast for Emmitsburg and Frederick County

As it turned out, the only thing missing was the tornado as Emmitsburg and surrounding area was hit with 6.07 inches of rainfall in a 24 hour early Saturday morning.

Residents are now busy digging out from under a disaster that some people are saying is worse than Tropical Storm Agnes which struck in 1972.

The rains, which were heavy a week ago, were compounded by rains on Friday and Saturday, and saturated the already saturated ground and swollen streams. This produced crops and basements; and businesses, felled trees, and caused heavy flood destruction that will result in considerable cost to area residents.

By early Saturday morning, Emmitsburg was virtually isolated by the rising flood waters when both Tom's Creek and Flat Run overflowed their Three people were pulled from the waters of Toms Creek on 806, and a three car collision blocked traffic on Route 15 near route 97. A tractor and trailer was also pulled from Tom's Creek and Route 15.

For the Vigilant Hose Co. the trouble began with a fire Friday evening at Catoctin High School. After completing mopping up operations at the school, they were called to the Emmitsburg Community Center to release water pressure on the roof when spouting and drains were blocked. The Firemen then worked continuously for the next 24 hour

Residents of Emmit Gardens once again suffered severe damage from Flat Run when the water, unable to flow through the bridge charged homes. People, forced to evacuate, waded through waist high waters clutching children and pets and were moved to the safety of the fire hall to await the receding waters. Several homes suffered structural damage.

new elementary school, and many residences besides Emmit Gardens all received flood damage on Saturday.

Heavy loss of farm crops in the area is also feared. Seventeen acres of corn was washed over by Tom's Creek at Four Pts. Bridge near Emmitsburg. Many roads including business route 15 and new route 15, Route 806, Route 97 East at 15 and also at Bridgeport, Harney Road, Four Points Road, Motters Station, Old Frederick Road at Loys Station, Sixes Road, route 77 at Rocky Ridge, Annandale Road, were all closed temporarily due to high water. Several small bridges in the area are also

Residents in Thurmont along Big Hunting Creek were forced to evacuate their homes as the water rose flooding basements and parking

Volunteer firemen from Taneytown were busy Friday and Saturday nights assisting neighboring Detour pump out and evacuate as Big Pipe Creek steadily rose as the Monocacy River pushed waters back into the swollen creek.

Lake Royer at Ft. Ritchie caused some concern when the dam showed signs of weakening. Water was diverted over the spillway and as a precautionary measure, residents of Rouzersville, Pa. were evacuated until the danger passed.

Electrical power and telephone communications were interrupted over the weekend as the general emergency situation existed in all parts of the county.

As the flood waters rose, volunteers coordinated their efforts to help rescue, pump and salvage. Citizen Band radio operators also acted as an extra set of eyes and ears. Boy and girl scouts volunteered their services to help wherever their help was needed

But it was really the Vigilant Hose Co. who were Knights in shining armor this weekend as they rescued families, pets and belongings and moved them to drier areas, and then returned to the tedious job of pumping out basements. Right behind the firemen were the Vigilant Ladies Auxiliary, who were standing by with soup, coffee and other hot goodies. Super Thrift also supplied hot coffee and sandwiches to workers trying to dig out from under mud left behind by the receding waters.

The waters went down as fast as they rose, but area residents still watched the skies for any sign of more rain. With no sign of rain and with the help of all the volunteers, digging out from under has resumed. But there is still much heartbreak and grief around. It will be a long hard pull until everything is once again back to normal. Many people were wiped out and unless Federal and state assistance is forthcoming, it will be impossible to replace what

Comm. Center Suffers Damage

Center incurred an estimated $4,800 in damages during the October 8 rain

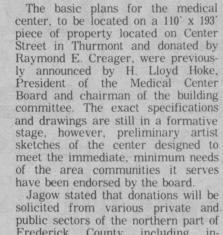

Flooding through the roof recently installed by Roy E. Coldsmith, Inc. of Gettysburg, Pa. was caused by "clogging of the main downspout with tar and gravel which caused the spouting to choke up with water" according to Frederick County Maintenance Supervisor Charles Eyler.

About 500 books in the 8,000 volume library were soaked. "Only by the quick action of night watchman Daniel Kaas who discovered the flooding and called the Vigilant Hose Fire Company was further damage avoided," said Kathleen Warthen. head librarian. The firemen swiftly pumped water from the third floor and punctured the ceilings with pike poles to relieve the pressure from the water caught between ceiling and flooring. They also used the window blinds as makeshift drains to catch water pouring down the walls and divert it through the windows. This bit of ingenuity saved the building from much further damage according to Fire Chief Eugene Myers.

Fire Company salvage covers were used by Mrs. Warthen, an aide and firemen to cover the remaining books and shelves. The alarm was sounded at 10:30 p.m. and the mop up operations on all three floors of the building lasted until 1:30 a.m.

The Health Clinic and Dynamics rooms were flooded during the September 30 rain storm while the roof was being repaired.

Center launched a $150,000 fund raising campaign today in Thurmont. The public sectors of the northern part of Frederick County including industries, organizations, general businesses and professions, and from the residents. A temporary medical center, housing the offices and support space for two physicians, has been open on Center Street in Thurmont since July 1975. The doctors with their staff of two persons list over 4000 patients on their records with more than half of them having addresses other than Thurmont. The new center will be constructed directly opposite the present location.

Since the center is serving patients from a twenty mile radius from Thurmont, Jagow's plans call for a wide (Photo by Mary Johnson) community effort to plan and develop

Officials of the Catoctin Medical the financing for the new medical center. He made it clear that the center does not offer service in competition with other doctors already practicing in the area. "We continue to face a shortage of family medicine practioners and one of the problems is the difficulties that prospective doctors are encountering in their attempt to locate suitably priced facilities," he said. "We need all our present physicians in the area and more, as our representative communities grow," he continued.

Assisting in the fund raising effort, which will run through January 30, 1977, are Ross V. Smith, Sr., Special Advance Gifts; Calvin E. Sayler, Industries: Joseph F. Gorman and James Mackley, General Businesses and Professions, Murray C. Miller and Earle A. Mayner, Organizations; Kenneth Fraley, Alan L. Brauer, Charles Mumma, Mrs. Lucille Reau, William E. Baker - Fragale Nuptials

Miss Deborah Kathleen train terminated in the Baker, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond M. Baker and David Lee Fragale, son of Mr. and Mrs. James Fragale of Clarksburg, West Virginia were united in marriage on September ll, at 2:00 p.m. in St. Joseph's Catholic Church. Rev. Harry Kuhn performed the double ring ceremony. Alfred L. Gilbert, Gettysburg, was the Organist. George Bruchey, Keymar, Md. was the soloist. Mark Warthen, cousin of the bride served as Alter Boy, Gary Baker, brother of the bride served as lector.

U.S. Sen. J. Glenn Beall Jr., indicated that he has been assured by the White House that Ford would sign the declaration.

Last year, the town qualified for flood insurance, according to Commissioner Flax, and a continuously suffer from notice was placed in the floods due to this condition.

Shunpiking To Four Mills

At this point we into Darlbacktracked ington, on to Route 1, and towards Bell Ayr twelve miles, where we turned right on Route 23. In two miles we came to Forest Hills. Someone did a great job of restoring a fine old depot on the Ma & Pa Railroad (long since gone), and it is now an Arts & Crafts shop — in addition to the usual selection of paints, brushes, glitter, foam, kits, Do-It-Yourself backs, and all that cort of and all that sort of thing, they have one small room holding the largest and most varied selections of yarns, I have seen in one place in a coon's age! While the women folk will enjoy that shop, the men can exclaim over a little, narrow-gauge steam locomotive, sitting on a few feet of track, and with a most unusual, and (I think) rare double chain drive underneath the boiler. We leave Forest Hills, and ten miles further on, find Route 138 to the left, which we follow about six miles to a Junction with Monkton Road — this is a tricky corner, and you might miss it - turn left, and about 1000 yards, over a bridge crossing Charles run, come to could wish for. You start the Manor Mill, the fourth out with a "little dab o" and last of our trip. Local tradition has it that a mill existed on or about this site in 1750. The present mill dates 1850, and the lower part is stone, and the upper part brick, so it is possible that the present mill of brick, was erected on the old stone foundations of the first mill. It was originally powered by a wooden wheel, but now has an iron, overshot wheel about thirty feet in diameter (pretty well rusted out). The tailrace from the wheel ran in a tunnel under the corner of the mill, and about an eighth of a mile across the fields. Again quoting local tradition, the tunnel is said to have been a hideout on the Underground Railroad during the Civil War. The mill now houses a very unusual Antique Shop, lower floor, housing for the owner and his family, upper floor. We again backtrack, across the bridge, through Monkton, and on into Hampstead. At this point, you are only about a mile from Dean's Restaurant (to the left on Route 30, at the edge of town), and if you have never been there, you should really try it meals range from $3.50 to $6, which includes one of the most generous and Harford varied Salad Bars one ly proud.

Generous portions, too! Well, after a long day of travelling, and walking around you somehow make it. On leaving, another backtrack on Route 30, north to the edge of town, where you turn left on Route 482. A couple miles from this corner, at the foot of a long hill, there is a little, unmarked road leading off to the right, which, if you still have a mind for it, takes you to Snydersburg, a small General Store serving de-licious HOMEMADE ice cream, the kind that leaves a creamy slickness to the roof of your mouth (open Sundays, too). Just past the store, take a sharp left, which brings you back to 482, and on into Westminster, and head West into the Sunset for Emmitsburg! Fire Case History Chief of the Vigilant Hose Company, Eugene Myers. Last year approximately 12,000 people died in fires across the nation, and the financial losses caused by fires were $486,540,000.00! Obviously, fire prevention is a very serious business

Mr. and Mrs. John Radcliff lived in a beautiful three story home in what would be called an exclusive neighborhood. They were hard working people, each holding down a good paying job and their two small son, ages seven and nine, were left during the daytime with a reliable sitter. One afternoon after school, the children were playing as usual in the big, homey living room; the sitter had lit the fireplace as was her privilege on cold days. Since she had other assignments in the home, the sitter went about her tasks, leaving the children to entertain themselves as was the usual procedure at this hour of the day.

This day the boys were particularly attracted to the fireplace and asked if they could have a marshmallow roast. They were told it was too close to dinner time. They sat there looking into the fireplace as the fire filled the marsh with warmeth fireplace as the fire filled the room with warmth. Soon they were putting sticks into the fire to watch them burn. One held a long stick in the fire and walked about the room with the tip flaming. He found a paper bag and put the burning stick tip inside. When the bag caught fire be became alarmed and in his haste to hide what he was doing, he put the burning bag under a bed. In a matter of minutes the bedroom was engulfed in flame - in a matter of 2 hour the fire department had been there and saved what little they could of the three story structure. It was nearly a total loss!

Asked if his boys had ever had any detailed instructions on how to handle fire and matches, Mr. Radcliff said, "I always told them not to play with matches." Here were two youngsters old enough to have had thorough instructions in handling fire, put-ting out a small fire, how to get out of the home in case of fire, how to call the fire department, and a number of other lessons about fire that every child should be taught by these ages, and all their father had done was tell them not to play with matches! After it was all over the boys told what had happened and said, "we didn't know the bed would

Are you assuming that your children just naturally know how to cope with fire? Because they are 'smart' in school do you assume that, in case of a fire emergency, they will know what to do without instructions from you? Children are born with many inherent abilities, but fire prevention is not one of them! If you haven't taken the time to teach your youngsters the basic essentials of fire prevention,

Letter to the Editor To the editor:

> A citizen of your city, has informed this office of many occurrences of brick sandblasting in and around the Emmitsburg area. I feel it is my duty to set the record straight regarding this practice.

I have had some experience in this area in the Commonwealth of Virginia and the State of Maryland and have seen the results of sandblasting brickwork over a period of years. Preservationists, in general, and the official state preservation agencies
